From the Editors:

NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA was created for one purpose: To record and disseminate a comprehensive portrait of Northeastern Pennsylvania--past and present.

To that end, some issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA will focus on particular political or administrative areas (e.g., villages, townships, cities), natural features (e.g., lakes, rivers, mountains), institutions, arts, industries, or man-made phenomena of Northeastern Pennsylvania. Other issues will focus on not only prominent but also representative citizens, families, and family groups from Northeastern Pennsylvania. That being the case, all of the issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA will constitute, therefore, a comprehensive portrait of Northeastern Pennsylvania.

In preparing this issue--the first--of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA we have made (and in preparing all future issues will make) every effort to present accurate information in a highly readable form. If in reading this issue or any future issue of this chronicle you discover information that is inaccurate, we welcome your telling us of our error. Similarly, if you have suggestions as to persons or topics that should be featured in future issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, or if you know of persons who are important sources of information about Northeastern Pennsylvania (perhaps you are an important source of information about Northeastern Pennsylvania), we would very much like to hear from you.

The present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is a portrait of Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire of Clinton Township (Wayne County), and Carbondale (Lackawanna County), Pennsylvania.

We have chosen to present the lives of Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, not because their lives are so unlike the lives of their contemporaries, rather because Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire are good examples of representative citizens of Northeastern Pennsylvania who came of age in rural America in the 1870s and 1880s.

Theron Orsemus Loomis in the Period 1848-1880

The Loomis family into which Theron Orsemus Loomis was born on February 25, 1848, in Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania, traces its line in America to Joseph Loomis, a woolen-draper from Braintree, Essex, England, who, together with his wife, Mary, and their five sons and three daughters, sailed for America from London on April 11, 1638 on the ship "Susan and Ellen" and arrived in Boston on July 17, 1638, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut in 1639.<sup>1</sup> In the year of his birth, the parents of Theron Loomis, Hiram Pease Loomis (b. 12-09-1819; d. 08-27-1900, see photo on p. 4) and Laura Griswold (b. 07-07-1826, d. 03-?-1924, see photo on p. 4),<sup>2</sup> purchased the 40-acre farm in Clinton Township where their three other children (Oliver Grove, b. 08-16-1857, d. 04-23-1862; Helen Annette, b. 02-21-1860, d. 11-17-1860; Francis Earl, b. 12-17-1861, d. 09-30-1921) were born, and where Theron and his brother, Francis Earl,<sup>3</sup> were raised (see "A" on the map on p. 3). In the mid-1860s--probably in 1864--the Hiram Loomis family moved from Clinton Township to Felton, Delaware, where Hiram Loomis engaged in merchandising for three years.<sup>4</sup> In 1867, the Hiram Loomis family returned to Pennsylvania, passing one and one-half years in Carbondale, before taking up residence in Aldenville, Wayne County, most probably in the Summer or Fall of 1869.

A great deal about Theron Loomis' early years is not known. It is known, however, that during his youth--in Clinton Township and in Felton, Delaware--he received a good education and that he subsequently furthered the education he received at home and in the public schools by attending the Delaware Literary Institute,<sup>5</sup> Franklin, New York, which he attended for one and possibly two years. As a student, Theron Loomis was attracted to and excelled in--among other subjects--mathematics.

In 1869, Theron Loomis was confined to his bed for six months with inflammatory rheumatism. In a journal that Edna Pearl Loomis, our subject's younger daughter, kept in 1967, she wrote, on February 25, the following: "When Father was twenty-one, he had inflammatory rheumatism and [was] bed-ridden for six months. Father was, as were all our people, Baptist. One of the deacons of the Clinton Baptist Church (see "B" on the map on p. 3) came, usually on horse-back, each day during the most critical periods of father's illness and turned father over. No one else seemed so careful and so efficient. The deacon stood at the side of the bed, held the bottom sheet and carefully moved the sheet so that father was turned over. My father always spoke of this man with deep respect, almost reverence. That bout of sickness resulted in father's having considerable rheumatism always."

When Theron Loomis was 22, he established a home of his own. During the Fall and Winter of 1870-1871--while living in his parents' house in Aldenville, and helping out in the Loomis store in that place--Theron Loomis repaired and fitted out a house on the Loomis property<sup>6</sup> (see photos of Theron Loomis' house on p. 2; see "C" on map on p. 3) in Clinton Township. In his diary for 1871, Theron Loomis noted that he made new shingles for and repaired the roof of that house, whitewashed its interior, installed a new floor in the kitchen, put in a new chimney and a new set of steps at the entrance, and, with the help of W. Rude, plastered the sitting room. On April 19, 1871, the house was declared ready, and our subject moved in. On the following day, his father's brother, Erastus W. Loomis,<sup>7</sup> (see photo on p. 4), moved in with his nephew and addressed himself to the in-house chores, allowing Theron Loomis to direct his full energies to the running of the farm. From the diary that Theron Loomis kept in 1871, we know that he planted, among others, the following crops: potatoes, oats, corn, wheat, buckwheat, and onions. From that same diary we know that he maintained an extensive apple orchard,<sup>8</sup> and that he had, in addition, a herd of cattle, a flock of chickens, several horses, and some pigs.

In running the farm, Theron Loomis was helped, particularly in the Spring and Fall of the year, by family, friends, and neighbors. In his diary for 1871, our subject acknowledges having been helped in many ways and on numerous occasions by his father, mother, and brother. In addition, in that same year, for example, Mr. Lee, Henry Lee, Allie Lee, and John Wright helped Theron Loomis reap his wheat, Mr. Rude and the Lees helped him not only with the haying but also with the harvesting of his oats. In return, Theron Loomis, in 1871—as we learn from his diary for that year—helped the Tingleys and the Snedekers cultivate their corn, the Howards dig their potatoes, Mr. Rude take in his hay, Nathan Griswold (our subject's mother's brother—see photo on p. 4) harrow in his oats, Perry Saunders peel bark, Mr. Lee burn fallow, and participated in at least two barn raisings—one at the Peck farm and one at the Saunders farm.

When his day's labors were accomplished, Theron Loomis frequently enjoyed the company not only of his parents and many relatives in Clinton Township—his visits to the homes of his Uncles Nathan and Homer Griswold were frequent—but also of his many friends, among whom were Will Norton, Will Peck, Viola Hopkins, Jasper Peck, Perry Saunders, Lizzie Curtis, Ellen Curtis, Frank Curtis. In a journal that Edna Pearl Loomis kept in 1967, she wrote, on February 25, the following: "As a young man, my father was popular with the young people, especially the young ladies. He had a team of beautifully matched gray carriage horses and so this had the effect on the aspiring young ladies to be seen gliding over the snow in a sleigh or riding along a shady lane in Summer." Together with family, friends, and neighbors, our subject attended: "Donations" and functions sponsored by the Ladies Aid Society of Clinton Baptist Church, group "sings" at the Ledyard's and at his Uncle Henry's, "apple cuts" (work/social gatherings during which apples are prepared for the cider presses) at the farm of Nathan Griswold and at the Wheeler farm. Other recreations and amusements included: croquet, blackberrying, huckleberrying, picking chestnuts and grapes, trout fishing (In his diary for 1871, Theron Loomis noted, on May 3: "Went a trouting. Caught 36."), and dominoes. From his earliest years, Theron Loomis was fond of music. He played both the horn and the accordion in the Moosic Band<sup>9</sup> from Farno, Clinton Township—which met for rehearsals in an upper unfinished floor of the house that Hiram Loomis built in 1876 on his 400-acre farm in Clinton Township<sup>10</sup> (see photo on p. 2; see "D" on the map on p. 3).

Sundays were devoted primarily to rest and to religious services. Theron Loomis attended church in the morning, frequently staying to Sunday School, and also attended church in the evening. He attended the Clinton Baptist Church.

Just as Theron Loomis helped, and was helped, by family, friends, and neighbors in many ways and on many occasions throughout the year, so too his parents, Hiram Pease Loomis and Laura Griswold, helped, and were helped, by family, friends, and neighbors in many ways and on many occasions throughout the year. One of the young women who lent a hand to Laura Griswold—probably at harvesting time when large quantities of fruits and vegetables had to be processed rapidly—was Mary Emma Squire, a young woman whose family lived about two miles from the Loomis farm and who, in 1880, became the wife of Theron Loomis.

Mary Emma Squire in the Period 1854-1880

The Squire family into which Mary Emma Squire was born traces its line in America directly to George Squire, who was born in 1618 and who, by 1640, had removed to Concord, Massachusetts.<sup>11</sup> The first of his descendants to settle in Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania, was Horace Gilbert Squire (the paternal grandfather of our subject, see photo on p. 4), who, during the first week of June, 1812, came to Clinton Township from Winsted Village, Litchfield County, Connecticut, and staked his claim "under the mountain" (as the land on the eastern slope of the Moosic Mountains was and is called) one-half mile west of the Clinton Baptist Church (see "E" on the map on p. 3, property now owned by members of the Trusky family). Upon that property Horace Gilbert Squire built a house, where he was joined by his wife, Beulah Grinnell (a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins of The Mayflower),<sup>12</sup> and their son, Hilon DeRoy, and where five additional children were born to Horace and Beulah Squire.<sup>13</sup> The second youngest of those children, Alvin R. Squire (see photo on p. 4), the father of our subject, inherited the family farm and married Amy Susan Woodmansee.<sup>14</sup>

Alvin R. Squire and Amy Susan Woodmansee were the parents of eight children: Alicia Malvina (b. 04-18-1849, d. 08-30-1936, m. Porter Kennedy), Adeline L. (b. 04-06-1850, d. 01-04-1928, m. George Munson), Hilon DeRoy (b. 12-02-1852, d. 1912, m. Alma Russell), Mary Emma, Estella Leantine (b. 02-24-1856, d. 10-?-1909, m. Oscar Bagley), Moses Underwood (b. 09-09-1859, d. 04-20-1942, m. Phoebe A. Frisbee), Willis Alvin (b. 08-?-1863, d. 02-13-1865), Harriet Amanda (b. 07-27-1866, d. 09-16-1951, m., first, Paul Krauser, second, Ren Chestnut). The fourth born of those children, our subject, was born on her father's birthday, September 30, in 1854.

From her earliest years, Mary Emma Squire was fond of nature—especially flowers, birds, cats, dogs, and horses. At the same time, she loved to read, and furthered the education that she received at home by attending Pleasant Mount Academy, Pleasant Mount, Pennsylvania. When our subject was ten, her father was mustered into service in the Civil War,<sup>15</sup> leaving his wife to run the family farm and to look after their children. In 1955, Edna Pearl Loomis, the younger daughter of Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis, described her maternal grandmother, Amy Susan (Woodmansee) Squire, as follows: "She had very black eyes, dark brown hair, very fair complexion, and was usually pale. She was tall and slender, refined and most attractive. She was a great calculator, possessed business ability and was a splendid manager. She was devout, a Quaker, and was very serious-minded, although she had a fine sense of humor. She had a brilliant mind." Amy Susan (Woodmansee) Squire's capability to look after herself and her children during her husband's service in the Civil War is clearly revealed by an incident—which Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis remembered, and recounted in later years to Edna L. (Munson) Wiltz (granddaughter of her sister, Adeline; see photo of Adeline Squire on p. 4, see photo of Edna L. (Munson) Wiltz on p. 9)—that took place one evening as she and her children were in the barn. Edna L. (Munson) Wiltz reported that incident to the editors on February 25, 1978: "When Alvin R. Squire was in the Civil War, Amy Susan Woodmansee was running the farm and looking after the children. Food was scarce. One night when they were in the barn doing the chores, a deer came down from the mountain and went into the barn. Amy Susan Woodmansee hollered to close the barn door. They had no guns or anything and so Amy Susan Woodmansee went into the house and got a big butcher knife and she jumped on the deer's back and cut its throat, and the family had meat. Mary Emma Loomis told me that story many a time." Amy Susan (Woodmansee) Squire died 12-12-1881. Following her death, Alvin R. Squire married Orinda A. Peet<sup>16</sup> (see photo on p. 6).

At age 16, Mary Emma Squire became a member of the Clinton Baptist Church—which her father had helped build. In later years she became a member of the Berean Baptist Church in Carbondale, Pennsylvania.

Very much in accordance with the spirit of the times, Mary Emma Squire had a keen sense of family and community, generously giving of her time and effort to help family, friends, and neighbors in many ways and on many occasions throughout the year. In so doing, she became acquainted with and ultimately married Theron Orsemus Loomis, the older son of Hiram and Laura (Griswold) Loomis.

Theron and Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis in the Period 1880-1911

Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire were married on March 24, 1880, in the Squire home in Clinton Township by the Reverend James Remsen, pastor of the Clinton Baptist Church. According to Mary Emma Loomis' diary entry for the twenty-fourth of March, 1930, the fiftieth anniversary of her marriage, it was colder on her wedding day than it had been on March 24th in the 40-year period prior to her wedding day. In that same diary entry, Mary Emma Loomis reports that her brother, Hilton, nearly froze his hands and feet as he rode on horseback from Waymart, Pennsylvania, to the Squire home for his sister's wedding.

Following their marriage, Theron and Mary Emma Loomis were given a farm by Hiram and Laura Loomis. Edna Pearl Loomis described that farm in a journal entry that she made on February 25, 1967: "Grandfather Loomis, Hiram Pease, owned in his own right, a forty-acre farm which adjoined his and Grandmother's four-hundred-acre farm. This forty-acre farm had a homestead on it, built in the early decades of the nineteenth century. [The house on this homestead is the one that Theron Loomis repaired and fitted out in 1870-1871; see "C" on the map on p. 3.] It had a huge chimney in the center of its two-story structure and a fireplace on its four sides in each story--thus, each room had a fireplace. No metal nails were used in the building of this dwelling but wooden pegs. As a little girl I spent many summer days in this old vacant house. The stairs were very steep almost as steep as a ladder would be. There was always a sweet smell about the place as straw had once covered the vacant floors and was still there but pretty well reduced to small scattered clumps. Surrounding the house were many small shrubs, mostly lilacs. In the yard was a couple of slippery elms. The house surmounted a knoll or a broad low hill and [was] beautifully situated for near and distant views of the rolling hills and the lovely farms."

As he had done for the nine years preceding his marriage, Theron Loomis continued to farm following his marriage. In addition, he formed a partnership in the lumbering business with his brother, Francis Earl Loomis (see photo on p. 6), and together they erected a sawmill on the Loomis farm (see "F" on the map on p. 3) to further their interest.<sup>17</sup>

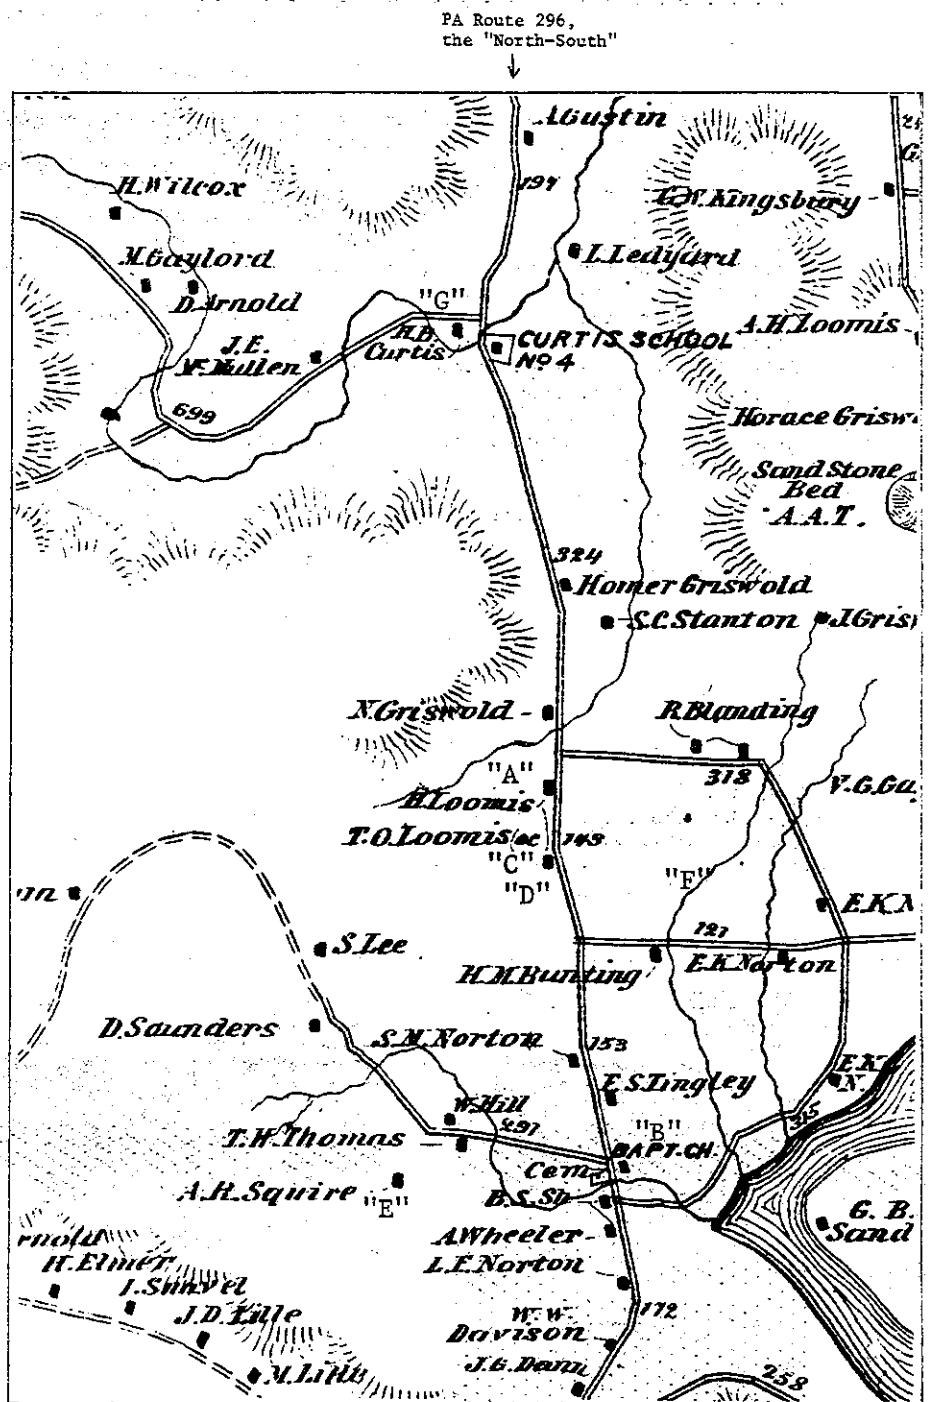

On August 17, 1881, the first of the two children born to Theron and Mary Emma Loomis, Ora Esmarilda, was born; on December 29, 1885, their second child, Edna Pearl, was born (see photo on p. 5).

The Theron Loomis family resided in Clinton Township until 1886, at which time Theron Loomis was forced to discontinue farming--due to an asthmatic condition--and seek employment in a place where pollen dust in the atmosphere was less dominant than in Clinton Township. In that year, the Theron Loomis family moved to 161 Lincoln Avenue in Carbondale, Pennsylvania (see photo on p. 3), where Theron Loomis secured a position, first with the New York, Ontario and Western Railway Company (as a car inspector and also as a member of a wrecking crew), and later with The Hendrick Manufacturing Company (in the shipping department).

In the meantime, Mary Emma Loomis directed herself to the careful rearing of her two daughters, Ora and Edna, both of whom chose to become professional women--the former successfully completing medical training in the Emergency Hospital, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, and graduating a trained nurse in 1902, the latter becoming a teacher in the Fall of 1904, the year in which she was graduated from Carbondale High School.

In 1967, Edna Pearl Loomis described life in the Loomis household when she was a child as follows: "We had a comfortable house and home, about the average one in our upper middle class group. Father and Mother never made material things the main purpose of their living. They were frugal and tried to save something from each pay envelope. They concentrated on the more valuable aspects of life—on virtue, honesty, reverence, industry, cleanliness of mind and spirit and body. The mind, I believe, they were greatly concerned about. They made our evenings such that we studied our homework. Nothing seldom interrupted these activities. Father always, when we asked him, would put down his reading and come to the kitchen table where we studied and look over our problems and show us where we were wrong. I never recall one instance when my father was away from home for an evening without Mother being with him. I never recall their spending any money for themselves alone. I never recall Father having but one suit of clothes—that a very becoming broadcloth. It was his Sunday suit."

William Anderson Russell (b. 09-03-1871, d. 02-05-1958), the youngest of those children, married, on 04-10-1907, Ora Esmarilda Loomis (b. 08-17-1881, d. 11-18-1954), the older daughter of Theron and Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis. The present occupants of The Russell Homestead are Walter and Helen (Russell) Powell and family.

In 1967, Edna Pearl Loomis described, in addition, a musical aspect of life in the Loomis household and in Carbondale when she and her sister were children, as follows: "In those days during the summer months, the Carbondale Mozart Band gave open air concerts on some Saturday evenings. Seldom did our family miss these concerts. We walked to the city, as did most of the city's music lovers. It was always an event. We joined many people of our neighborhood all going to the concert. My sister, Ora, about this time in our history, was quite a belle, very beautiful brunette with a slight graceful figure. She left us usually, joining friends and having a gay evening. Most of the young people instead of standing in one place, would stroll thru the crowds; for them, it was a social affair. Father was quite lame and each step was painful, but he felt greatly rewarded by his walking down the hill and back whenever the band struck up their glorious Sousa marches."

Sundays for the members of the Theron Loomis family were described by Edna Pearl Loomis in a journal in 1964. In that journal, on November 15, she wrote: "Church, Sunday School, Young People's meetings, were each a must for us. Father and I usually attended Church in the A.M., Ora occasionally but with some girl friend, and Ora often played for Sunday School and other services. Mother seldom attended church. As I look back through the years, she remained at home chiefly because she felt her clothes were outdated. The money was needed for other things she thought more necessary. In the afternoon, Ora played hymns on the organ and later on, on the Crown piano. Father always sang with Ora and me the hymns as he sat by the piano. Mother rocked and sang as she usually knew the words. We spent a couple or more hours this way. In the evening, Father and Mother sat by the stove, their feet on the rests, usually thru twilight and into the evening without a light and sang and sang. Father sang tenor, Mother soprano, as did Ora and I. Ora and I attended Young People's Services and evening Church. This was quite regularly our pattern for Sunday. Ora and I got books from the Sunday School library and read them or Sunday School papers—we spent the day restfully and more or less spiritually, storing up physical, mental and spiritual resources for the week. Our Sundays were the type similar to our friends and associates—all Protestant families of our above middle class spent their Sundays thus. Later when Ora and I were in our teens, we spent Sunday afternoons with our close friends. A group of us would congregate early in the afternoon and go on long hikes but always home in time for evening services. Boys and girls all enjoyed these pleasant hikes. Socially our Sundays gave us friendships of lasting joy and worth."

An incident that took place as Theron Loomis walked, one Sunday, to the home of his daughter, Ora, in Fell Township, Lackawanna County—on April 10, 1907, Ora Esmarilda Loomis was married to William Anderson Russell of Fell Township—is indicative not only of the character of Theron and Mary Emma Loomis, but also of the ethical milieu in which their children were reared. That incident was described by Edna Pearl Loomis in a journal entry (February 25) in 1967: "Father quite often would on Sunday walk to Ora's home in the country to see her and walk home again late in the afternoon. One time while walking there, he found an envelope with a beautiful ring in it. The envelope had the name of Burr, the jeweler, on it. The next day Father returned the ring to Burr telling him he had found it. The ring belonged to Mrs. Simpson and had been in the jeweler's for inspection. Mrs. Simpson sent Father a reward, a ten-dollar bill. To keep the ring never entered his or Mother's minds. They worried over the concern of the one who had lost it."

Beginning around 1909, Theron Loomis began having difficulties with his heart, due probably to his long strife with both rheumatism and asthma. After several months of confinement in his bed, he died on November 26, 1911. He was interred, first in Brookside Cemetery, Childs, Pennsylvania, and later—when Brookside Cemetery started to cave in, a consequence, in all probability, of its proximity to coal mines—in Clinton Baptist Church Cemetery, Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania. In 1955, Edna Pearl Loomis wrote the following description of her father: "Theron Loomis was home loving and very fond of his family. He had a fine sense of humor, was witty, had a strong will power, not easily persuaded, possessed intense feelings, whether of sympathy, affection or dislike. He had a very tender heart; tears came easily to his eyes whenever he saw a bit of cruelty or a bit of childish effort, as for example on Children's Day when little folks 'spoke their pieces.' He was easily 'choked-up' with sympathy and love. He was six feet in height and weighed two hundred and forty pounds, and was finely proportioned. He had an abundance of dark hair and wore sideburns. He left Ora and me a great legacy, not in money or material things, but a bringing up to know what is good and what is right and what is of good report. We knew the blessings of love and care, of fine companionship and example. We had a happy home life, indeed, a shelter in the time of storm."

On August 15, 1881, Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis wrote the following in the autograph book of her sister, Estella Squire:

*Stella —
"Remember this: whenever you're blowing
A bubble of bliss,
If you blow it too big, not content
With its size —
Puff! it is gone, and there's Soap in your eyes!" Emma Loomis

Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis in the Period 1911-1948

Mary Emma Loomis survived her husband by 37 years. During the first 16 of those years, she continued to live in Carbondale at 161 Lincoln Avenue. Her younger daughter, Edna, taught in the borough schools of Jermy, Pennsylvania and in Carbondale High School during this period, and lived at home with her mother.<sup>18</sup> During the winter, Laura (Griswold) Loomis,<sup>19</sup> the mother of Theron Loomis, frequently stayed at 161 Lincoln Avenue with Mary Emma Loomis and her daughter.

Mary Emma Loomis divided her time between reading—a lifelong passion—and the performance of her household duties: preparing meals, washing and ironing, caring for the house itself, inside and out. She enjoyed sewing, and frequently made her own dresses. During the summer months she was busy canning and pickling and preserving "the good things from the farm"—to use her own words—that were brought to her by her daughter, Ora, and Ora's husband, William Anderson Russell. Mary Emma Loomis was very proud, in particular, of her strawberry jam and her peach preserves.

Mary (Emma) Squire Loomis

In 1927, Edna Pearl Loomis accepted a teaching position in Central High School, Scranton, Pennsylvania, and together with her mother, moved there and established a home, first on Quincy Avenue (where they rented) and subsequently at 1039 Clay Avenue (in a duplex bought by Edna Loomis). Mary Emma Loomis and Edna Loomis lived in Scranton from 1927-1938. During that period, Mary Emma Loomis maintained close contacts with family and friends in Carbondale and Clinton Township. In the Spring and Summer she enjoyed visiting her daughter, Ora, and Ora's family in Fell Township. There she would gather dandelions and milkweeds and be the recipient of fresh eggs and vegetables from her son-in-law's gardens. In the Fall she regularly attended the Pioneer Day celebrations in Clinton Township. In 1931 (on Nov. 8-10), she attended the centennial celebration of the Clinton Baptist Church, Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania. Fall was a season that Mary Emma Loomis enjoyed very much. She was very fond of the autumn foliage—particularly in Wayne County—and tried to spend a week or two in Wayne County, usually with Orville and Bessie (Terwilliger) Munson and family<sup>20</sup> (see photo of Orville and Bessie Munson and their daughter, Edna, on p. 9) in Waymart, Pennsylvania, every year around her birthday. During that week or two, she would visit other friends in Waymart, including Minnie Hutchins and her twin boys, and Allie Cramer.

It was well known that Mary Emma Loomis enjoyed being taken for automobile drives, especially in Wayne County, and on more than one occasion she was taken there for afternoon drives by her daughter, Ora, and her granddaughters, Louise and Helen Russell. Once there, she would pick bouquets of trailing arbutus flowers and gather wintergreen berries. Stanley Rettew, as well, would frequently take Mary Emma Loomis for automobile drives in Wayne County. In a diary that Mary Emma Loomis kept in 1931, she records the fact that she and her daughter, Edna, were given great pleasure by an automobile drive that they were taken on on a summer's day around Lake Scranton by William and Ora Russell.

When family and friends were not available to provide transportation, Mary Emma Loomis would take public transportation to visit family and friends. She would take the streetcar to Carbondale to visit Mrs. Clarence Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Randall, Mr. Lesh, Miss Nettie Russell, Miss Jennie Russell, Mrs. E. M. Peck, among others, certainly. She would similarly take the streetcar to Peckville to visit with the Irving Tingley family. She was a great hiker as well—she and her daughter, Edna, would frequently take the streetcar to the mountain end of Washburn Street and, from there, hike to the West Mountain Hospital and back.

While living in Scranton, Mary Emma Loomis was visited by—in addition to her immediate family, who visited her often—the following people, among others: Miss Nettie Russell and Miss Jennie Russell of Carbondale, Mrs. Emma Hall from Glenburn, Will Woodmansee, Mr. Lesh from Carbondale, Mrs. Hattie Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bell, Mrs. Humphrey and her daughter, Grace, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Munson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Randall, Mrs. Milo Gardner and her daughters, Edith and Gertrude, Mrs. Alice Hileman, Mr. and Mrs. John Peck, Irving Tingley and family, Mrs. Clarence Barret, Sue McMinn. In 1931, Horace Tingley of Spokane, Washington, stopped in Scranton to visit Mary Emma Loomis on his way to the Griswold Family Reunion<sup>21</sup> in Clinton Township. He had left Clinton Township in 1879, and he and Mary Emma Loomis has not seen each other in 50 years and, as Mary Emma Loomis recorded in her diary for 1931, they enjoyed themselves a great deal as they recalled their early days in Clinton Township.

Mary Emma Loomis maintained a vegetable garden and a flower garden in Scranton. She was very proud of her flowers: blue iris, red roses, daffodils, jonquils, delphinium (the bulbs were given to her by Stanley Rettew), gladiolas, marigolds, red poppies, among other flowers.

During this period, Mary Emma Loomis took charge of the renting and upkeep of 161 Lincoln Avenue in Carbondale, having the house painted and papered and having the upstairs converted into an apartment. In addition, she assisted her daughter, Edna, in the rental and upkeep of the apartment on the second floor of 1039 Clay Avenue (she and Edna lived on the ground floor).

The Russell Homestead

Every year she would make fruit cakes and every year she would put up large quantities of jams, jellies, canned fruits, and vegetables—frequently upon returning home, Mary Emma Loomis and her daughter, Edna, would find the vestibule of their house filled with fruits and vegetables that had been left for them while they were out by William and Ora Russell and family.

On July 20, 1938, Edna Pearl Loomis was married to LeRoy Besley Loomis in Ocean Park, Maine, and in that year, she moved to Detroit, Michigan, where her husband was employed in the Termosted Division of General Motors Corporation as a safety director. Mary Emma Loomis remained in Scranton until the following year, when she went to live with her daughter, Ora, and Ora's family at The Russell Homestead (see photo on p. 8) in Fell Township, Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania.

During the final eight years of her life, Mary Emma Loomis was active and alert—she frequently took the bus to Carbondale and Scranton alone—and helpful with the daily activities at The Russell Homestead in Fell Township. She celebrated her ninetieth birthday in Waymart, Pennsylvania, with the Orville Munson family. On the day following her birthday in that year, she went, with Orville and Bessie (Terwilliger) Munson, John and Edna (Munson) Wiltz, Alberta (Kennedy) McClelland, Harry Kennedy, and Verla Kennedy to visit her birthplace in Clinton Township, where pictures were taken (see photo on p. 9) as members of the birthday party walked about the farm where Mary Emma Loomis was born, which at that time was owned by John and Mary Trusky. Later in the day, the group repaired to the Orville Munson home, where birthday cake and refreshments were enjoyed by all.

On January 20, 1948, following a lingering illness, Mary Emma Loomis, in her ninety-third year, died. In 1955, Edna Pearl Loomis wrote the following about her mother: "Mary Emma Loomis was very fond of her home and of family life. She loved nature, especially flowers, birds, cats, dogs, horses. She was very fond of reading and letter writing. Her penmanship was especially fine. She was five feet four inches in height, and about one hundred pounds in weight. She had snappy black eyes, a dimpled chin, fine features, and for many years, snowy-white hair. She was a very independent thinker, was thrifty, practical, witty, and inclined to worry." Mary Emma Loomis is interred in the Clinton Baptist Church Cemetery, Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania.

The poem, At The End of My Life, was written by Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis. A facsimile of that poem, as it appears in her diary for 1930-1931, is given below.

—At The End Of My Life—

To my grave when Spring shall come
Go you not with tearful eyes,
Standing solemn faced and glum Underneath the smiling skies
All that lies the ground below
Will be worn-out garb & worse,
Only that and nothing more —
If in summer time you'd bring Blossoms to that quiet spot
Do not go with sorrowing
Go as to a garden flat!
I smile and in its beauty share
Think of me as gone before
Nothing of me will be there
But the shabby garb & worse.
And in Autumn when the leaves
Red and golden gently fall,
Do not go as one who grieves,
I shall not be there at all.

Though a little while I've gone
Leaving you to fare alone
All the earth will lie upon
Will be raiment I've outgrown.
Emma Loomis

The poem, Heaven, was written by Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis. A facsimile of that poem, as it appears in her diary for 1930-1931, is given below.

- Heaven. - 23

How would Heaven seem to you,
If in all that region blue,
No bird should flit on feathered wing,
No cock should crow, nor cricket sing?

How would Heaven seem to you,
If horse or dog you never knew?
If no herd grazed on distant hill,
If no cat purred on window sill?

How would Heaven seem to you,
Where dwell in joy the good and true,
Without the little shy twilight life
With which our fields and woods are rife?

"How would Heaven seem to me"?
You ask me this, I'll answer free,
If there is none but human race,
Heaven would be a lonesome place.
E.E.L.

Homer Greene's poem, What My Lover Said, was inspired by Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis' cousin, Fanny Cummings (a daughter of MESL's father's sister, Harriet Squire, and Aaron Cummings). A copy of that poem and a note on its "inception" were included by Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis in her diary for 1930-1931. A facsimile of that poem and that note are given below.

This poem got its inception in the orchard path on my father's farm in the year 1878. The lady was Cousin Fanny Cummings of Honesdale who died in 1881.

What My Lover Said - 24

By the merest chance in the twilight gloom
In the orchard path he met me
In the tall wet grass with its faint perfume,
And I tried to pass but he made no room.
Oh! I tried - but he would not let me,
So I stood and blushed till the grass grew red
With my face bent down above it;
While he took my hand as he whispering said -
How she clover lifted each pink sweet head
To listen to all that my lover said!
Oh, she clover in bloom - how I love it!
Homer Greene

Notes on the Text

1 As Elias Loomis' work, The Descendants of Joseph Loomis, who came from Braintree, England, in the year 1638, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut, in 1639 (New Haven: Tuttle, Morehouse and Taylor, 221 State Street, 1875, Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged), makes abundantly clear, nearly all of those persons in America in 1875 named Loomis (and therefore their descendants today) are descended from Joseph Loomis (son of John and Agnes Loomis, b. before 1590 in Braintree, d. 11-25-1658 in Windsor, CT) and Mary White (daughter of Robert and Bridget (Allgar) White of Messing, Essex, England, bapt. on 08-24-1590, d. 08-23-1652 in Windsor, CT, m. on 06-30-1614 in Messing, Essex, England, to Joseph Loomis).

The line of descent from Joseph and Mary Loomis to Theron Orsemus Loomis is as follows: Joseph Loomis (m. Mary White), Nathaniel Loomis (b. about 1626 in Essex, England, d. 08-09-1688 in Windsor, CT, was a member of the Windsor Troop of Horse in King Philip's War, m. Elizabeth Moore, who was born in Windsor, CT, in 1638 and who died in 1728, on 11-24-1653), David Loomis (b. 01-11-1667/8 in Windsor, CT, d. 01-09-1751/2 in Windsor, CT, m. Lydia Marsh Lyman, who was born 10-09-1667, on 12-08-1692), Aaron Loomis (b. 09-05-1696 in Windsor, CT, d. in Torrington in 1773, m. Deborah Eggleston, who died 04-15-1783, on 02-05-1718/9), Ephraim Loomis (b. 04-01-1731 in Torrington, d. 04-04-1812 in Torrington, served as a private in the Torrington, CT Regiment during the Revolutionary War, married, first, Ruth Hafford or Hosford, who died 05-01-1764, and, second, Jane Campbell), Ephraim Loomis, Jr. (b. 07-12-1758, d. 1824, served in the Torrington, CT Regiment during the Revolutionary War with his father, m. Jane Fyler, who was born 12-03-1753 and who died 03-30-1789, on 10-30-1784), Reuben Loomis (b. 10-09-1785 in Torrington, d. 11-10-1849 in Pleasant Mount, PA., m. Sarah Westland, who was born 11-25-1789 and who died 08-04-1866 in Pleasant Mount, PA), Hiram Pease Loomis (b. 12-09-1819 in Pleasant Mount, PA, d. 08-27-1900 in Clinton Twp., PA, m. Laura Griswold, who was born 07-07-1826 in Clinton Twp., PA, and who died 03-?-1924 in Clinton Twp., PA, on 05-20-1846), Theron Orsemus Loomis (b. 02-25-1848 in Clinton Twp., d. 11-26-1911 in Carbondale, PA, m. Mary Emma Squire, who was born 09-30-1854 in Clinton Twp., and who died 01-20-1948 in Fell Twp., Lackawanna County, PA, on 03-24-1880.)

The first of Theron O. Loomis' ancestors to settle in Wayne County was Reuben Loomis, who, on January 18, 1817, loaded all of his household goods, his wife, and their three sons into a large covered wagon, and with two yoke of oxen as motive power, started from Windsor, CT, for Pleasant Mount, PA, one hundred and fifty miles away. In the night of January 27th, the Reuben Loomis family arrived in Pleasant Mount, where they had a distant relative whom they called Uncle Demens (Ichabod Deming, the husband of Reuben Loomis' father's youngest sister, Rebecca Loomis) and with whom they stayed immediately upon their arrival in that place. During that winter, the Reuben Loomis family lived with Daniel Roberts, a widower who was glad to have Mrs. Loomis look after his children. On June 1, 1817, the Reuben Loomis family moved into the house that Reuben Loomis had, in the meantime, built on the 57 acres of wild land that he had purchased in Pleasant Mount adjoining Uncle Demens' farm. For additional information about Reuben Loomis and family, see the biographical sketch of the oldest son of Reuben Loomis and Sarah Westland, Erastus W. Loomis, that is given in History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania by Alfred Matthews (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886) on pp. 588-590.

2 Theron O. Loomis' mother, Laura Griswold, is a descendant of those Griswolds who were established at Solihull, Warwickshire, England, prior to 1400; specifically, she is a descendant of the John Griswold who came from Kenilworth to Solihull about the middle of the 14th century, ultimately acquiring Langdon Hall. The first of the descendants of John Griswold to emigrate to America is Michael Griswold, who was a mason by trade and a yeoman by rank and who owned lands in Wethersfield, CT, as early as 1640. In that place he served as an assessor, constable, and appraiser of land and was the only freeman by the name of Griswold in Wethersfield in 1659. His wife's name was Ann.

Laura Griswold traces her line directly to Michael and Ann Griswold, as follows: Michael Griswold (m. Ann ?), Thomas Griswold (b. 10-22-1646 in Wethersfield, CT, d. 1672, m. Mary Howard, who was born in 1647 and who died 10-29-1718), Samuel Griswold (b. 12-15-1684 in Wethersfield, CT, m. Mary Francis, who was born 05-26-1689, on 03-11-1708), John Griswold (b. 06-23-1721, m. ?), John Griswold (b. 10-15-1758 in Norwich, MA, d. 10-16-1843 in Clinton Twp., Wayne County, PA, served as a private in Captain Amos Rathburn's Co. in Major Caleb Hyde's detachment of Militia and in Captain Amos Rathburn's Co. in Col. John Brown's detachment of militia during the Revolutionary War, m. Elizabeth Crittenden, who was born in 1758 and who died in 1851, on 10-?-1790), Francis J. Griswold (b. 11-14-1793 in Norwich, MA, d. 09-08-1869 in Clinton Twp., m. Jane Loomis, who was born 03-11-1792 in Torrington and who died 03-19-1881 in Clinton Twp., Wayne County, PA), Laura Griswold (b. 07-07-1826 in Clinton Twp., d. 03-?-1924 in Clinton Twp., m. Hiram Pease Loomis, who was born 12-09-1819 in Pleasant Mount, PA, and who died 08-27-1900 in Clinton Twp., on 05-20-1846).

The first of Laura Griswold's ancestors to settle in Clinton Twp. was John Griswold (1758-1843), who, in the Fall of 1813, together with some of his family, came to Clinton Twp. from Torrey Lake, and put up a log cabin on land adjoining that of Rufus Grinnell. In January 1814, John Griswold moved his family down to Clinton Twp. on ox-sled. See History of Wayne County by Phineas G. Goodrich (Honesdale, PA: Haines & Beardsley, 1880), p. 325.

Laura Griswold is one of the six children of Francis and Jane (Loomis) Griswold, namely: Louis (b. 01-31-1822, d. 01-06-1832), Alvin (b. 04-22-1824, d. 09-?-1849), Laura (b. 07-07-1826, d. 03-?-1924, m. Hiram P. Loomis, who was born 12-09-1819 and who died 08-27-1900, on 05-20-1846), Louisa (b. 11-02-1828, d. 05-08-1912, m. Henry Banning Curtis, who was born 01-01-1825 and who died 02-12-1907, on 04-10-1851), Nathan (b. 03-31-1832, d. 1912, m. Helen Grinnell, who was born in 1826 and who died in 1903), Homer (b. 03-14-1835, d. 05-28-1974, m. ?).

3 Francis Earl Loomis married, on 02-26-1891, Mary E. Paynter, who was born 01-25-1872 and who died 02-26-1935. Their eight children are as follows: Flora L. (b. 04-17-1892, d. 01-06-1933, m. Clarence Brown), Herbert C. (b. 03-30-1894, d. 07-06-1969, m. Elizabeth Reiner), Nettie E. (b. 06-24-1895, d. 04-01-1958, m. Dr. Edgar Graham), Floyd D. (b. 09-14-1897, d. 05-15-1975, m. Helen Hess), Laura A. (b. 09-02-1899, m. Walter F. Rude), E. Russell (b. 08-15-1901, d. 02-?-1969, m., first, Miss Snedeker, and second, Jean Waters), Raymond R. (b. 05-12-1907, d. 11-08-1962, m. Cecelia Owens), Nelson E. (b. 09-14-1911, d. 03-24-1966, m. Hilda Bates).

4 Other prominent residents of Clinton Township also decided to move to Felton, Delaware at about this time. In Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886), p. 577, we find the following: "The Judge [Virgil Grinnell] built the house [in Clinton Township] where F. M. Gaylord now resides, and moved into it in 1824, residing there constantly till 1865 or 1866, when he removed, with his wife, son Miron and wife, daughter Ann and one or two grandchildren, to Felton, Kent County, Del., where he now [1886] resides at the age of eighty-seven, surviving his wife, who died in 1885."

5 Two of Theron O. Loomis' contemporaries from Clinton Township who also attended Delaware Literary Institute about the same time that Theron O. Loomis did are William H. Lee (b. 01-01-1849) and William C. Norton (b. 10-10-1852). See biographical sketch of William H. Lee in Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (Honesdale, PA: Benjamin F. Haines, Publisher, 1902), p. 58; see the biographical sketch of William C. Norton in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers & Co., 1900), pp. 523-524.

6 The precise location of the building in which the first Sunday School in Wayne County was held is not known for certain. Three hypotheses as to the location of that building are known to the editors:

A: In the newspaper article entitled "Centennial Clinton Centre Baptist Ch'ch" that Lois (Norton) Curtis wrote and which was published in The Wayne Independent in September 1931, Lois (Norton) Curtis states: "The old barn, (some of the remnants still remain), in which the first meetings [of the members of the Clinton Center Baptist Church] were held was owned by Theron O. Loomis (now by Clarence Singer, grandson of W. Myron Norton) and the old school house stood on the line between the farms of W. Myron Norton and F. E. Loomis." The barn in question is the Loomis barn that was located directly across PA Route 296 from the original Hiram Loomis house in Clinton Twp. (see "A" on the map on p. 3). On February 23, 1978, Laura A. (Loomis) Rude of Carbondale, PA, reported to the editors that her father, Francis Earl Loomis, and her paternal grandmother, Laura (Griswold) Loomis, said that the first Sunday School in Wayne County was held in the Loomis barn that was located directly across PA Route 296 from the original Hiram Loomis house in Clinton Township. In an interview with the editors on August 16, 1978, Dwight Rude of Clinton Township similarly stated that the first Sunday School in Wayne County was held in the Loomis barn in question.

B: In the February 14, 1878 issue of The Wayne Independent (p. 3) is the following statement: "The oldest Sunday School in the County of Wayne, and probably in all Northern Pennsylvania, is the one now in connection with the Clinton Baptist Church. It was organized in the year 1813, by Uncle Alva Norton, in a log cabin near by where the residence of Alvin Squires now stands."

C: In Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886), pp. 589-590, is the following: "Uncle Alva [W. Norton] always insisted that he organized the first Sunday-school in Clinton in 1813. Judge [Virgil] Grinnell says, speaking of going to school, etc... 'in 1814 my father--that's Deacon Rufus--organized a Sunday-school in his house... The one 'Uncle Alva' speaks of as organized by him in 1813 I have no knowledge of.' Of course there are no official records to harmonize dates, etc., but in either event it is highly creditable to Clinton that it had a Sunday School in 1813 or 1814..."

7 Erastus W. Loomis is the oldest of the seven children of Reuben and Sarah (Westland) Loomis, namely: Erastus W. (b. 04-09-1810, d. 12-31-1893, m. Mehetabel Muzzey--the daughter of Pliny and Mary (Draper) Muzzey from Massachusetts, who moved to Wayne County in about 1825 and bought the farm that was owned by Hiram Pease Loomis in 1886--who was born 02-22-1819 and who died 10-18-1863), Oliver H. (b. 02-12-1812, d. 12-25-1838, m. Louisa Coe), Daniel D. (b. 11-27-1814, d. 1848), Reuben F. (b. 06-18-1817), Hiram Pease (b. 12-09-1819, d. 08-27-1900, m. Laura Griswold), Marietta (b. 01-02-1821, d. 1848), Lucretia J. (b. 12-05-1823, m. Rensselaer Stephenson). See biographical sketch of Erastus W. Loomis in Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886), pp. 588-590.

8 In the Fall and Winter of the year, Theron Loomis, having harvested his apples, would rise early in the morning, load a wagon with apples, and peddle them in Carbondale or between Waymart and Peckville, PA. On those trips when Theron Loomis peddled his apples as far as Peckville, he would spend the night with his father's sister, Lucretia, and her husband, Rensselaer Stephenson, in Peckville, and return to Clinton Township on the following day. In his diary for 1871, Theron Loomis noted: 11-08-1871 "Received $20 for apples"; 11-14-1871 "Received $16 for apples"; 12-15-1871 "Received $19.63 for apples." During the final decades of the nineteenth century, Clinton Township, be it known, was referred to as the Pomonia of Wayne County.

9 The Moosic Band from Farno, Clinton Township, Wayne County, entertained at the Wayne County Fair in 1895; see Looking Back Souvenir Book of the Wayne County Fair Centennial Celebration 1862-1962 by Daniel M. Eno, p. 20.

10 In Alfred Matthews' History of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania (Philadelphia: R. T. Peck & Co., 1886), p. 581, is the following information on the Hiram Loomis house: "Mr. [Hiram] Loomis married the second daughter of Mr. [Francis] Griswold, and built a very elegant house... [on the Hiram Pease Loomis farm], a striking peculiarity of which is, that the interior is finished of the wood grown on the farm; giving a finish equal to any of the finest imported, and the balusters are made of about the last material one would expect--Sumac." In Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Chicago: J. H. Beers & Co., 1900), pp. 661-662, it is stated that the house was constructed at a cost of $5,000 and that the outbuildings on the Loomis property were valued at $2,000 in 1876.

11 The line of descent from George Squire to Alvin R. Squire is as follows: George Squire (b. 1618 in England, d. 1691 in Concord, MA, served as a Sergeant in the Fairfield Train Band, m. Ann ?), George Squire (b. 1646 in Concord, MA, d. 1674, m. Ellen, who was probably the daughter of Ephraim Wheeler), George Squire (m. Jane Edwards on 01-29-1701/2 in Easthampton, Long Island), Samuel Squire (b. about 1711, d. 03-13-1751/2, married, first, Abigail, and second, Sarah), David Squire (b. 02-18-1738/9 in Durham, CT, d. in 1804 in Durham, CT, served as a private in the Connecticut line in the Revolutionary War, m. Huldah Bishop, who was born 06-27-1742 and who died in 1783, on 02-09-1761), David Squire (b. 10-08-1762 in Granville, MA, d. in 1843, served as a private in the Massachusetts line in the Revolutionary War, m. Lauranna Gilbert), Horace Gilbert Squire (b. 12-13-1788/9 in Gill, MA, d. 03-12-1857 in Clinton Twp., m. Beulah Grinnell, who was born 12-01-1788 in Litchfield, CT, and who died 04-26-1861 in Clinton Twp.), Alvin R. Squire (b. 09-30-1822 in Clinton Twp., d. 04-02-1899 in Waymart, PA, m. Amy Susan Woodmansee, who was born 04-12-1823 in Tolland, CT, and who died 12-12-1881 in Clinton Twp., on 01-01-1848).

12 Beulah Grinnell traces her line to John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, to wit: John Alden (b. about 1599 in England, d. 09-12-1687 in Duxbury, MA, m. Priscilla Mullins, who was born about 1602 in England and who died between 1680 and 1689), Elizabeth Alden (b. 1623/4 in Plymouth, MA, d. 05-31-1717 in Little Compton, RI, m. William Peabodie, who was born in 1620 and who died 12-12-1707 in Little Compton, RI, on 12-26-1644), Lydia Peabodie (b. 04-03-1667 in Duxbury, d. 07-13-1748 in Killingworth, CT, m. Daniel Grinnell, who was born in 1668 in Portsmouth, RI, and who died 01-07/01-20-1740 in Westbrook, CT, in 1683), Peabody Grinnell (b. 1684 in Little Compton, RI, d. Saybrook, CT, m. Ruth Nettleton, who died 10-09-1732, on 04-08-1718), Jasper Grinnell (b. 01-29-1727 in Saybrook, CT, d. 05-31-1749 in Saybrook, CT, m. Sarah Hill, who was born 03-12-1726/7 in Guilford, CT, and who died in 1780 in Saybrook, CT), Michael Grinnell (b. 03-20-1752 Old Style in Saybrook, CT, d. 02-13-1858 in Clinton Twp., served in the Revolutionary War, m. Susanna Balcom, who was born in 1760 and who died 08-01-1825 in Clinton Twp.), Beulah Grinnell (b. 12-01-1788, d. 05-28-1861 in Clinton Twp., m. Horace Gilbert Squire, who was born 12-?-1788/9 in Gill, MA, and who died 03-12-1857 in Clinton Twp.).

13 The six children of Horace and Beulah Squire are: Hilon DeRoy (b. 08-17-1812 in Litchfield Co., CT, m. Margaret Jennings), Matilda Balcom (b. 10-15-1815, m. Charles Clark Fletcher), Lauranna (b. 11-03-1817), Harriet (b. 01-27-1820, m. Aaron Cummings), Alvin R. (b. 09-30-1822, d. 04-02-1899, m. Amy Susan Woodmansee), Susannah (b. 08-20-1825, m. Orson Spencer).

14 Amy Susan Woodmansee is a descendant of Gideon Woodmansee, who was born in 1758 in Massachusetts and who served in the Revolutionary War for nine months--in July 1780 in New Bedford, MA, he enlisted as a private in Captain Blaisdell's Company, Colonel Wigglesworth's Massachusetts Regiment; he served with General Washington at Valley Forge during the winter of great privation; on March 22, 1819, he was granted a pension of $8 per month. On 10-07-1781, in Swansea, MA, he married Almy Carter (b. 1759, d. 06-13-1842). In 1816, Gideon Woodmansee and his wife and their sons, Thomas, Jeremiah, and James, and James' wife, Polly Underwood, moved to Wayne County, PA, and settled on the "Stockport Road." Gideon Woodmansee settled on that property in Buckingham Township which in 1886 belonged to John Randall, later purchasing property in Preston Township. On 04-11-1851, Gideon Woodmansee died in Lake Como, PA, his wife having died on 06-13-1842 in Lake Como, PA. Their son, James (b. 06-14-1786 in Rhode Island, d. 07-24-1866 in Lake Como, PA) inherited the family homestead, his brothers, Thomas and Jeremiah, having removed to Michigan. James Woodmansee, who was a soldier in the War of 1812, and Polly Underwood (b. 01-09-1792 in Pomfret, CT, d. 12-27-1853 in Lake Como, PA, m. James Woodmansee on 09-?-1809) were the parents of 14 children: James M. (b. 04-27-1810, d. 04-12-1875, m. Lydia Griffith), Jedediah (b. 03-18-1812, d. 1887, m. Sarah Ann Wooley), Samuel (b. 04-28-1814, d. 12-24-1870), Betsy (b. 12-29-1816, d. 08-24-1828), Carlos (b. 10-23-1818, d. 10-23-1818), Caroline (b. 10-23-1818, d. 10-23-1818), Phoebe (b. 10-11-1819, d. 02-?-1903, m. George Gates), Lyman (b. 08-27-1821, d. 05-?-1865, m. Jane Stanton), Amy Susan (b. 04-12-1823 in Tolland, CT, d. 12-12-1881 in Clinton Twp., m. Alvin R. Squire, who was born 09-30-1822 in Clinton Twp. and who died 04-02-1899 in Waymart, PA, on 01-01-1848), Mary Jane (b. 11-20-1825, d. 09-21-1884, m. Joseph B. Sanford), Huldah (b. 08-09-1827, d. 12-?-1901, m. W. W. Blaisdell), Rhoda (b. 06-18-1828, d. 05-20-1886, m. Jacob Martin), Mahala (b. 03-01-1830, d. 05-11-1868, m. William Kingsbury), Horace (b. 04-30-1832, d. 07-12-1910, m. Mercy Williams).

15 Alvin R. Squire was mustered into service in the Civil War on 03-15-1864 and discharged by general order on 07-26-1865. He served under Lieutenant Titlow in the 152nd Pennsylvania Regiment, Third Artillery, and received a pension of $12/month following the war. See History of Pennsylvania Volunteers, 1861-5, Prepared in Compliance with Acts of the Legislature by Samuel P. Bates, Vol. IV (1870), published by E. Singlerly, State Printer, Harrisburg, PA; detailed information on the 152nd Pennsylvania Regiment, Third Artillery is given on pp. 698-700; Alvin R. Squire's name is listed on p. 769--the 33rd name from the top of the page--.

16 Orinda A. Peet is a descendant of John Peet (1597-1678) of Duffield Parish, Derbyshire, England. The line of descent is as follows: John Peet (b. 1597 in Duffield Parish, Derbyshire, England, sailed from London in 1635 on the "Hopewell" under Captain Bundock, was one of the pioneer settlers of Stratford, CT, d. 1678), John Peet (b. about 1638, d. 1684), Sergeant John Peet (b. 1672, d. 1719, m. Mary Moorehouse in 1695), David Peet (b. 1698, m. Mary Titherton in 1719), John Peet (b. 1725/6 in New Milford, CT, m. Rebecca Fairchild), Daniel Peet (b. 1765 in New Milford, CT, in 1829 moved to Salem, Wayne County, from New Milford, CT, d. in 1850 in Salem, Wayne County, m. Betsy ?), Daniel Peet (m. Jemima Hollister), Orinda A. Peet (b. 1842, d. 1883, m. Alvin R. Squire).

17 On February 23, 1978, Laura A. (Loomis) Rude told the editors: "There were three sawmills on the Loomis farm, all built on the same location--down in the pasture below the barn, by the creek. All three of the mills burned down, the first two were struck by lightning, the third was destroyed by an accidental fire in the mill."

18 Edna Loomis taught in the public schools of Pennsylvania for 34 years; 1904-1908 in the rural schools of Wayne County; 1908-1915 in the borough schools of Jermy; 1915-1927 in Carbondale High School; 1927-1938 in Central High School, Scranton, PA. In February, 1927, Edna Loomis was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree from Pennsylvania State College and in August 1932 she was awarded a Master of Arts degree from that same college. Her Master's thesis is entitled: A Comparison of Lord Chesterfield's Letters to His Son with the Conduct Books of the Sixteenth Century.

19 In memory of the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township and of the early ministers of Clinton Baptist Church, E. M. Peck had erected a memorial at the entrance of the Clinton Baptist Church Cemetery. That memorial is made from a six-ton flint conglomerate rock that was taken from the Moosic Mountains in Clinton Township. On Pioneer Day in 1915 (August 27), when that memorial was dedicated, the flag with which it was covered was removed by Laura (Griswold) Loomis.

20 Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis' sister, Adeline Loreta Squire (b. 08-06-1850 in Little York--now Lakewood--PA, d. 08-16-1918 in Waymart, PA) married, on 03-10-1868 in Aldenville, PA, George F. Munson (b. 11-01-1841 in Waymart, PA, d. 01-14-1928 in Waymart, PA). They were the parents of three children: 1. Hattie Amanda Munson (b. 08-17-1869, d. 07-30-1909, m. William Faber), 2. Susan E. Munson (b. 07-27-1873, d. 10-01-1947), 3. Orville W. Munson (b. 04-06-1878, d. 10-08-1962, m. Bessie Terwilliger, who was born 08-21-1880, and who died 01-08-1947).

21 The reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden is held every year on the third Wednesday in August. In 1979, the 73rd Griswold Reunion will take place this afternoon, August 15th, in Clinton Township at Ridge Farm, the home of Dwight and Margaret (Remsen) Rude.

22 At The End Of My Life— To my grave when Spring shall come/ Go you not with tearful eyes,/ Standing solemn faced and glum/ Underneath the smiling skies/ All that lies the ground below/ Will be worn-out garb I wore./ Only that and nothing more-/ If in Summertime you'd bring/ Blossoms to that quiet spot/ Do not go with sorrowing/ Go as to a garden plot;/ Smile and in its beauty share/ Think of me as gone before/ Nothing of me will be there/ But the shabby garb I wore./ And in Autumn when the leaves/ Red and golden gently fall./ Do not go as one who grieves,/ I shall not be there at all./ Though a little while I've gone/ Leaving you to fare alone/ All the earth will lie upon/ Will be rayment I've out-grown. Emma Loomis

23 —Heaven.— How would Heaven seem to you,/ If in all that region blue,/ No bird should flit on feathered wing,/ No cock should crow, nor cricket sing?/ How would Heaven seem to you,/ If horse or dog you never knew?/ If no herd grazed on distant hill,/ If no cat purred on window sill?/ How would Heaven seem to you,/ Where dwell in joy the good and true,/ Without the little shy wild life/ With which our fields and woods are rife?/ "How would Heaven seem to me"?/ You ask me this, I'll answer free,/ If there is none but human race,/ Heaven would be a lonesome place. E.S.L.

24 —What My Lover Said— By the merest chance in the twilight gloom/ In the orchard path he met me/ In the tall wet grass with its faint perfume,/ And I tried to pass but he made no room./ Oh! I tried—but he would not let me,/ So I stood and blushed till the grass grew red/ With my face bent down above it;/ While he took my hand as he whispering said—/ How the clover lifted each pink sweet head/ To listen to all that my lover said;/ Oh, the clover in bloom—how I love it! ## CONTENTS

The History of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pennsylvania 18407

From the Editors:

Volume I, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is the history of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pennsylvania, written by Donald Walter Powell. The number of pages has been increased in this issue in order that the history of the Berean Baptist Church might be presented in a single issue of this historical quarterly.

Many people have generously contributed their time and materials at their disposal to the formation of this history, and their individual contributions will be acknowledged in the text and notes as we go along. There are, however, several people whose contributions to this project go much deeper than the individual contribution, and for that reason they deserve special mention here. They are: Reverend Arthur W. Meneely, whose whole-hearted enthusiasm in the Spring of 1979 for what was then only a bright idea of the author's, caused the author to go ahead and prepare this illustrated history. Subsequently, the generous contribution of Rev. Meneely's time and of the materials at his disposal laid the groundwork for the materials presented herein. Miss Edith A. Gardner, whose perpetual enthusiasm for "the historical" is a constant inspiration to the author, and whose generous contribution of primary source materials and personal time and effort have opened to the author countless doors. Mr. William Uriah Carey, Church Clerk, who has so willingly and so graciously placed at the author's disposal the church records.

We are pleased to report that the first issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume I, Number 1, August 15, 1979--A Portrait of Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire of Clinton Township, Wayne County, and Carbondale, Lackawanna County) has been well received by a significant number of private and public libraries, historical societies, and private individuals, not only in Northeastern Pennsylvania and throughout the State, but in other parts of the country as well. (Single copies of Volume I, Number 1 are still available--write to: SHEFFIELD PUBLICATIONS, INC., Post Office Box 161, Carbondale, PA 18407.) Given that reception, and given our commitment to writing the history of Northeastern Pennsylvania, we are encouraged that we shall accomplish the objective we have established for ourselves: To record and disseminate a comprehensive portrait of Northeastern Pennsylvania--past and present.

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume I, Number 3) will be Part I of a two-part history of the schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania. It will be written by Silas Robert Powell and published on February 20, 1980.

Selected Bibliography

BEREAN BAPTIST PUBLICATIONS

1. "The Baptists Bid Adieu to Their Present Sanctuary," Scranton Herald, December 3, 1888. This article is the text delivered by Rev. T. E. Jepson on Sunday, December 2, 1888, in which he reviewed the history of the church from its organization to 1888.
2. "Dedicating the New Church," Carbondale Leader, April 2, 1889. This article is the text of a survey history of the church, presented by Rev. Jepson the day before. It is closely based on the text delivered December 2, 1888.
3. March 1848--March 1898 Announcement of Services in Connection with the Golden Jubilee of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pennsylvania, Thomas E. Jepson, Pastor. Sunday, February 27, Monday, February 28, Tuesday, March 1, Wednesday, March 2, 1898. On the evening of Sunday, February 27, the Bible School and Young People's Jubilee was held. From the newspaper article the following morning (The Herald, Monday, February 28, 1898) we learn that several histories were delivered that night: "History of the Bible School" was given by A. S. Lewsley, "History of the Y.P.S.C.E." by Freeman Tallman, "History of Junior Society" by Miss Carrie Geary. All these were interesting papers and were listened to intently. "Early Days of Sunday Schools" by Rev. T. E. Jepson gave an entertaining sketch of the origin and growth of the work and the struggles of the early pioneers. None of these histories has come down to us. As the highlight of the Tuesday afternoon program entitled "Jubilee of Organization," P. S. Joslin read a paper entitled "History of the Church." This history is not printed in the commemorative booklet, but the entire text of the paper was printed the following morning in The Herald, a Scranton paper. Following P. S. Joslin's paper, Lucy Joslin read a paper entitled "The Woman Helpers in Our Church." This paper was not printed in The Herald the following morning, but the newspaper did hail the paper as "an able and exhaustive treatise on the work of the ladies, individually and in organizations." No copy of this Lucy Joslin paper has yet come to light.
4. Services in Recognition of the Fifty-Sixth Anniversary of the Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pa.; the Cancellation of the Mortgage and All Other Indebtedness, and the Entrance of Rev. H. J. Whalen, D.D., upon the Fifth Year of Pastoral Service, Sunday, March 6--Friday, March 11, 1904. Booklet contains "History of Our Church" by P. S. Joslin. This 1904 Joslin history is different in some details from the Joslin 1898 history.
5. Sixty-Fourth Anniversary of Re-Opening Exercises, Berean Baptist Church, February 29th to March 10, 1912. This 4-page booklet contains no survey of the history. It is a detailed program of the events that took place at the 64th anniversary celebrations.
6. Souvenir Program of the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary Services of the Founding of the Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, March, 1848 to March, 1923. This booklet contains a history, "History of Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pa.," by Rev. Frank A. Stanton, from data furnished by Brother E. M. Peck and others.
7. Souvenir Program of the Ninetieth Anniversary Services of the Founding of Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, March, 1848 to March, 1938. Booklet contains a history entitled "History of Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pa." written by Mrs. Milo Gardner and Emmons L. Peck.
8. Centennial Program 1848-1948, The Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania presents A Memorial Booklet of One Hundred Years of Baptist Work in Carbondale, Pennsylvania. Booklet contains a history entitled "The History of The Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania" by Louisa Howells.
9. Out of These Ruins, A Prayer A Pledge A Place of Worship, Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania. A pamphlet published by the Building Committee and the Building Fund Committee. Pamphlet is undated, but the fire was August 21, 1968.
10. Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania Services of Dedication, 2:30 P.M. Sunday, September 13, 1979.
11. 125th Anniversary Program 1848-1973 Commemorating the Founding of the Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania. The Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, Presents a Brief History of One Hundred and Twenty-Five Years of Baptist Work in Carbondale, Pennsylvania. History of the first one hundred years copied from history written by Louisa Howells. History from 1948 to 1973 by Lavinia Spencer and Rev. Norton Vail.
12. Testimonial Dinner to Honor Reverend and Mrs. Arthur Meneely, June 12, 1979. Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania. A booklet containing the program for the occasion.
13. Church Covenant, History of Church Charter, Duties of Church Officers. Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania. Booklet is undated.

CHURCH RECORDS

With some overlapping and some slight omissions, the minutes of the Berean Baptist Church (BBC) meetings are found in the following volumes. For the sake of convenience of reference, the abbreviation "BBC" has been used throughout the text of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA to refer to these volumes. For example, the second of the volumes below--the Minutes of Church Meetings and Church Membership Rolls, June 6, 1868 to August 13, 1908--in the text is referred to as "BBC 2." Every effort is made in the text of this essay to carefully document all sources, and these BBC volumes are no exception; however, in order to avoid filling the text with references to these seven volumes, the "BBC" reference is given only when the information being cited is found in the minutes on a day other than the day on which the particular event took place. If the church minutes are being cited and no "BBC" reference is cited, then the information is taken from the minutes for the particular day mentioned in the citation.

1. Minutes of Church Meetings and Church Membership Rolls, March 1, 1848 to June 1868.
2. Minutes of Church Meetings and Church Membership Rolls, June 6, 1868 to August 13, 1908.
3. Minutes of Church Meetings, May 1, 1910 to March 29, 1928, and Church Membership Rolls, March 1848 to 1924.
4. Minutes of Church Meetings, April 8, 1920 to January 5, 1931.
5. Minutes of Church Meetings and Church Membership Rolls, April 1, 1924 to March 30, 1939. Inscribed on front cover in yellow crayon "Book No 4"; title page reads "Record of Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pennsylvania"; register covers the period January 1, 1924--March 1, 1940.
6. Minutes of Church Meetings and Church Membership Rolls, April 4, 1940 to November 29, 1956. Inscribed on front cover in yellow crayon "Book No 5"; title page reads "Record of the Berean Baptist Church at Carbondale, Pa."; register begins April 1, 1940.
7. Roll Book, September 1, 1957 to the present. Inscribed on first page "Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pa., Book #6"; this a loose-leaf notebook, roll is typed.

BOOKS

1. Edward L. Bailey, A.M., Pastor of Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pa., History of the Abington Association, From 1807 to 1857. (Philadelphia: J. A. Wagenseller, No. 23 North Sixth St., 1863); history of Berean Baptist Church is pp. 205-210.
2. BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF CARBONDALE, PA. 1872. Printed lower left: "Drawn & Pub. by Fowler & Bailey"; printed lower right: "American Oleograph Co. Print"; printed lower center: "C. H. VOGT. LITH. MILWAUKEE, WIS." Two copies of this print are known to the author, one in the Carbondale Public Library in a frame with a dedicatory plaque which reads "Donated by John M. Cramer 1975," and one in a private collection in Carbondale. In 1890 another bird's eye view of Carbondale was published. This 1890 view is taken from a point slightly farther down the valley. The view in the 1890 print is from high in the air behind the Episcopal Church. The details of the 1890 print are these: Carbondale, Pennsylvania, 1890. Printed lower left: "Drawn by T. M. Fowler, Morrisville, Pa."; printed lower right: "Published by T. M. Fowler & James B. Moyer"; printed lower center: "A. E. Downs, Lith. Boston." The only copy of this large (about 3' X 4') print known to the author is a framed one in a private collection in Carbondale.
3. Atlas of Luzerne County Pennsylvania From Actual Surveys By and Under the Direction of D. G. Beers. (Philadelphia: A. Pomeroy & Co., 320 Chestnut Street, 1873); pls. 46-47 Carbondale, Pennsylvania.
4. J. R. Durfee, Reminiscences of Carbondale, Dundaff and Providence Forty Years Past (Philadelphia: Miller's Bible Publishing House, 1875). This book was originally a series of letters written by J. R. Durfee and published in the Carbondale Advance, a newspaper, prior to November 1, 1874. The chapters of the 1875 book were serialized in the Carbondale (Pa.) News in 1971 (the second and third installments appeared on July 15 and July 22). Although this book contains much information that is useful, the reader is advised that the volume is riddled with factual errors and should therefore be used with extreme caution. One example of Durfee's accuracy will suffice: the Baptist ministers Daniel E. Bowen, Henry Curtis, Frederick Glanville, and John Emory Gault, become, in Durfee's Chapter XXIII--Church Records, "David E. Bowen, Henry Curliiss, Frederick Glauville, John Emory Gault."
5. History of Luzerne, Lackawanna and Wyoming Counties, Pa., with Illustrations and Biographical Sketches of their Prominent Men and Pioneers. (New York: W. W. Munsell & Co., 36 Vesey Street, 1880); pp. 449-450 for the Welsh and Baptist Churches of Carbondale--First Baptist Church (Welsh), Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church, Welsh Congregational Church, Berean Baptist Church.
6. Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania, Containing Portraits and Biographical Sketches of Prominent and Representative Citizens of the County, Together with Biographies and Portraits of All the Presidents of the United States. (New York and Chicago: Chapman Publishing Co., 1897); contains biographies of Philander S. Joslin (pp. 168-169), Earl M. Peck (p. 402), Milo Gardner (p. 484 and p. 487), and Eli M. Hendrick (pp. 942-944, 947).
7. Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania Including the Counties of Susquehanna, Wayne, Pike and Monroe Containing Biographical Sketches of Prominent and Representative Citizens, and Many of the Early Settled Families. Illustrated. (Chicago: J. H. Beers & Co., 1900).

12. Thomas Murphy, Jubilee History Commemorative of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Creation of Lackawanna County. (Topeka and Indianapolis: Historical Publishing Company, 1928); Chapter XXVIII, pp. 428-449 on Carbondale; pp. 172-176, 435-436 on early Baptists.

WHAT IS A BAPTIST?

On the occasion of the celebration of the golden jubilee of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, in 1898, Rev. T. E. Jepson, then the pastor, in a sermon entitled "Our Jubilate," delivered on Sunday, February 27, 1898, and printed in The Carbondale Leader (Monday, February 28, 1898, p. 6) the following afternoon, while speaking about the organization of the Berean Baptist Church in 1848, outlined—among many other things—the essential doctrines of a Baptist and of a Baptist church. Rev. Jepson said:

Fifty years ago this church was organized by seven persons, one of whom is still living and is able to be present with us on this memorable occasion. In September, 1848, the articles of faith were duly examined and the church was received into the fellowship of the Baptist denomination. In all its history this body has remained steadfast in the essential doctrines of a Baptist church. It stands today as it did a half century ago believing that the Scriptures are the only authority in matters of faith and practice: that personal faith in Jesus Christ alone secures salvation: that a church is composed of believers who have been baptized on a personal confession of their faith in Christ: that each church has entire control of its affairs without interference on the part of any external power.

WHAT IS THE VALUE OF A HISTORY OF THE BEREAN BAPTIST CHURCH?

Rev. Jepson's sermon, "Our Jubilate," from which we have just cited the essential doctrines of a Baptist and of a Baptist church, contains some very inspired remarks about the value to be derived from the living from a careful study of the deeds of the past. We pick up Rev. Jepson's sermon again, just as he is discussing the membership of the church.

During the present pastorate 370 have been added, and during the past fifty years nearly 1,000 persons have united with the church. Thirteen pastors have served the church during its history, most of whom have gone to their reward. 144 have died. Many of these were superior Christians indeed. The faith of the gospel had a strong hold of them, and thoroughly controlled them. They had a deep experience of divine things, and an unsparing devotion to the Master's service. They loved the church and made sacrifices for it. They were willing to serve and diligently prosecuted their work. They served their day and generation well, and having been faithful over a few things in their life, the Master has made them rule over many things in the life beyond, and they have entered into the joy of the Lord. Our hearts grow tender as we think of those who have faithfully labored here before us; but are now in the immediate presence of God. In their example they have left us a rich inheritance impeding upon us a deeper devotion, a truer spirit of service, and a warmer love. We should dedicate ourselves anew to God, so that our example may inspire those who shall come after us, to labor with more Christ-like devotion for the glory of God and the saving of men. Great have been the changes in the past, but others are coming. What a different world this will be fifty years hence, even if the Lord should tarry so long. This great land of ours with its increasing millions, and its multiplied material, intellectual, moral and religious forces, will be still greater power in the earth. And all these shall serve as hand maids to Christianity. What victories the gospel will achieve in this world during the next half century. How glorious to contemplate the triumphs of the Redeemers kingdom. What changes will also be wrought among us as a church in the next fifty years, most of us will be numbered with the dead. Another voice will be heard from the pulpit. Other singers will chant God's praise, and other hearers will listen to the gospel. Thus "One generation passeth away and another cometh." As pastor and people we have journeyed together for ten years. Sometimes the path has been rough, sometimes smooth, now we have wept and then rejoiced. We have met at the bridal altar, in the sick room, at the pillow of death, and around the silent grave. From the first day of our union until now I have sincerely sought your good and have labored for the prosperity of this church. I have preached to you the doctrines of the Bible as I understand them, nor am I conscious of having kept back any portions of the truth for selfish purposes. As to my usefulness the revelations of another day will decide. A bright bow of promise and of hope gilds the future of this church. I see the zion in the coming years growing up like the moving sun in the sight of the graves of those who have died on the field of battle, growing up until Christ shall come. As today we are feeling the influence of the good men and women who left us long ago, as their prayers and exhortations linger on our ears, and thrill all our hearts, so will those who now compose the church contribute toward its future character and destiny. Then strive to make this church now just what you would have it, when others shall here preach, pray and sing. As one by one you pass away, leave an example of unwavering fidelity for others to imitate. Shirk no responsibility, shrink from no labor imposed upon you by the providence and word of God. Oh Christian men and women be strong; be pillars in God's temple; be stars of the first magnitude in the moral and spiritual heavens, and when the hands of the living shall carry us away in our coffins, may they do it with the consciousness that the world and church are poorer for our departure; and may it be ours at last to share in the heavenly jubilee when the chimes of heaven shall ring with eternal joy, and we with the redeemed of all ages shall sing, "Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might be unto our God and for ever and ever, Amen."

Louisa Howells reading the text of her history of the Berean Baptist Church, on the evening of Monday, May 3, 1948, as a part of the week-long program of the centennial of the Berean Baptist Church. The program of Monday evening was entitled "100 YEARS OF BEREAN HISTORY" and was in two parts: "Recognition of Members of Fifty Years or More" and "History of the Church, Interspersed with Living Pictures and Historical Episodes." Throughout the essay that follows are illustrated many photographs taken that night of the "living pictures and historical episodes." The flowers visible in this and in the many other photographs taken during centennial week were done by Thelma Chubb. Photograph, 4 7/16" X 6 7/16", in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner; copy print by DWP.

Rev. John Miller. The Abington Baptist Association was formed Saturday, December 26, 1807, at the log cabin of Rev. John Miller in Abington, when a constitution was adopted by the first three Baptist churches in "the North-East of Pennsylvania": Palmyra, Wayne County, organized in the Fall of 1801, Abington, Luzerne County, organized in the Spring of 1802, and Mt. Pleasant, Wayne County, organized in the Autumn of 1807. This engraved portrait of Rev. Miller was published facing the title page of E. L. Bailey's History of the Abington Baptist Association. From 1807 to 1857, 1863. At the 41st annual meeting of the ABA, held at Blakely, September 6th and 7th, 1848, the Berean Baptist Church was received into the ABA. Full-size xerox of the original black and white engraving.

The Articles of Faith, 1848. At the ceremonies at which the Berean Baptist Church came into being, the Articles of Faith were read by D. E. Bowen. The clerk appointed on that occasion, Rev. Silas Finn, copied into the minutes the Articles of Faith read on that occasion:

ARTICLES OF FAITH

- I. We believe in the existence of God as the first cause of every effect, that he is a being who exists through infinite ages & yet is not capable of past or to come, he is good without quality, great without quantity.
- II. We believe that the Bible contains the revealed will of God to man, & that it is our only rule of faith and practice.
- III. We believe that man was created holy & upright but he is a sinner of his own accord through the influence of the tempter.
- IV. We believe in the total depravity of man in consequence of the Fall.
- V. We believe in the purposes of God relative to man's redemption, & that his councils will stand for ever.
- VI. We believe in the infinite value of the atonement made by Christ the God-Man, and regard it as the only moral medium whereby God can be just & the justifier of him who believeth on Jesus.
- VII. We believe in the work of the spirit as the only efficient cause in Man's conversion.
- VIII. We believe that faith and repentance are enjoined upon all men.
- IX. We believe that true grace is a living principle in the soul, that the fruit of it is holiness and the end will be everlasting life.
- X. We believe in the general resurrection, the final judgment, the eternal punishment of the wicked & the everlasting felicity of the saints.
- XI. We believe that a gospel church is a congregation of Baptized believers, and that it is an independent body under the jurisdiction of Christ, and capable of transacting its own affairs, its officers are Bishops and Deacons.
- XII. We believe that there are two ordinances in the church—Baptism & the Lord's Supper—that believers are the only subjects of Baptism & immersion the only mode—that scriptural Baptism is essential to church fellowship.
- XIII. We believe that the Christian Church is a Missionary Society—that the field is the world.

Church Covenant, 1848. The complete text of the Church Covenant as read at the ceremonies at which the Berean Baptist Church came into being was recorded by the clerk in the minutes of that occasion:

CHURCH COVENANT

Having been, as we trust, brought by Divine grace to embrace the Lord Jesus Christ, and to give ourselves wholly to him; we do now solemnly and joyfully covenant with each other, To Walk Together in Him, with Brotherly Love to his Glory as our Common Lord. We do therefore in his strength engage. That we will exercise a mutual care as members one of another, to promote the growth of the whole body in Christian knowledge, holiness and comfort. That to promote and secure this object, we will uphold the public worship of God and the ordinances of this house—not to neglect to assemble ourselves together after the manner of some. That we cheerfully contribute of our property for the spread of the Gospel over the world, the support of the poor, and for the maintenance of faithful ministry among us. In a word to live godly in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen."

The Articles of Faith have, of course, been restated and restated over the years. The printed text of the articles that appears below is taken from a booklet entitled "The First Baptist Church of Clinton, Wayne County, Pa., Articles of Faith, Covenant and Church Directory, 1882." I am indebted to Verna Varcoe for bringing this booklet to my attention. At a Berean Baptist meeting, January 23, 1860, a copy of the Articles of Faith and Church Covenant known as The New Hampshire Articles of Faith were read and adopted. At the same special church meeting it was "voted that the Covenant be read at each Covenant Meeting and members manifest their assent to it by standing up." The source used by the Clinton Church for the "Articles" is the "Baptist Church Manual." At a meeting of the members of the Berean Baptist Church held May 5, 1873 (BBC 2, p. 60) the following resolution was offered: "It was proposed that the Church send for a sufficient number of the Baptist Manual by J. Newton Brown to place a copy in the hands of each new member, which was so modified that a voluntary contribution was taken at the time and a sufficient sum raised for the purpose." The Baptist Manuals apparently were ordered and arrived shortly thereafter, for at a church meeting held June 1, 1874, two separate mentions are made in the minutes about the Manuals (BBC 2, p. 71, June 1, 1874). A few years later, under C. Wilson Smith's direction, Berean Baptist adopted its own By-Laws of the Ordinances.

Our Declaration of Faith

From the Baptist Church Manual.

I. OF THE SCRIPTURES.

We believe that the Holy Bible was written by men divinely inspired, and is a perfect treasure of heavenly instruction; that it has God for its author, salvation for its end, and truth without any mixture of error, for its matter; that it reveals the principles by which God will judge us; and therefore is, and shall remain to the end of the world, the true centre of Christian union, and the supreme standard by which all human conduct, creeds, and opinions should be tried.

2 Tim. 3:15-17; 2 Pet. 3:21; Isa. 8:20.

II. OF THE TRUE GOD.

We believe that there is one, and only one, living and true God, an infinite, intelligent Spirit, whose name is JEHOVAH, the Maker and Supreme Ruler of heaven and earth; inexpressibly glorious in holiness, and worthy of all possible honor, confidence, and love; that in the unity of the Godhead there are three persons, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; equal in every divine perfection, and executing distinct but harmonious offices in the great work of redemption.

Jno. 4:24; Ps. 83:18; Rev. 4:11.

III. OF THE FALL OF MAN.

We believe that man was created in holiness, under the law of his Maker; but by voluntary transgression fell from that holy and happy state; in consequence of which all mankind are now sinners, not by constraint, but choice; being by nature utterly void of that holiness required by the law of God, positively inclined to evil; and therefore under just condemnation to eternal ruin, without defence or excuse.

Gen. 1:27; Gen. 3:6-24; Rom. 5:19; Eph. 2:1-3.

IV. OF THE WAY OF SALVATION.

We believe that the salvation of sinners is wholly of grace; through the mediatorial offices of the Son of God; who by the appointment of the Father, freely took upon him our nature, yet without sin; honored the divine law by his personal obedience, and by his death made a full atonement for our sins; that having risen from the dead he is now enthroned in heaven; and uniting in his wonderful person the tenderest sympathies with divine perfections, he is every way qualified to be a suitable, a compassionate, and all-sufficient Savior.

Eph. 2:5; Jno. 3:16; Isa. 53:4-5; Heb. 7:25.

V. OF JUSTIFICATION.

We believe that the great gospel blessing which Christ secures to such as believe in Him is justification; that justification includes the pardon of sin, and the promises of eternal life on principles of righteousness: that it is bestowed, not in consideration of any works of righteousness which we have done, but solely through faith in the Redeemer's blood, by virtue of which faith His perfect righteousness is freely imputed to us of God; that it brings us into a state of most blessed peace and favor with God, and secures every other blessing needful for time and eternity.

Jno. 1:16; Acts. 13:38; Rom. 5:1-9.

VI. OF THE FREEDOM OF SALVATION.

We believe that the blessings of salvation are made free to all by the gospel; that it is the immediate duty of all to accept them by a cordial, penitent, and obedient faith; and that nothing prevents the salvation of the greatest sinner on earth, but his own inherent depravity and voluntary rejection of the gospel; which rejection involves him in an aggravated condemnation.

Isa. 55:1; Rev. 22:17; Jno 5:40.

Baptists, particularly Welsh Baptists, have always been especially noted for their singing, and it is within a congregation of Welshmen who were noted by their contemporaries for their singing and who at first met regularly in a house on the west side of South Main Street in Carbondale in the early 1830s, that we find the beginnings of what later became the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale. In 1863, in his History of the Abington Baptist Association, From 1807 to 1857, Edward L. Bailey, the earliest chronicler of the specifics of the history of the Berean Baptist Church, describes (p. 205) this congregation, composed of Welsh Baptists and "Regular" (English) Baptists:

Some of the earlier settlers of Carbondale entertained Baptist sentiments. In the Summer of 1830, a company of 20 Welsh emigrants, attracted chiefly by the mining interests, settled in the place, among whom were four Regular Baptists. Mr. John Bowen was a Deacon, his brother James was a minister, and their wives were members—embracing the elements of a Gospel church. Their faith was not abandoned or zeal abated by leaving home and crossing the ocean, but far from friends and fatherland, among strangers speaking another language, they clung the more closely to their cherished creed and distinctive principles. Ways were soon devised and means employed to promote their spiritual interests and propagate their cherished sentiments. Meetings for prayer and preaching, were commenced at the house of Deacon Bowen, on the west side of Main Street, on the site now occupied by the store of Mr. Patrick Moffit, Jr. For a time, their congregations were comparatively small, consisting of only a few Welsh families. It was not long, however, before some of their American neighbors of various denominations met with them occasionally, attracted chiefly by the "songs of Zion, in a strange" tongue. This curiosity was frequently improved by repeating the substance of the services and sermon in English, for the profit and pleasure of that portion of the audience unable to understand the Welsh language. Their numbers were also augmented from time to time by fresh emigrants from Wales, of whom a fair proportion were Regular Baptists.

Building No. 1: The house of Deacon Bowen

A building owned by "P. Moffit"—it is unclear whether the building is a house or a store—can be seen in the detail reproduced here from the 1873 atlas map of Carbondale: it is the 5th building up from the corner of Mechanic Street (now 7th Avenue) and South Main Street (on the detail of the map "No. 2" appears in the middle of South Main Street). Is this the site identified by Bailey (1863, p. 205) as the house of Deacon Bowen on the west side of Main Street? Presumably the "Mrs. Moffit" who occupied the second building up from the same corner and on the same side of the street, as well as the "Mrs. Moffit" who occupied the building on the northeast corner of the intersection of Mechanic Street and South Main Street, was a close relative of our Mr. Patrick Moffit, Jr. There is, to be sure, some confusion in the literature about the precise location of the Deacon Bowen house. Bailey says "west side of Main Street" and the 1873 map clearly identifies the building singled out above as one belonging to "P. Moffit." But, beginning with 1880, the evidence seems to stack up against the fifth building up from the corner on the west side of South Main Street as being the Moffit building in question. The 1880 "Genealogical and Personal Register" says the following about a one Mr. Patrick F. Moffit:

PATRICK F. MOFFIT, merchant at the corner of Main and 7th streets, and formerly a member of the Carbondale poor board, was born in Carbondale, in 1847.

This brief biography leaves little doubt about where the Moffit business—or a Moffit business—was located. The question is this: Is this Patrick F. Moffitt the Patrick Moffit, Jr. of whom Bailey speaks? It seems as though it is; but how, then, are we to account for the "P. Moffit" building. Is it a building owned independently by P. Moffit, Jr.? Is "Mrs. Moffit" the mother of Patrick Moffit, Jr.? And how are we to account for the fact that Bailey says "west" side of Main Street and the "Mrs. Moffit" building on the corner is on the "east" side of the street? Perhaps the confusion about the side of Main Street on which the Deacon Bowen house stood is the result of the substantial dog-leg in Main Street which causes Main Street and South Main Street to lay in quite different compass directions. In order to resolve the dispute, more information is needed. Let it be said here that the tradition is against the proposition that the site of the Bowen house is the same as the "P. Moffit" building on the 1873 map.

Beginning in 1938 the histories of the Berean Baptist Church have identified the site of the Deacon Bowen house as that of the "Mrs. Moffit" building on the northeast corner of the intersection of Mechanic Street and South Main Street.

In the early 1830s—most likely in 1832—these Welsh Baptists who met at the house of Deacon Bowen joined the Baptist church in nearby Greenfield. Mrs. Martha Bowen's obituary (Weekly Advance, Vol. II, No. 29, Saturday, December 18, 1858, p. 2, col. 4)—though unsigned, we can with the greatest of confidence assume it was written by Bailey since the same text, with only slight changes, reappears in Bailey's 1863 book—clearly describes this phase of the movement of these Welsh Baptists:

These Welsh members having united with the Greenfield—now Scott Valley—Church, soon became a prosperous branch of that Church, holding covenant meetings and enjoying occasional preaching both in Welsh and English. In the Spring of 1833 they took letters of dismission and organized as the First Baptist Church of Carbondale, with forty-three constituent members. Their public worship was now conducted chiefly in the Welsh language—a practice this Church still continues.

The Welsh Baptists had returned to Carbondale and had founded their own church, but the English Baptists were still without a church of their own. Bailey (p. 206) describes the situation of the Welsh and English Baptists:

In the Spring of 1833, they took letters of dismission and organized as the First Baptist Church of Carbondale, with forty-three constituent members. Their public worship was chiefly conducted in the Welsh language, which is said to be peculiarly rich in the expression of religious truths and emotions, but was little less than harsh discord and unmeaning jargon to the unaccustomed ear of their American brethren, who were consequently still left destitute of a religious home and regular preaching. Thus excluded from congenial privileges, the few who had settled in the place, remained for a number of years, attending the meetings of other denominations, until the time seemed to have arrived to erect the Baptist standard and rally to its support and defence.

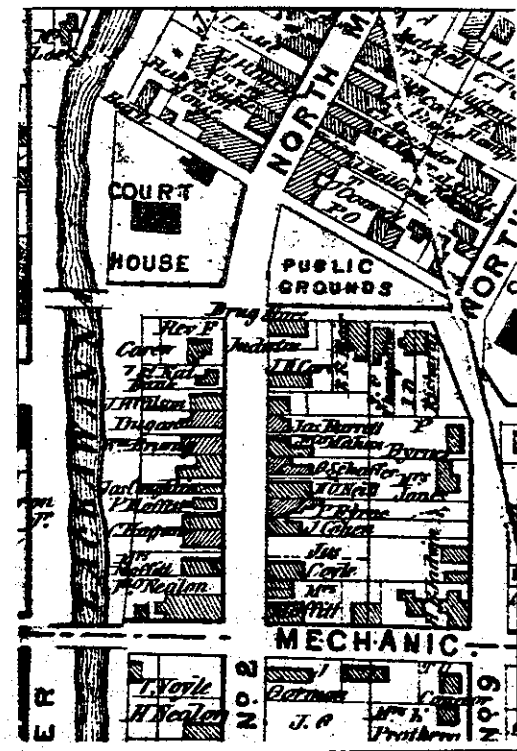

It seems quite safe to assume that even before this group of Welsh miners and their wives joined with the church at Greenfield that they had definite plans for establishing their own church in Carbondale; for Philander S. Joslin, in his history of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale written in 1904, states that in 1832—that is, before March 1833 when this group of Welshmen took letters of dismission from the Greenfield church in order to organize their own church—these Welsh miners and their wives "erected a house of worship on Church street, and in 1833, the church was organized as the first Baptist Church of Carbondale."

In the detail reproduced here from the 1873 atlas map, this First Baptist Church can easily be identified. It is located in the middle of the block on the east side of Church Street (No. 9, on the map) between Mechanic Street (7th Avenue) and Bridge Street (8th Avenue). In 1880 (p. 449) the First Baptist Church property was valued at $5,000, their membership was 120, and William Davis was the superintendent of their Sunday School. Joslin (1904) tells us that the First Baptists occupied their South Church Street building until the membership was so depleted by death and removal that the organization ceased to exist. It is an odd twist of fate that when the first Baptist Church of Carbondale dissolved as an organization in the Spring of 1891, that nine of its remaining members applied to and were received into membership by the Berean Baptist Church.

It seems quite safe to assume that after 1833 the Regular (English) Baptists of Carbondale continued to join with their Welsh brethren in their new First Baptist Church building on South Church Street. But other religious options were available for the recent emigrant without a church. Interestingly enough, at just this time (in the early 1830s), two other Welsh churches were established in Carbondale—the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church and the Welsh Congregational Church. The latter is easily identifiable on the detail reproduced here of the 1873 atlas map. It is located just down South Church Street from the First Baptist Church, on the southwest corner of Bridge Street and South Church Street.

This is not a photograph of the congregation of Welsh and English (Regular) Baptists singing in the house of Deacon Bowen on South Main Street in Carbondale in the early 1830s. It is a photograph of the youth choir—the Blue Birds—of the Berean Baptist Church in 1948, standing on the platform in front of the church building that was destroyed by fire on August 21, 1968. These children are singing on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the Berean Baptist Church. Edna Hopkins is conducting the children's choir, and in the middle at the back, behind the children, may be seen the head of the man playing the organ, Oswald Evans. We are able to identify a few of the children: Kathleen Massey, front row left; Norma Chapman, front row second from left; Alan Modad, head visible between Kathleen Massey and Norma Chapman; Carrola Rodgers, front row fourth from left; Fred Chubb, front row extreme right; Dale Hedden, front row, second from right; Alyce Ann Swartz, head visible to the left of Oswald Evans' left shoulder; Walter Pierson, front row, wearing glasses, directly above Edna Hopkins' right hand. In 1938 the officers of the Blue Birds were: Lois Craig, President; Lois Smith, Vice President; Gladys Craig, Secretary; Lois Evans, Treasurer. The celebration of the centennial of the church lasted for a full week. On Tuesday evening, May 3, the celebrations were entitled 100 YEARS OF BEREAN HISTORY, and the second part of the program was entitled "History of the Church, Interspersed with Living Pictures and Historical Episodes." Throughout the illustrated essay that follows, many photographs of the "Living Pictures and Historical Episodes" from the 1948 celebrations will appear. Dramatized episodes such as these were also an integral part of the 90th anniversary celebrations that took place in 1938. Photograph, 6 1/2" X 4 7/16", in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner; copy print by DWP.

It would be interesting to learn the precise relationship between the Bowens who founded the Berean Baptist Church and the Bowens who founded the First Baptist Church. Note that a "J. Bowen" and a "Mrs. Bowen" lived across South Terrace Street (on map "No. 17" appears in the middle of South Terrace St.) from each other. Enlarged photographic copy print by DWP.

1. Daniel E. Bowen

March 13, 1848: call extended to Rev. D. E. Bowen to become pastor of the church.
August 16, 1848: Elder Bowen dismissed by letter.

On March 1, 1848, the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale was organized. E. L. Bailey (p. 206) describes the occasion thusly:

...a council of brethren from neighboring churches, was convened at Carbondale, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, March 1st, 1848, and an English church was recognized, of seven members, three males and four females, as the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale. The following persons were constituent members, viz., Rev. Daniel E. Bowen, John B. Lewis, Geo. R. Haskins, Mary Bowen, Sarah Glover, Louisa L. Berry and Mary J. Cramer. The last two are still esteemed members of the church.

It would be interesting to discover just what the relationship between the four English Baptist Bows who initially met "for prayer and preaching" at the house of Deacon Bowen on South Main Street in the early 1830s, and the two Bowsens--Rev. Daniel E. Bowen and Mary Bowen--who were among the seven constituent members of the Berean Baptist Church on March 1, 1848.

In 1873--see the map reproduced on p. 4--two Bowen houses ("Mrs. Bowen" and "J. Bowen") can be located--practically facing each other--on South Terrace Street (on the map "No. 17" appears in the middle of South Terrace Street).

The careful reader of the primary sources and of the church histories will discover a great variety exists in the literature in the names of these seven constituent members, and for that reason a reproduction of the top of the first page of BBC 1 seems to be in order here (see above).

The first notation made in the Berean Baptist Church minute books records the specifics of the ceremony by which Berean Baptist came into being:

The organization of Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, March 1, 1848. The Council convened at eleven o'clock A.M., Rev. John Miller (of Abington) was elected as Moderator, and Rev. Silas Finn (of Benton), Clark. Then Bro. D. E. Bowen stated the circumstances of the place and the propriety of organizing a regular Baptist Church here and read the articles of faith. After a proper deliberation the Council then proceeded to recognize the Brethren and Sisters as a Gospel Church. The first prayer was offered by the Rev. S. Finn. Rev. Henry Curtis (of Clinton) preached the first sermon from Eph. IV. 15-16. Right Hand of Fellowship by Rev. John Miller (of Abington, see photo on p. 3). Charge by C. Miller (of Clifford), concluding prayer by Rev. R. Tower (of Lenox).

Bailey (pp. 206-207) continues:

The occasion must have been one of peculiar interest and anxiety to the seven members of this infant church, situated as they were, in the midst of a great and growing population, rife with party and prejudice; also, destitute in a great measure of the ordinary means of influence and not disposed to resort to the usual modes of acquiring it, how could they hope to sustain the position they had assumed or diffuse the principles they had embraced? The prospect was, indeed, dark and doubtful, except as it was relieved by the spanning bow of promise. Thus sustained, they moved silently and steadily forward, seeking divine aid and employing the appointed means.

At their first business meeting held on the 13th inst., Rev. Daniel E. Bowen was called to the pastoral charge of the church, and measures were taken to secure a suitable site for a house of worship. Also at a special meeting for business, held on the 17th of April following, the plan for a meeting house was adopted and a committee appointed to solicit the necessary material aid. The whole project was, however, finally abandoned, after incurring unnecessary expense and exciting unpleasant feelings.

Building No. 2: The school-house on South Church Street

From the Joslin history of 1898 we learn that when the church was organized, it occupied a small school house that was located on Church street, between Eighth and Seventh Avenues. In his history of 1904, Joslin adds that this school house was "nearly opposite the Welsh Baptist Church." No such school house is identified on the 1873 atlas map. One wonders how Bailey, who makes every effort to be complete in his account, overlooked this fact. Joslin knew that the Berean Baptists met in the school-house because he was here--in Carbondale--when it happened. In 1831 he and his parents moved from New York state to Dundaff, Pa. In 1842 he permanently settled in Carbondale and in 1843 he united with the Presbyterian Church and remained a member there until 1859, when he joined the Baptist Church.

Bailey (p. 207) continues in his account of the first activities--in March 1848--of the Berean Baptist Church:

On the 29th inst., Mr. Enoch Jones was chosen Deacon of the church, and continued in that office until March 15th, 1851, when he took a letter of dismission and returned to the Welsh Church. Mr. Bowen having served the church as pastor some five months, resigned his charge in the Autumn of 1848, and also returned to the Welsh Church. During his brief connection with the Berean Church, five were added to its membership by baptism, 11 by letter and one was received by experience. When the church united with the Association in the Fall of that year, it embraced 22 communicants.

As a member of the Abington Baptist Association, Berean Baptist was obligated to submit each year an annual letter or report to the Association. This letter contained--among other things--a statement of the financial situation and a report of the membership, and therefore the Pastor, Treasurer, and Church Clerk were intimately involved in preparing the letter. After the letter was prepared, it was read for approval to the church. The pastor, and any members attending the association, were typically chosen as the Delegates to represent the church. A typical example of the process is found in the minutes for August 28, 1870:

At the close of Sunday morning service the members remained to hear the letter read and appoint delegates to the Association. The letter was read by the clerk and approved by the Church. The delegates appointed were Bros. J. J. Owen, William B. Grow, E. E. Hendrick, H. Grennell, John Showerman, E. Hale and all who attend the association.

Thanks to the annual necessity of preparing a detailed report of the state of affairs of the Church, we are in the possession of a great deal of information about the early Church, information that surely would not have been written down had it not been so required.

The name Daniel E. Bowen first appears in Bailey's account of the Abington Baptist Association (ABA) for the decade 1837-1847, the 4th decade of the existence of the ABA. He, and Rev. Henry Curtis, are listed by Bailey among the "more earnest and successful" of preachers at revival meetings held by the member churches of the ABA.

On August 16, 1848, Rev. Bowen asked for and received a letter of dismission from the Berean Baptist Church. Although from this point Rev. Bowen ceased to be a member--and the pastor--of Berean Baptist, he continued to make occasional appearances on the Berean Baptist pulpit for many years to come.

October 10, 1858: After morning service (preaching by Rev. D. Bowen) the church celebrated the Lord's Supper, a goodly number present.

Building No. 3: Temperance Hall

We do not know how long the members of the newly formed Berean Baptist Church met in the school-house nearly opposite the Welsh Baptist Church, nor do we know when they moved to their next location--Temperance Hall, on the corner of Church Street and Salem Avenue. Bailey makes no specific mention of the Temperance Hall period. It is again from the Joslin history of 1904 that we learn of this:

When the church was organized it occupied a small school-house on Church street, nearly opposite the Welsh Baptist Church. It afterward met in Temperance Hall, on the corner of Church street and Salem avenue.

As can be seen in the detail on page 9 from the 1873 atlas map of the intersection of Church Street and Salem Avenue, the location of Temperance Hall is not specified. Since the Presbyterian Church and a Marble Yard are in-1873 located at the southeast and southwest corners of this intersection, Temperance Hall must have been located at either the northeast or northwest corners of this intersection.

This photograph, a "dramatized recreation" from the celebrations of 1948, depicts the moment of the establishment of the Berean Baptist Church in 1848. The seven adults are seated on the platform before the organ. They are--assuming the identities of the seven founders of the church--(from left to right): Mrs. Esther Verrill, Mrs. Rachel Jones, Jack Edwards, Evan Coles, Edwin Booth, John Hancock, Mrs. Margaret Ransom. In order to be as authentic as possible in their recreation of the event, these seven persons not only wear costumes which attempt to match those of 1848 (notice the silk hat on the floor beneath the table), but also the furniture on the stage is of the period: a candlestick on the table, the mid-19th century marble topped table (in 1948 in the possession of Mrs. Milo Gardner, and now in the collection of her daughter, Edith), the melodeon between Edwin Booth and John Hancock (belonging in 1948 to Emmons L. Peck), and the old chairs in which all three of the women sit. Photograph, 6 5/8" X 4 7/16", in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner; copy print by DWP.

2. Henry Curtis

Eliza Banning

When he accepted the pastorate at Berean Baptist Church on February 15, 1849, Rev. Henry Curtis was no stranger to the Berean Baptists, for not only did Henry Curtis take part in the public services of recognition when Berean Baptist was founded—as we have already heard in Bailey's account—but Elder Curtis was the Moderator of the first Covenant Meeting (March 25, 1848) held by the Berean Baptists.

February 15, 1849: Elder Curtis called, and engaged to preach every other sabbath for one year. Seventeen persons beside the above (the original 7) had been added to the church.
 February 18, 1849: Elder Curtis preached first sermon.
 February 2, 1850: Engaged Elder Curtis as before until the 1st of October following.
 September 25, 1850: Engaged Elder Curtis until January 1, 1851.
 January 5, 1851: Elder Curtis preached his farewell sermon; 46 added to the church during his ministry.

neath the sod) and purchased a home in the above mentioned town which was then the County seat, and commenced his work there as pastor. The family lived there for 13 years, when with a family of six children, four sons and two daughters, the father thought it best for the welfare of the family to purchase a farm. Accordingly he purchased one pleasantly located on the west branch of the Lackawaxen, some three and one-half miles west of Bethany, of an old gentleman by the name of Seth Hayden. He was then pastor of the Clinton and Damascus churches. He continued to live here and preach for various churches (with the exception of five years when he was laid aside by mental depression) until his last illness, his death occurring August 13, 1867 in the sixty-seventh year of his age.

Shortly after 1832 he commenced regular preaching at Honesdale, on the site now occupied by Liberty Hall. His labors were continued there until the constitution of the Baptist Church in 1842. From 1839-1849 he preached one-half time at Damascus. From 1845-1857 his labors were chiefly devoted to the Clinton Church, preaching one-half the time in 1849-1851 for the church in Carbondale. From Feb. 1853-1854 or 55, he preached at Bethany again. During the time nearly 750 persons were added by baptism, and in 1854 his younger four children were converted and baptized and received into the Bethany Church. His labors with the Clinton Church covered a period of fourteen years and during that period the church enjoyed three general revivals. His residence in Wayne County of thirty-five years was one of continued labor in the ministry. During this period he labored more or less with the following churches—Bethany, Canaan (now Clinton), Carbondale, Damascus, Lebanon, Berlin, Ashland, Berlin, Aldenville, Paupack Eddy, Palmyra, Lackawaxen, Barryville and Shohola, and Jackson in the Bridge-water Association. His field during a part of the last five years extended over a

Building No. 4: The remodeled and repaired former Methodist meeting house

Bailey (p. 208) describes the period after the leaving of Rev. Bowen, the Curtis pastorate, and the location of the 4th building occupied by the Berean Baptists, in this way:

The church was now left destitute of a settled pastor and stated preaching, but continued to sustain covenant and conference meetings, the clerk of the church, Mr. D. W. Halsted, usually leading the public services, and occasionally reading a printed sermon.

From Joslin (1898) we learn that at this time Elder Charles Miller of Clifford attended to administer the ordinance of the Lord's supper.

Bailey continues:

Rev. Henry Curtis became pastor of the church, in February, 1849, and continued to preach for them one-half of the time until January, 1851, when he resigned his charge and retired from the field, highly respected by the church and community. During that period, the church received frequent and valuable accessions to its membership, both by letter and baptism. Mr. Homer Grennell was chosen Deacon of the church, August 18th, 1849, and still serves the cause in that capacity with great usefulness and general acceptance. In 1850, the meeting house, formerly owned and occupied by the Methodist Society, was purchased and moved into its present location. By remodeling and repairing, it was made convenient and comfortable.

We are especially well informed about the life and activities of Rev. Henry Curtis and his wife, Eliza Banning, thanks to the care with which some of their heirs—Verna Varcoe, Edith Gardner, Alice Williams Lund, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Rude—have preserved the photographs and the history of their lives, and thanks also to the splendid biography of Rev. Curtis written by his colleague, Rev. Isaac Bevan, D.D., the pastor of the Penn Avenue Baptist Church, Scranton, and at that time "the leading Baptist pastor in this part of the state" (Crow 1902, p. 105). Large portions of the biography of Rev. and Mrs. Curtis which follows are taken from the Bevan obituary notice of Rev. Curtis which appeared in the minutes of the Abington Baptist Association in the Fall of 1867:

The great loss of the Association during the year is that made by the death of our much esteemed and greatly loved brother, Rev. Henry Curtis, who departed this life at his residence near Aldenville... Brother Curtis was born in Ilston, Leicestershire, England, October 11, 1800. He was the youngest of twelve children, and bore his father's name. The family were associated with the Independents or Congregationalists, and his mother was a devoted member of the denomination. It was through her zealous and pious efforts, and in answer to her fervent and unceasing prayers, that this large family became possessed of all that was most valuable to them in morals and religion. Retiring early one evening with her youngest son, she knelt with him in her chamber and among other petitions was one to this effect, "Oh! shadow us under the wings of a precious Jesus!" This made an impression upon his young and tender heart, the influence of which was felt and acknowledged through life.

In 1812 the family emigrated to this country, and settled on a farm near Gilbertsville, Otsego Co., N.Y., in that year and the year following, both parents were removed by death, the sainted mother being the first to be taken from the family. This was a most serious loss to Henry, in a special manner. He lived for a short time in Norwich, Chango Co., with an older brother, then went to New York City. Here he was apprenticed to a cabinet maker. At the age of sixteen he was led to feel his need of the Saviour, and to put his trust in him for the salvation of his soul. Having been led to the Oliver Street Baptist Church to witness the administration of the ordinance of baptism to several candidates, the Holy Spirit produced saving conviction in his heart. The following year he was baptized by Rev. John Williams, and at once became an active worker in the Sabbath school and prayer meetings in this church. On the 10th of March, 1824, he was licensed to preach by the church which then enjoyed the joint labors of Revs. J. Williams and S. H. Cone. On the 13th of March he was united in marriage to Miss Eliza Banning, with whom he lived happily, and who now survives him.

After making some preparations for his great work, he left New York that same year and settled with the Windsor and Colesville Church, now called Harpersville. Here he received ordination, the following brethren in the ministry officiating: Revs. Davis Dimock, John Smitzer, Caleb Blood and Levi Holcombe. He was pastor here seven years. In the Autumn of 1832 he received a call to become the pastor of the church at Bethany and Canaan, now Clinton, Wayne County. He accepted the call, sold his farm, and moved his family consisting then of wife and three children, (leaving one little girl be-distance of thirty miles, and the nearest church he served was fourteen miles from his residence. The inclemency of the weather never hindered him from keeping his appointments. He has been known to go when the roads were considered by others as impassable. During his entire ministry he baptized over one thousand professed believers. All his children, four sons and two daughters, were baptized by their reverend father, and were settled in life before his departure. With the Clinton Church he preached his first sermon in this State and in the fellowship of that church he died.

Our departed brother was a man of more than ordinary ability, and of very considerable intelligence. His mind was clear in its perceptions; firm and immovable in its convictions. He was eminently acquainted with the Scriptures. His preaching was instructive and useful. Jesus Christ and Him crucified was the great burden of his ministry. He was a wise counselor and exerted a wide influence for good in the Association and among the churches. He was courteous and gentlemanly in his manners. In most things he was a model man, and has left behind him an influence that will not soon die. We thank God for sparing him so long, and for enabling him to be so abundant in his labors within the bounds of the old Abington Association. His care for the little churches to whose interests he so zealously devoted his last years, was that of a loving father. He was removed in the midst of his great usefulness, when the rugged and extensive field he was cultivating was giving much promise of success. But "He doeth all things well," and we hope and pray that others equally worthy and faithful be speedily raised up and sent to the field.

Henry Curtis was a man of sterling religious character whose life was so useful, and whose labors were so abundant, as to justly merit the distinguished place which is assigned to him in Baptist history. His farewell sermon as regular pastor of Berean Baptist was on January 5, 1851, but when he closed his regular Berean Baptist pastorate that was not the end of Henry Curtis on the Berean Baptist pulpit, for two years later, shortly after E. L. Bailey commenced his pastorate, Henry Curtis was back:

July 24, 1853: "Preaching by H. Curtis. The above candidates for Baptism were Baptized, Communion and right hand of fellowship given."

August 13, 1854: "Preaching by Rev. H. Curtis, Lords supper administered."

As we have already learned from the Bailey narrative, it was in 1850, during the pastorate of Rev. Curtis, that the Berean Baptists bought the former meeting house of the Methodist society and moved this meeting house to the Berean Baptist lot on North Church Street, that is to say, the lot located between the present Methodist Episcopal Church and the Catholic priest's home.

In the detail of the 1873 atlas map of North Church Street illustrated on page 9, this lot may be seen: it is the lot identified as "Bap. Ch." The black square on the lot is not the outline of the remodeled and repaired former Methodist meeting hall. It is the outline of the foundation of the successor to the remodeled and repaired former Methodist meeting hall, as we shall shortly see when we arrive at that point in Berean Baptist Church building history.

The first graded school in Carbondale originally stood on the Baptist lot on North Church Street. The History of Luzerne, Lackawanna and Wyoming Counties, Pa., published in 1880, contains (p. 443) the following description of this school and two others that were located just up the street:

In 1831, and for some years after, there were no sidewalks and but two streets in the place. But in this year we find two new school buildings erected between the sites of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches. They contained one room each. Their teachers were Messrs. Evarts and B. G. Root. In 1847 a third school, for advanced pupils, was located on the lot where the English Baptist Church now stands. It was the first school of a graded character in the place, and its teacher was S. S. Benedict. After quitting the profession of teacher he assumed that of editor, in which business he has ever since been successfully engaged.

From Louisa Howells' Berean Baptist history of 1948, we learn that the land for all the early churches—Catholic, Methodist, Presbyterian, and Baptist—was donated by the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, with the provision that it was to be used only for religious purposes. The date on which the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company donated "a lot at Carbondale for church purposes" is given in A Century of Progress, History of the Delaware and Hudson Company 1823-1923 (Albany: J. B. Lyon Company, Printers, 1925) on p. 79—September 1831.

Presumably the former Methodist meeting house was located on the site where the Methodists erected their new church. If it was, then the Berean Baptists had but to move the former Methodist meeting hall next door to the adjoining lot. Bailey tells us that this meeting house was "by remodeling and repairing... made convenient and comfortable." We have no visual or written record of the appearance of the inside or the outside of this Berean Baptist church building. We do know that the Berean Baptists continued to worship in this building until it was replaced in 1859 by a brand new Berean Baptist building.

From two public notices that appeared in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, a weekly Carbondale newspaper of the time published every Friday morning, we learn two facts about this Berean Baptist Church in the early 1850s. First, all of the seats in the church were free (Vol. 5, No. 13, Nov. 11, 1853, p. 3, col. 1), and second, that Sunday services were at 10½ o'clock A.M. and at 2½ o'clock P.M., Sabbath School at 1 P.M. (Vol. 5, no. 41, Aug. 4, 1854, p. 3, col. 1).

Two notations made in the minutes by V. G. Gaylord, church clerk, reveal that while the Berean Baptists were meeting in their "remodeled and repaired former Methodist Meeting-house" that they were apparently not opposed to (a) getting in the good graces of the City of Carbondale--on May 6, 1851 the Church voted to let the authorities of the City of Carbondale use their house of worship for the purpose of holding Courts for the present year and free of charge (b) making a little money--on September 13, 1851 Deacon H. Grenell was appointed a committee to negotiate with the friends of the Carbondale Lyceum in regard to renting them the church one evening per week during the winter.

3. Charles Griffin

Mrs. Anne E. Griffin

came from: New York                      went to:

- April 6, 1851: Elder Charles Griffin had been called and preached his first sermon.
- April 27, 1851: Covenant Meeting but few present. After Service in the evening the church tarried for business. Received by letter Sister Mary Bowen, our Pastor Brother Charles Griffin and his wife Sister Anne E. Griffin.
- March 28, 1852: "The Chores of Br. Charles Griffin closed to day. We are now destitute of a pastor."
- September 4, 1853: Charles Griffin and Anne E. Griffin granted letters of dismission.

We are especially well informed about the sequence of events that resulted in Charles Griffin's becoming the Berean Baptist pastor, from his first appearance in Carbondale on March 2, 1851, as a candidate for the Berean Baptist pulpit, to May 22, 1851, when he was ordained to the Gospel Ministry by a Council especially convened for the purpose at Berean Baptist. Since the minutes recorded by the clerk at that time are both lucid and highly descriptive and will serve to illustrate to some considerable extent the process by which a pastor is chosen by a local church, we shall let the minutes speak for themselves:

March 2, 1851: Covenant Meeting immediately after sermon by a brother Griffin from New York.

March 13, 1851: Church meeting according to previous appointment. Organized by appointing Br. Perkins moderator after stating the object of the meeting proceeded to business. Resolved to choose by ballot a person to fill the pulpit two candidates being presented. A Brother Griffin from New York and Br. Callender from Susquehanna, Pa. Proceeded to ballot, Br. E. S. Miller appointed as receiver and teller. On first ballot found to be a tie and one blank, at the next ballot found Br. Griffin has one majority. Resolved that Br. Perkins, E. S. Miller and N. Halsted be a committee to visit Br. Griffin and to agree upon salary. Resolved to offer 350 dollars and to report to next meeting. Resolved that A. O. Hanford, N. Halsted and Br. Evans be a committee to circulate subscription.

March 15, 1851: Church meeting. Heard report of committee, accepted report. Br. Griffin takes until Saturday week to make up his mind to whether he will accept the call extended to him by the church, voted in case that answer be in the affirmative that the clerk write the Penn Baptist Convention asking an appropriation to aid in sustaining the preaching of the word among us.

April 6, 1851: Brother Charles Griffin, late of New York, preached his first pastoral discourse, Service in the afternoon part of the day by a brother from Danville after which we responded to a call from the Ministerial Conference by appointing Brethren Griffin and Baarns to represent us at the conference.

April 24, 1851: At a meeting of the church, April 24, 1851, voted to call a council from Sister Churches for the purpose of taking into consideration the expediency of ordaining Br. Charles Griffin to the work of the gospel ministry. Voted to invite Pastors and delegates from the following named Churches, viz. Honesdale, Bethany, Clinton, Clifford, East Abington, Benton, Greenfield, Lenox, Hyde Park and the Welsh Church of Carbondale. Also an invitation to J. L. Burrows Philadelphia.

May 22, 1851: In compliance with the request of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale an ecclesiastical Council convened to sit in Council with them to aid in examining and if thought expedient to ordain to the work of the Gospel and ministry, Bro. Charles Griffin. Meeting opened by Prayer by Bro. Dimock... Bro. Griffin was then presented to the Council by the Church and then proceeded to give a relation of his Christian experience and call to the ministry and views of doctrine, after which a hymn was sung and prayer offered by Bro. Curtis. On motion the congregation was dismissed and the Council tarried for deliberation, the question being put it was unanimously agreed to ordain Bro. Charles Griffin to the work of the Gospel Ministry. Voted that the ordination services commence this evening at 8 o'clock...

January 3, 1852: Saturday Evening, Special Ch. meeting, voted A. O. Hanford notify Rev. Charles Griffin that his services will not be wanted after the present engagement.

Beneath Rev. Griffin's name in the roll book of the Berean Baptist Church the clerk has written: "6 by L. 2 - Ex," meaning that during the Griffin pastorate 8 members were admitted to the church, 6 by letters from other Baptist churches, and 2 on relation of their Christian experience.

4. Frederick Glanville

- August 8, 1852: Preaching by Brother Glanville 10½ and evening.
- August 15, 1852: Preaching by Brother Glanville 10½ and evening.
- October 10, 1852: Preaching by Brother Glanville. Lord's Supper administered, Church tarried, voted unanimously to extend a call to Br. Glanville to preach to this Church for the year to come.
- March 28, 1853: Farewell address of Brother Glanville.

Bailey (pp. 208-209) describes the situation after the departure of Rev. Griffin and the pastorate of Rev. Glanville:

During the Summer of 1852, while destitute of a pastor, the members sustained stated meetings and enjoyed an occasional supply from abroad. Thus they continued until October of that year, when Rev. Frederick Glanville became the fourth pastor of the church. Soon after his settlement "the work of the Lord was graciously revived; saints were moved to labor and pray, and sinners to repent and believe." His sermons were exceedingly able and highly prized. In March, 1853, he, however, unexpectedly resigned his charge and abruptly retired from the field.

Joslin (1904) says this about the pastorate of Rev. Glanville: "The outlook was bright, and much interest was manifested." From Joslin's earlier history (1898) we learn more details:

In October, 1852, Rev. Frederick Glanville became the 4th pastor. He had just commenced a series of meetings with a promise of fine results. The church was poor, and a city pastor wanted him to come and assist him for a short time, with an expectation of financial aid. He went, and in the course of two or three weeks returned, expecting to find the interest as he left it, but it was lost. He felt so chagrined over the result, said he had made a great mistake, and tendered his resignation. 12 were added.

The above photograph shows an episode entitled "Church Discipline" from the 1948 commemoration celebrations. The five gentlemen--and the organist--are shown on the platform before the organ in the church building that was the immediate predecessor of the present church building. The organist is Oswald Evans and the five gentlemen in the tableau were the deacons in 1948. They are, from left to right: Albert Estabrook, Arthur Lewsley, Emmons L. Peck (as the penitent), H. L. Snow, Evan Griffiths. Historically, one of the primary functions of the Deacons was to act both as a police force and as a court of justice. The violations which brought offenders before this body were both religious (violations of Baptist ordinances and doctrines) and interpersonal (such as disputes and differences between members). Justice was neither blind nor absolute, and suspected offenders were amply warned, and individual cases were heard according to a well defined sequence of procedures. And, frequently, members who felt unjustly judged were able to--after an appropriate period of penance--reapply for a redress of the judgement meted out to them. ### 5. Edward L. Bailey

Mary T. Bailey

"Elder Bailey supplied the pulpit occasionally while at home from college during the summer of 1852" (Joslin 1898).

The Summer of 1852 was the inter-regnum after Griffin and before Glanville; in the minutes we find the following notations:

- May 16, 1852: Preaching by Broth. Bailey.
- June 6, 1852: Preaching by E. L. Bailey.

Immediately following the farewell sermon of Rev. Glanville--March 28, 1853, Messrs. Grenell, F. Perkins and A. Richardson were appointed (March 30, 1853) a Committee to secure a Minister. They apparently did not have to look far or long for on May 15, 1853 "E. L. Bailey commenced preaching to this Church."

- January 1, 1854: Rev. and Mrs. Bailey were admitted by letter to the membership of the Berean Baptist Church.
- January 12, 1854: E. L. Bailey ordained (Joslin 1898).
- February 4, 1866: At Covenant Meeting a letter from Bro. E. L. Bailey was read, tendering resignation as pastor.
- February 18, 1866: Preached farewell sermon.

We now come to the pastorate of Rev. Edward L. Bailey, the man whose church history we have been frequently citing. In many eyes, notably those of J. R. Durfee (1875, Chapter IV, p. 28), the Berean Baptists hardly existed before the E. L. Bailey pastorate:

The Baptists were without a church or pastor for a number of years, until Mr. Bailey came there, a young man, fresh from his preparatory studies, and labored assiduously not only in building a very convenient and comfortable church edifice and seeing it paid for, but gathered around him a respectable congregation, and labored with them.

Now, you and I, who have been following closely these matters--the pastors and the buildings of the Berean Baptists--know that Durfee is either uninformed or is generalizing. Whatever the case may be, it is certainly true that the monumental church edifice erected during the Bailey pastorate and the monumental length of time that Bailey served as the Berean pastor--13 years (a record not surpassed until Rev. Meneely--17½ years)--certainly did put the Berean Baptist Church firmly before the eyes of the populace.

It will be remembered that, although published in 1863, the Bailey book strictly speaking covers the period 1807-1857. Because Bailey's account of Carbondale Berean, as we shall see, includes much information about events that took place after 1857, it is perfectly obvious that Bailey made every effort to include as much of the very latest developments in the Carbondale Berean Baptist Church in his book, the publication of which, we learn from the church minutes, caused Brother Bailey to be out of Carbondale for three months in 1863-1864:

Dec. 6, 1863 to March 6, 1864: Bro. Bailey was absent from Carbondale superintending the printing of the Annals of the first half century of the Abington Association; during this period the "Black or Spotted Fever" made such alarming havoc in our city.

Reproduced on p. 23 is the title page of E. L. Bailey's great work, History of the Abington Baptist Association From 1807 to 1857. The careful reader of the present historical essay will need no reminder of the great wealth of information concerning the facts, feelings, and attitudes which Bailey so fastidiously and lovingly collected and so eloquently, and yet so simply, stated in this work. In the 312 pages of this work we are given first (pp. 13-15) a brief account of the formation of the Abington Baptist Association, then (pp. 16-73) a synopsis of the annual business meeting for each year from the time of the foundation in 1807 until 1857. These annual reports are grouped in ten year units and at the end of each decade Bailey gives an analysis of the main features of the decade, then (pp. 75-271) "Historical Sketches of the Several Churches," thirty-five church biographies, arranged in chronological order according to their recognition (the history of the Berean Baptist Church which we have so frequently cited is pp. 204-210 of this section, and the engraving of the Greek Doric temple which appears on p. 8 is illustrated on p. 204), and finally (pp. 273-312) a section on "Biographical Notices of the Pioneer Ministers."

Building No. 5: The Greek Doric building

The outstanding achievement of the pastorate of Rev. Bailey was the design, erection and dedication by the Berean Baptists of a new church building on their lot, a church building which replaced the "remodeled and repaired" former Methodist meeting hall which the Baptists had been using since 1850. Many of the details of this building campaign have come down to us, and they are here outlined according to the sources where they are found. First, Minutes of church meetings, taken by A. Richardson and A. O. Hanford, Church Clerks:

January 9, 1856: Church Meeting. E. L. Bailey in the chair. Moved and seconded by Dea's Grennell & Hanford that we make an effort to raise money to erect a house worship—carried. On motion Brethren Underwood, Grennell & Hanford were appointed a committee to draft & ascertain the expense of a building.

February 16, 1856: Church Meeting. Committee report progress—Brethren Bailey & Grennell appointed a committee to raise a subscription for the erection of a meeting house.

May 4, 1856: Covenant Meeting. On motion a special meeting is called on Saturday the 10th inst. 7½ o'clock P.M. to hear a report from the building committee & for the transaction of such other business as may be necessary to be transacted.

May 7, 1856: Church meeting pursuant to call. E. L. Bailey in chair. Report of committee rec'd, which was progress. On motion the committee were empowered to make such alterations to the draft for the building as to them may seem necessary. On motion Brethren Homer Grenel, A. O. Hanford & Jerome Underwood appointed building committee.

July 1858: Special Church Meeting—voted to send Bro. E. L. Bailey to New York & Phila. to secure funds, to finish the house of worship.

Nov. 6, 1859: No Covenant Meeting on account of the Old House of Worship having been removed to give opportunity to fill in front of the new House. For three sabbaths we worshipped with the Welsh Baptist Church and also held the sabbath school at the same place.

A second source of information about the details of this building campaign is Bailey's History of the Abington Association, published in 1863, which contains a full-page engraving of the exterior of the new Berean Baptist Church and a 6-page (pp. 205-210) account of the Berean Church of Carbondale. The portions of this written account that deal with the newly erected church building are extracted by Bailey from the annual letter of 1856 and from the annual letter of 1857 from the Carbondale Bereans to the Abington Baptist Association. From the 1856 letter we learn that:

They are making an effort to secure the necessary means to erect a suitable house of worship, with favorable indications of ultimate success. One brother has pledged a thousand dollars for the object, and other members have subscribed equally liberal in proportion to their means, while the citizens generally seem disposed to render material aid.

From the 1857 letter we learn that:

They have done something for various objects of Christian benevolence abroad on a systematic plan, but most of their limited means are required at home to support regular preaching and build their meeting house, the foundation of which is completed, and the frame is being erected. It is to be constructed of wood, in the Doric style of architecture, 40 by 64 feet on the ground, and well proportioned in height, with a graceful spire and spacious audience-rooms, and when finished and furnished, will cost some five thousand dollars.

Many of the blank spaces between the lines of the information about the design, erection and dedication of this Doric church building supplied by the Berean Baptist church minutes and by the Bailey visual and textual description can be filled with information published at the time in the Carbondale newspaper, The Advance.

Church Improvements. The Baptist Society in town have got the foundation for their new house of worship finished, and we learn intend to erect and inclose their new Church building this fall. (The Advance, I, 12, Thursday, August 6, 1857, p. 2, col. 3)

The ladies of our city intend holding a Fair and Festival in the new Baptist Meeting House, on Monday, the 5th of July, the proceeds to be given to the Baptist society to aid in completing the church edifice. This is praiseworthy, and we hope the enterprise will be liberally patronized. (The Advance, 2, 2, June 19, 1858, p. 2, col. 1).

And so, from these three sources—the church minutes, Bailey's book, and the contemporary newspapers—we are given quite a complete picture of the new Berean Baptist Church building.

Clearly, fully cognizant of the eleven years since its establishment, during which the Berean Baptist Church had to first join the Welsh Baptist congregation in town, then meet in a school-house, then meet in a former Temperance Hall, and then meet in a remodeled and repaired former meeting house of the Methodists, Bailey seems to be filled with paternal pride as he concludes his portrait of the Carbondale Berean Baptist Church with these two short paragraphs:

This young church formed in faith, yet feebleness, in the midst of a needy and numerous population, has deservedly enjoyed the favorable notice and fostering care of the Pennsylvania Baptist Convention, receiving timely aid and frequent appropriations, until it has well-nigh secured a prosperous and permanent position.

The meeting house was finally completed as proposed, and dedicated to the worship of God, November 29th, 1859, by appropriate and impressive religious services.

The services of dedication are described in the Church Minutes in the following way:

November 29, 1859: The new House of Worship dedicated to the worship of God by appropriate services in the following order, viz. commencing at 2 o'clock first, singing, 2d prayer by Rev. Bevan of Scranton, then a short address by the Pastor E. L. Bailey giving the rise and progress of the Baptist denomination in Carbondale. Dedication Sermon preached by C. A. Fox of Abington from (blank where text preached from was to be inserted). Dedication prayer offered by Father Charles Miller of Clifford. Evening session. After opening services lissend (? listened) to two sermons first by T. J. Cole of Abington, 2d by L. C. Grim of Honesdale, during the day and evening obtained in money & subscriptions for to finish the basement the sum of six hundred dollars $600.

The Berean Baptists, now in the possession of their brand new building, took two important steps:

(1) They obtained an act of incorporation and elected trustees.

P. S. Joslin recorded in the church minutes the details of the first election of Trustees, July 8, 1861, under a charter granted by the Court of Common Pleas of Luzerne County:

July 8, 1861. Agreeably to Public Notice from the Pulpit for the two preceding Sabbaths a number of the members met in the Sect??? Room at 8 o'clock P.M. for the purpose of organizing under a charter granted by the Court of Luzerne Co. for the election of five Trustees, according to its provisions. The church was called to order by Rev. E. L. Bailey, as Moderator, who opened the meeting with Prayer. The charter was read, when Bro. Bailey was appointed Judge, and Bros. Grennell and Underwood tellers, to hold the required election. The members ? quotted vote, then proceeded to ballot for Trustees and after all had voted, the ballots were counted, and the following brethren were declared to be duly elected Trustees, to serve for one year, to wit: - Homer Grennell, Albert O. Hanford, Jerome Underwood, John Showerman, and Philander S. Joslin. Thus having legally organized under its charter the meeting of the church adjourned.

(2) They rented out the pews in their church.

Naturally, the moments in the church history when the church has undertaken major repairs and improvements, and when the church has undertaken the erection and furnishing of a new building, have been the times when the greatest demands have been made on the energy, ingenuity, and dedication of the trustees, but the business of raising money by subscription, by loan, and by solicitation is a perpetual task for these devoted churchmen. If we may generalize, today the duties of the Trustees are to take care of the financial and property matters of the Church. Although the duties of the Trustees have always been largely this, in former days—when the largest part of the income of the church came from the rental of the pews—the Trustees, naturally, took an active role in this activity. Accordingly, on March 17, 1863, it was decided that the seats in the church be appraised and rented to the highest bidder. A Pew Committee was appointed (April 5, 1869) and the pews were rented and the pew rents were due—in 1869—on the first of October (BBC 2, p. 43; November 2, 1869). On April 4, 1870, it was proposed that the entire quantity of pews in the church be valued

The Baptist Church, as shown here, is the same building as in the engraving from Bailey, but here the church building seems much longer, although there are four windows on the side of the church in both depictions. BEREAN BAPTIST CHURCH, at the aggregate sum of $1,000. It was shortly thereafter also proposed, then on motion ordered, that the pews on each side of the middle aisle, except the front two seats and back four seats, be appraised at $20 each, and all others at $15 (BBC 2, p. 46; April 4, 1870). A regular day each year was set aside for the rental of the pews, and in 1871, when the annual rental was postponed beyond the wonted time, the Trustees were requested to see the present pewholders and request them to retain their pews and at their present rental price until the new rental date (BBC 2, p. 46; April 4, 1870). Although the valuation from year to year of a particular pew may have changed, the present occupant (renter) of the pew was always given first priority when it came time for the annual renting. The pew rental ceremony typically took place in the evening (BBC 2, p. 132; July 2, 1883).
CARBONDALE CITY, PA.

The Doric wooden building built by the Berean Baptists on the Baptist lot on North Church Street, and dedicated November 29, 1859. Full-size xerox copy of the engraving facing page 205 of E. L. Bailey's History of the Abington Baptist Association. The ancient Greeks used only the post-and-lintel system for the construction of their buildings. The basic unit of this simple and very ancient system of construction consists of two or more uprights, or "posts," supporting a horizontal beam, or "lintel." The ancient Greeks developed three highly specific forms of post and lintel construction, and these were the Doric order, the Ionic order and the Corinthian order. In each of these three orders the form of the column (the post) and of the entablature (the lintel) is carefully defined. The oldest, sturdiest and most severe of the Greek architectural orders is the Doric order, and it is the Doric order that is used for the columns and pilasters (flattened columns) on the facade of the 1859 church building of the Berean Baptists.

In his histories of 1898 and 1904, Joslin described the departure of Rev. Bailey from Berean Baptist: "Elder Bailey, when he had been with us 13 years thought it best to resign, which took place in February, 1866." "A very feeling tribute of respect was adopted by the church. The only complaint ever heard by any one in the church was from one of the members, that he did not visit enough."

On February 18, 1866, Rev. Bailey preached his farewell sermon, having served Berean Baptist for nearly 13 years. During his pastorate 51 new members were added by baptism and 62 were admitted by letter, making the total number of additions to the church membership 113 in the period January 1, 1854—February 18, 1866.

CHURCHES IN CARBONDALE, 1842

The four buildings in this "old print" are hard to identify, but presumably one of them, perhaps the second one from the left, is the meeting house of the Methodist Society, the building which was purchased by the Berean Baptists in 1850 and moved to the Berean Baptist lot and there "remodeled and repaired." Here is the evidence: from the Eleanor Pritchard Jones Centennial History First Presbyterian Church of Carbondale, Pa. (Carbondale, Penna: June, 1929) pp. 21-22 we learn that the Methodists and the Catholics were organized in the Fall of 1830, that the Methodists built their first church in 1832 (In 1880 we are told that the first Methodist church building "stood in front of the present site.") and that the Presbyterians completed their meeting house in November of 1834. Durfee's Reminiscences of 1875 (Chapter IV) describes the churches on North Church Street in the 1830s thusly: "But we go back in the history of Carbondale forty years (i.e., the mid-1830s), to the time when there was but three small churches in the place. The Presbyterians had a very neat little church, without dome or steeple, gothic style, just finished by Henry Johnson, builder. The Methodists and Episcopalians owned one together where the present Methodist church now stands. Each occupied it on alternate Sabbaths, under an agreement that at any time when the Methodists should pay the Episcopal Society $200, they would surrender up to them the entire use of the church, which was done under the administration of Rev. A. J. Crandell, when the church became a chartered institution. The Catholic church, then quite an inferior building, soon gave way for the one which so recently had to be removed to give place for the present noble structure, which would seem to well nigh defy the ravages of time."

1873 atlas map. Detail, showing the same area as in the 1872 "bird's eye" lithograph. Notice particularly that the two Catholic buildings located on the 1872 lithograph are here not indicated. Can the smaller of the two—the one adjoining the Berean Baptist building—have been removed between 1872 and 1873? Moreover, the distance on the 1873 ground-plan map between the "BAP. CH" and the "CATH. CH" seems noticeably less than that which seems to be indicated for the same distance on the 1872 lithograph. Unless Berean's neighbor on the south, "D", was removed between 1872 and 1873, this author cannot account for the fact that the 1872 "bird's eye" lithograph shows five church buildings in a row and the 1873 ground plan shows only four buildings in the same spot. In the 1890 aerial view (see Bibliography), the four buildings shown on the 1873 ground plan map are shown in elevation, just as we would expect to find them. Hendrick at Plymouth, Michigan in 1853; died in Philadelphia, Pa., March 13, 1895). Studio photograph, 4" X 5 1/2", in collection of Mrs. Rebecca Colville; copy print by DWP. Mr. and Mrs. Hendrick's prominence in Carbondale and in Berean Baptist affairs has been unequalled. A biography of Mr. Hendrick, giving the details of his ancestry, family, and business activities is included in 1897 (pp. 942-944, 947). For over a century, Mr. and Mrs. Hendrick and their descendants have been active members of Berean Baptist Church, and during this time their financial support of Berean Baptist has been lavish.

Eli E. Hendrick, a leader in the circles of manufacture and commerce in Carbondale, was "the most public-spirited citizen of this city, and the most liberal benefactor the Berean Baptist Church has ever known" (Rev. H. J. Whalen, in 1904). In his autobiography of 1902 (p. 291), Rev. Grow (Mrs. Hendrick's brother-in-law) penned the following eulogy to Mrs. Hendrick, who had died a few years previously, March 13, 1895: "Her life has been devoted to the Berean Baptist church, where she filled the office of Sunday school superintendent, president and treasurer of the various women's societies, and was active in every department of the church's work where her labor, influence, and gifts could advance Christ's cause. Nor was it alone in the church that she was missed, for in her wide charities she went beyond church lines, and was as an angel of mercy in the homes of the sick, the poor and the unfortunate."

This photograph was taken in 1951 during the Centennial Celebrations of the city of Carbondale. From our viewpoint on top of the Post Office we see the parade as it moves down Main Street toward Salem Avenue. The first truck in the parade is a Berean Baptist Church float. It is a Sunday School class. On top of the cab of the truck can be seen a little model of a church. For as much of it as can be seen in this photograph, it looks "for all the world" like a model of the wooden Doric Berean Baptist Church that was dedicated in 1859. The text on the side of the truck reads: "Pennsylvania's First Law Religious Freedom." The children on the float are in the photograph a bit too small to be easily identified, but since we know who one of them is we may assume that the group is the Sunday School class that were received as candidates for baptism on March 26, 1953: "After the Business Meeting the Deacons met to interview the candidates for Baptism. Mr. Estabrook asked them if they wanted to play ball, and be a good player, what they would do. Dale Hedden answered, Practice, so Mr. Estabrook told them that was what they should do in their Christian life, practice with kindness, sympathy and above all pray asking the Lord for help and guidance. The following were candidates: David Taylor, Dale Hedden, Rose Carpenter, Charlene Williams, Joyce Cornell, Carrola Rogers, Robert Isgar, James Powell, Diane Owens, Sidney Witts." Snapshot, about 3" X 4", in the collection of Mrs. Walter S. Powell; copy print by DWP.

In the five months between Bro. Bailey's last sermon (February 18, 1866) and the day when Rev. J. B. Tombes accepted the call extended to him by Berean Baptist (July 26, 1866), a great variety of reverends and elders supplied the pulpit, among whom were three candidates. During these five months the pulpit was occupied on all but two sabbaths (Feb. 25 and March 18).

6. J. B. Tombes

came from: Philadelphia, Pa.

went to: Tiffin, Ohio

- July 8, 1866: "Rev. J. R. Tombes of Philadelphia, on invitation, preached for us, with a view to settlement."
 July 18, 1866: "On motion, it was ordered that we give Bro. J. B. Tombes a call to the Pastorate, and that we will guarantee $700 a year salary and that all that the seats may rent for over what has already been taken shall be added to the amount of the salary. It was also ordered that in the event of Bro. Tombes not accepting, a call be extended to Bro. Grow with the same salary."
 July 26, 1866: Rev. Tombes accepts Berean's call.
 Aug. 12, 1866: "Bro. Tombes preached his commencement sermon, on entering upon his labors with us."
 Oct. 7, 1866: Rev. Tombes received by letter into membership.
 Dec. 1, 1868: Rev. Tombes resigned.

"Mr. Tombes was educated in one of the Baptist schools of the North, but his early pastorates were in Southern states" (Joslin 1904, p. 10) "where pastors are in the habit of freely declaring their doctrinal beliefs, and maintaining them by the teachings of the New Testament, and the testimony of history. Mr. Tombes did not hesitate to declare the truth as our denomination understands it. He had full houses, and many were converted. Baptisms took place every Sunday for several weeks. Our neighboring churches began a crusade against him, in favor of their denominational tenets. At the communion season in February he gave the hand of friendship to 87 persons" (Joslin 1898).

Baptism and the Sunday-School were two aspects of Berean Baptist's spiritual life that particularly concerned Rev. Tombes, as the following excerpts from the minutes demonstrate:

Dec. 23, 1866: To-day the Pastor, Bro. Tombes, addressed the Church and Congregation upon the subject of scriptural baptism, showing the common meaning of the word "Baptize" as used among the Greeks in the time of the Saviour--the common mode of administering the ordinance of baptism, in the days of the Apostles and Fathers, and vindicated the Church against the malevolence and jealous aspersions of our pedobaptist (a pedobaptist is one who believes in and practices infant baptism) neighbors.

Feb. 4, 1867: The Pastor briefly spoke upon the subject "the relation of the Church and Sabbath-School," signifying his intention of bringing the matter up at an early day for the consideration of the church.

At a business meeting held March 4, 1867, a previously appointed "Committee on Rules of Order" reported the "Rules of Church Order" as published in "The Baptist Church Manual," compiled by J. Newton Brown with such amendments as were required to adopt them to the Berean Baptist Church charter. To the "Rules of Church Order" Rev. Tombes offered the following preamble and resolutions (which were adopted):

Whereas we recognize our Sunday School as immediately connected with the interests of the Church: therefore Resolved, That we regard the school as worthy our increased regards and support. Resolved, That in order to bring our Sunday School into the more immediate sympathy and co-operation of the Church we will hereafter require that all the officers of said school be elected by the Church. Resolved that the election of officers of the school shall take place the same time as the election of church officers, viz., on the first Monday evening in July of each year.

Further resolutions made at the time by Rev. Tombes define the officers, the duties of the officers, the method of choosing Sunday-School teachers and the activities carried out by the Sunday School. The final resolution states:

Resolved, That the Pastor of the church shall, ex-officio, be the presiding officer of the school, and shall preside at all of its general or public meetings, and shall be free to visit all its meetings, and the meetings of the Board of Officers and Teachers, and to make suggestions and remarks as he may deem proper.

At a church meeting held November 2, 1868, Rev. Tombes requested letters of dismission for himself and his wife to be granted after the close of the month of November. The letters were ordered and the church voted a resolution of commendation and esteem towards Rev. Tombes, copies of the latter were ordered to be forwarded to the "Examiner Chronicle" and the "National Baptist."

In the five months between the time when Rev. Tombes left (December 1, 1868) and the time when Rev. Bailey re-accepted the pastorate at Berean Baptist (May 2, 1869), several candidates and supply ministers occupied the pulpit. Rev. William B. Grow, who had been residing in Carbondale since 1865 and who at his own choice had no regular pastorate of his own, supplied the pulpit for four separate Sundays in March (15, 22, 29) April (11) of 1869. Rev. Grow considered his first calling to be that of an evangelist, and throughout the last four decades of his life his official residence was Carbondale, although he very frequently would go here and there for a week or a month in order to conduct revival meetings and in order to supply temporarily vacant pulpits (on all this, see BBC 2, p. 32; Dec. 21, 1868).

It was just at this time, during the inter-regnum between the pastorates of Rev. Tombes and the second Berean Baptist pastorate of Rev. Bailey that the Berean Baptists began discussing the feasibility of purchasing a house to be used as a Baptist parsonage. On June 7, 1869, slightly more than a month after Rev. Bailey had returned to Carbondale and re-accepted the Berean Baptist pastorate, the Committee on Parsonages reported that they had purchased a house and that partial payment on it had been made. The Committee on Parsonages was then discharged but the committee of ladies who were obtaining subscriptions in order to pay for the parsonage was continued. Joslin (1898) tells us that it was with the advise of Rev. Bailey that the parsonage was furnished.

The house bought was located on the north side of Hendricks Avenue (now Lincoln Avenue) just west of the junction of North Park Street and Hendrick's Avenue (see map above right). It is not yet known from whom the building was bought, but it is known to whom the building was sold in January of 1885:

Jan 22, 1885: At a special church meeting Bro. P. D. Root, Moderator, the Trustees reported that they had sold the Parsonage to W. G. Giles for $2000 and on motion the Trustees were authorized to take all necessary steps for the erection of a new parsonage, (and) on motion, The Trustees were authorized to execute deed to Mr. Giles.

In 1890, Eli E. Hendrick had a map prepared of the grounds of his Carbondale estate (this map is today pasted into a family album owned by Mrs. Rebecca Colville) and on this map the building which had been the Berean Baptist parsonage is clearly marked "Giles." The Giles family ultimately sold the former Baptist parsonage to the Elmer family; the building still stands today.

7. Edward L. Bailey

May 2, 1869: Rev. Bailey began his second Berean pastorate.
 May 8, 1869: Rev. Bailey died; buried at Liberty, Pa.

When Rev. Bailey left Berean Baptist, on February 18, 1866, having served the church for nearly thirteen years, he became the pastor of the Harrisburg Baptist Church and also during his residency at Harrisburg, for three successive sessions of the Legislature, was elected Chaplain to the State Senate. When Berean Baptist asked Rev. Bailey to return to them as their pastor, on February 1, 1869, he accepted their call, but could not return to Carbondale until the Legislature adjourned, although he did come to Carbondale and occupy the Berean Baptist pulpit seven times (14, 21, 28 February, 7 March, 4, 8, 25 April) before he permanently returned to Carbondale and reassumed the pulpit at Berean Baptist, on May 2, 1869.

Joslin's history (1904, p. 10) tells us the following about the first Sunday of Rev. Bailey's return: "At the morning service, after announcing his text, he was taken violently ill, and died within a week, after much suffering."

The following entry in the church minutes also written by P. S. Joslin elaborates:

1869 May 2 At the commencement of the morning service Elder Bailey was taken with severe neuralgia pains in the back, and had to be removed to his residence. He was thought to be improving up to Saturday following, when at about fifteen minutes before 12 o'clock he was taken with a similar pain as on the preceding Sunday, and died in five minutes. His remains were taken to Susquehanna Co., where his relatives reside, on Monday, and the funeral sermon preached there, on Tuesday, at the request of Sister Bailey, by Elder Wm. B. Grow, who also on the Sunday after (April 16) at the request of this church preached a sermon for the occasion, at which the united congregation of the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches attended. A large number of brethren and sisters, accompanied the family and remains to the place of burial.

The Bailey obituary notice, written by "J." (Joslin; cf. BBC 2, pp. 37-38, June 7, 1869) and published in The Advance, provides some interesting facts about his early years and about his personal traits: "Edward L. Bailey was born in the township of Lawsville, Susquehanna county, March 16, 1823. He united with the Baptist church of Liberty, in the same county, in February, 1842, and in the autumn following, began to study with a view to the ministry. After some preparatory studies at home he attended the Hamilton, and subsequently, the Rochester Universities, and finally closed his studies at Union College... In his intercourse with neighbors and acquaintances, he sought never to wound the feelings of any one by any obtrusive presentation of his own opinions. Ever firm in his convictions, whether religious, moral or political, he never would enter into controversy on any topic where he felt that no good could result from it. Through his careful consideration for the feelings of others he had won the universal esteem of all who knew him. As a minister of the Gospel he was earnest and faithful. As a husband and father, he was kind and affectionate--as a neighbor, social, cheerful and sympathetic--and to the poor, charitable, even beyond his ability."

In a most prophetic way--as if he surely knew what was in the planning stages--Rev. Jepson said, in his Church History delivered on December 2, 1888, the last day the Berean Baptists occupied the Doric building, in reviewing the Berean pastors:

Rev. E. L. Bailey had the pulpit fourteen years and gave up the work when the master called him home. In recognition of his self denying labors a permanent memorial to this servant might be erected.

Writing ten years later, Joslin (1898) reports the fact: "The Abington Baptist Association erected a very fine stone over Rev. Bailey's grave in Susquehanna County."

The sudden death of the still quite young (aged 46) Rev. Bailey left the church and the town in a state of shock and deep grief. The minutes of the church meeting of June 7, 1869 tell their own story:

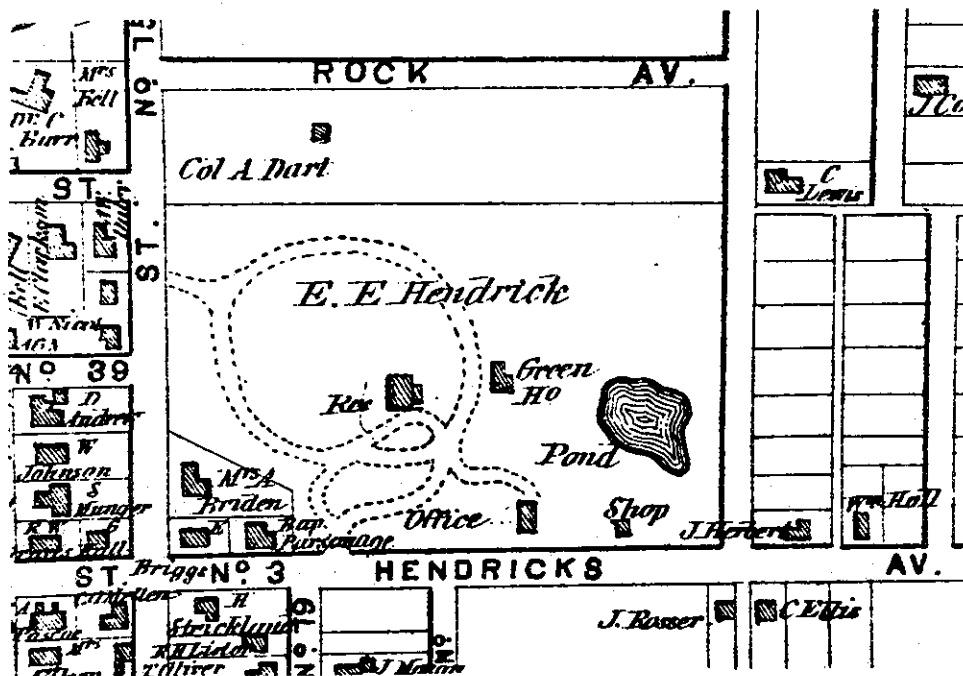

Bro. Grow announced the death of our Pastor, Rev. E. L. Bailey, and recounted some of the circumstances attending his sickness and death, and the part he had taken, with others, in his funeral, of which, the clerk is directed to make record.

On motion of Bro. Parry, ordered that one quarters salary be appropriated for the benefit of Bro. Bailey's family and after paying the funeral expenses the balance be paid to Sister Bailey. It was on motion ordered.

The pulpit committee report that they had secured the services of Bro. William B. Grow as Pastor, until the Pulpit should be regularly filled. On motion of Bro. E. Hall, the action of the pulpit committee was approved. Resolved, that the church accept with many grateful emotions the munificent offer of Bro. William B. Grow to supply the pulpit without salary for the remainder of the first quarter of the current year, for the purpose of giving to the family of our beloved deceased pastor the salary of the entire quarter over and above the funeral expenses. Bro. Parry made a motion which was seconded by a large number.

That a call be extended to Bro. William B. Grow to become the pastor of this church which motion was laid upon the table for action at our next meeting. On motion of Bro. Hendrick the following preamble and resolutions were presented and after being read were unanimously adopted. Whereas, at this first church meeting after the death of our beloved pastor, Rev. Edward L. Bailey, whose sudden death has filled our hearts with grief--whose remains have been consigned to their last resting place, amid the ashes of his kindred, and to whose memory the members have, with the habiliments of mourning draped the church--and everything on so mournful an occasion which love and sympathy have suggested to us, has already been done, therefore be it, resolved that the church remain draped in mourning until the close of the quarter, resolved that we deeply sympathize with our beloved Sister Bailey and her family in this sad affliction yet we can tender that consolation which will disrobe her grief of much of its anguish--in whom he trusted, she trusts.

But now to the business of finding a new pastor. A motion was made and seconded by a large number that a call be extended to Rev. William B. Grow to become the pastor of the church, but Rev. Grow "positively declined" (August 2, 1869) settling as pastor.

8. J. J. Owen

Mrs. Helen Owen

- October 3, 1869: Rev. Owen, on invitation of the church, preached his first sermon at Berean Baptist.
- October 4, 1869: The Church unanimously voted to call Rev. Owen to become their pastor.
- October 7, 1869: Rev. Owen accepted the call of the Church.
- October 10, 1869: Communion Sabbath, after the morning service, Bro. Grow, in behalf of the church, extended the hand of fellowship and welcome to Brother and Sister Owen.
- October 7, 1870: Rev. Owen and Mrs. Owen received by letter into the membership of Berean Baptist.
- January 12, 1873: Rev. Owen died while Pastor of Berean Baptist.

Mr. Owen was born July 25, 1817, on the Isle of Anglesey, Wales, and at the age of fifteen years was sent to England, where he received a collegiate education. He was converted at the age of eleven years, and at fifteen, began to exercise his gifts as a preacher, and soon afterwards was ordained to the gospel ministry. Having successfully served several churches in England, Rev. Owen emigrated to the United States. P. S. Joslin (1904, pp. 10 & 13), in two brief sentences, paints a stunning portrait of Rev. Owen: "He had but recently come from England, and this was his first pastorate (in America). He was a highly educated man and an excellent preacher."

Twice during 1871, Rev. Owen asked local Baptist ministers to conduct the ordination of baptism in the Berean Baptist Church: on Sunday, April 2, Rev. William B. Grow baptized four persons, and, in the late Fall, because Rev. Owen was not well, Rev. James R. Remsen of Aldenville Baptist Church baptized three persons. Had not Rev. Owen, on January 12, 1873, while in the pulpit and about half-way through his sermon, been seized with a paralysis and obliged to be taken home where he died about a quarter past eleven the same night--and was buried on the Wednesday following--we might pass over, without taking notice of, such requested outside help.

The sense of community among the member churches of the Abington Baptist Association is everywhere apparent in the records preserved in E. L. Bailey's book. As we have already seen, Rev. Bailey himself helped Rev. Curtis conduct some revival meetings in Clinton just after the Baptist Church there was rebuilt, after having been destroyed by a hurricane. Now--with this instance of Rev. Remsen's helping Rev. Owen in Carbondale--we have an example of the help going the other way over the mountain. Bailey (1863, p. 165) notes the following about the Clinton Church:

It has been twenty-six years since this church was constituted. During that time they have enjoyed the labors of various pastors for a longer or shorter period, and have also been destitute for some four years, but not of preaching above, perhaps, a month at any one time. They have divided the labors of their pastors with Herick, Bethany, Damascus, Mt. Pleasant, Carbondale and Aldenville churches.

From information recorded in Centennial and ILLUSTRATED WAYNE COUNTY (1902, p. 133), and from information related by his granddaughter, Mrs. Margaret Abbie Remsen Rude--and his granddaughter's husband, Dwight W. Rude--we are able to compile this brief biography of Rev. James R. Remsen:

James Ruton Remsen was born in Brooklyn, New York, on January 19, 1827, and was pastor of Aldenville Baptist Church and Clinton Baptist Church from May 1871 until the Spring of 1888. The Aldenville Baptist Church was formerly an outstation of the Clinton Baptist Church, but on March 1, 1855, Aldenville was duly recognized as an independent church. Though the two were independent churches, they continued to be one pastorate until about 1899, when Rev. C. Wilson Smith became the pastor at Aldenville. We shall have an opportunity to meet Rev. C. Wilson Smith shortly, for from August 17, 1876 until April 30, 1883, Rev. Smith was the pastor at Berean Baptist. Even though Clinton and Aldenville became separate pastorates about 1899, the Aldenville parsonage was in 1902 still the joint property of both churches. Among the ministers who have served both churches are Rev. Newell Callender, Rev. Henry Curtis--whose career at Berean Baptist we have already reviewed--and Rev. J. R. Remsen. Rev. Remsen was a faithful, conscientious preacher, and was widely known. He died at Honesdale, February 22, 1898. He is buried in the Glenn Dyberry Cemetery, Honesdale, and his tombstone is a granite pulpit with a Bible on it opened to the Twenty-Third Psalm. This tombstone was erected and dedicated by the Wayne Baptist Association and the family. In some circles Rev. Remsen attracted considerable attention in his day because he smoked cigars, a practice which in those days was "verboten" for a strict Baptist minister. In addition to his regular pastorate at Aldenville-Clinton, Rev. Remsen supplied the pulpits at Honesdale, Hawley, Ashland, Ten Mile River, Lackawaxen, Jones Lake, and, as we have just seen, Carbondale.

At the time of his death, January 12, 1873, Rev. Owen was aged 55 years, 5 months, and 18 days. Stanton (1923) calls him "a man of much promise." The church minutes of January 12, 1873 say that "as an expounder of the scriptures Mr. Owen had few superiors, and not many equals." 1880 (p. 450) says that "he was a minister of sterling worth and in the prime of life." Joslin (1898) notes that "the topics of his sermons were the wonderful love of Jesus and the glory of God, as displayed in all his works."

The following paragraphs are from the obituary of Rev. Owen that was published in a Carbondale newspaper:

Sudden Death of Rev. J. J. Owen.--Mr. Owen, pastor of the Berean Baptist Church, entered his pulpit in apparent good health, on Sunday morning last, and commenced the services as usual. He had not proceeded far in the delivery of his sermon, before it was noticed that his sentences were disjointed, and that he spoke much like a person trying to talk when overcome with sleep. Soon it was discovered that he had no control of his hands. At this, Mr. Peck and Mr. Kinback went up to the pulpit, and spoke to him, told him he did not look well, and advised him to take his seat, which he did very reluctantly. He then began to realize his inability to proceed with his sermon, and was led from the pulpit, when he said that he would try and finish his discourse in the evening. He was immediately taken home, and a physician called, who told his friends that he was past recovery. In about two hours after, he lost the power of speech, and, by four o'clock, all consciousness. He lingered in this condition until a quarter past eleven o'clock, when he died.

He was a ripe scholar, but no pedant. He possessed rare powers in elucidating the Scriptures, and few ever went from his preaching unedified. His sermons were peculiarly calculated to stimulate Christian love and faith, and lead men to the contemplation of the glory and majesty of the Deity, as beheld in His works. How often he would, in the midst of his discourse, rapturously break out, in the language of the Psalmist: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge." Or, "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?"

Mr. Owen has left a widow to mourn his loss,--a stranger in a strange land, who we hope will receive the sympathy of every one. He has two sons in England, and one who has been a resident here with his father for about two years, and who went back to England only a few days ago.

The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. A. M. Calkins, of Waverly, who was assisted in the funeral services by Rev. W. P. Hillings, of Scranton, Rev. Walter Gallant, of Honesdale, Rev. Mr. Remsen, of Aldenville, and Rev. E. D. Bryan, of the Presbyterian Church of this city. Rev. R. B. Peet, of Trinity Church, was also present. The house was crowded, and an excellent sermon was preached from the 17th chapter and 15th verse of the book of Psalms: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

To the above we need only add that less than a year after Rev. Owen's death, August 3, 1874, Rev. Grow, who was again supplying the vacant Berean Baptist Church pulpit (because Rev. Gault, who was sick, had just resigned) "made a collection among the brethren and friends for funds, raising sufficient to place a headstone at the grave of Bro. Owen valued at $45."

9. John Emery Gault

came from: Second Baptist Church Saint Louis, Missouri went to:

- January 12, 1873: Rev. Owen stricken and died.
- March 17, 1873: Rev. Gault called, and accepted call.
- March 27, 1873: Rev. Gault ordained.
- March 28, 1873: Rev. Gault's letter of dismission from second Baptist Church of St. Louis accepted.
- July 12, 1874: Rev. Gault submits written resignation, to take effect at end of month; July 16, 1874, resignation--verbally this time--again tendered, and accepted.
- July 31, 1874: Rev. Gault's pastorate ends.

On the 3rd of February, 1873, on a motion made by Brother E. M. Peck, Bro. Gault was invited to supply the pulpit for three months and Mr. and Mrs. Eli E. Hendrick were appointed a committee of two to confer with Bro. Gault. At a church meeting on March 3, 1873, Eli E. Hendrick reported that Bro. Gault had agreed to supply the pulpit for three months, and at a special church meeting called on March 17, 1873, for the purpose of calling a regular pastor, Bro. Gault was pronounced to be the unanimous choice of the church, and "notice having been sent to Bro. Gault of his call, he came in, and in a few interesting and impressive remarks announced his acceptance."

Ten days later, on March 27, 1873, a council composed of pastors and brethren from several churches of the Abington Association--invitations were sent to the churches at Honesdale, Aldenville, Scranton, Waverly, Clarks Green, Factoryville, Union, Clifford, Greenfield, and Clinton--convened at the Berean Baptist Church for the purpose of ordaining Bro. John Emery Gault, late of Rochester Theological Seminary, to the work of the Gospel Ministry. The Council organized by choosing Bro. Isaac Bevan, Chairman, and Bro. H. J. Millard, Clerk. The candidate related his Christian experience, call to the ministry and views of doctrine; all of which were highly satisfactory, and the Council proceeded to the ordination service, in the evening, in the following order: Reading Scripture and opening prayer, by Bro. H. J. Millard, of Hyde Park; Sermon by Rev. M. P. Hellings, of Scranton (Text: Gen. XI:5; Theme: "God's Inspection of Man's Work"); Ordaining prayer by Rev. Benjamin Miller of Abington; Hand of Fellowship by Rev. G. J. Breselinger of Dalton; Charge to Candidate, by Rev. Isaac Bevan of Clarks Green; Charge to the Church, by Rev. A. J. Furman of Factoryville; Benediction by the Candidate.

Joslin (1904, p. 13) gives the following information about Rev. Gault:

Rev. Gault was another pastor of the southern type, a faithful preacher and energetic soul-winner. In the first two months of his ministry he baptized thirty-five persons. During his sixteen months' pastorate, sixty-five were added to the church.

Rev. Gault's pastorate ended in July of 1874. Beginning in the May just previous--May 4, 1874--a committee of three was appointed to examine the roof and the bell tower and to report as to the feasibility and cost of altering the front portion of the church (May 4, 1874). On October 5, 1874, the members of the church were invited to contribute towards the expense of the new steps for the front, "the money to be handed to Bro. Grow." On September 6, 1875, the report of the committee of three was passed to the Trustees for their action.

As he had done in the interval after the resignation of Rev. Tombes and before the re-employment of Rev. Bailey, and as he had done in the interval after the death of Rev. Bailey and before the engagement of Rev. Owen, so Rev. William B. Grow did again supply the pulpit. In fact, Rev. Grow--since Rev. Gault was laid up by sickness--supplied the pulpit for the two Sundays (July 5, July 12) immediately before the church reluctantly accepted the resignation of Rev. Gault (July 16, 1874). On the same day on which Rev. Gault's resignation was accepted, Rev. Grow, "on short consideration" agreed to supply the pulpit until the settlement of a regular pastor. On October 5, 1874, on behalf of the pulpit committee, Philander S. Joslin moved that Rev. Grow be invited to the pulpit of Berean Baptist as its pastor. On November 2, 1874, the church unanimously passed the Joslin motion.

At this stage Bro. Joslin returned with the Pastor Elect, who, after being informed by the moderator of the action of the Church, feelingly acknowledged his gratitude to the church for this renewed expression of their love and confidence in him, and in now accepting their call, hoped he should have both their prayer and support to strengthen him in the performance of his duty.

This photograph was taken on Monday night, May 3, 1948, during the HISTORICAL NIGHT PROGRAM. On that evening the history of the church was read by Miss Howells and the reading was illuminated from time to time with "living pictures" and "historical episodes." Episode VII was entitled MISSIONARY SOCIETIES, and was meant to depict the three phases of missionary work undertaken by the women of the church: Mission Study, White Cross Work, Packing Missionary Boxes. The girls and women illustrating this activity are: front row, kneeling left of globe, Miriam ("Mimi") Marr; front row, kneeling right of globe, Alyce Ann Swartz; standing back row extreme right, singing "O Zion Haste," Mrs. Alyce Stephens; back row, left to right: Mrs. Ida Andrews, Mrs. Frances Burdick, Patsy Shoppy (little girl, standing), Mrs. George Miller, Mrs. Grace Moon, Mrs. Jessie Rodgers, Mrs. Eleanor Williams. April 16, 1876: Rev. Grow resigns.

"As I am nearing the end of my life's journey, I feel constrained to make a record of the use God has made of me in drawing the children of men unto Himself." So writes Rev. William B. Grow at the beginning of the preface of his autobiography (299 pages in length), Eighty-Five Years of Life and Labor, published by the author, in Carbondale, Pa., 1902 (title page reproduced at right). Thanks to this autobiography, published when the author was 86 years old, we know a great deal about Rev. Grow, his ancestors, his family, his life, and his thoughts.

About the period of time right after the resignation of Rev. Gault and about his own pastorate in Carbondale, Rev. Grow, who was born October 11, 1816, the eleventh of seventeen children, says in his autobiography (pp. 296-297) the following:

At this time I was approached by some of our people with regard to taking the pastorate, but I did not give them any encouragement, and it was not until the third approach of this kind had been made that I entered upon the work. This was in April of 1874, and for two years we left the Hendrick home, taking up our residence in the parsonage, where we sought to extend a proper hospitality to our people. Under Mrs. Grow's planning, we had every member of our church to eat a meal at our table during the pastorate, inviting them in congenial groups. In this and numerous other services, I saw what she would have been to me had I settled in pastorate instead of working as an evangelist. My pastoral work here was very pleasant, and tended to strengthen the friendships that had been previously formed, and to lay deep and strong foundations for the friendships of all these after years. Closing the pastorate by my resignation in April of 1876, I engaged in the activities which are recorded in the preceding chapters of this book. These labors took me away from home so continuously that I saw but little of the home church life for many years.

Rev. Grow's connection with Keystone Academy went very deep. In his autobiography (p. 120), he modestly relates, after a discussion of his work at Factoryville, the following:

After these relations I could not but have a deep interest in our Keystone Academy, and I count it a joy to have done some labor, made some sacrifices, and commanded some liberal gifts for its better equipment. My annual visit to its commencements for twenty-five years has been a growing comfort. From my earnings, which have never been large, I have been able to devote some money to its needs, and while gifts to other departments of its work will be equal in amount to the scholarships established, my special delight is in the thought that, during all the lifetime of the institution, two scholarships will continue their yearly blessing and benefit upon two worthy young people.

Berean Baptist, too, took an active role in the financial support of Keystone. Although far from claiming to represent the total picture, the following facts and figures reveal that from Sept. 5, 1881 until July 6, 1903, Keystone was many times allocated a sum of money. Although the amount contributed to Keystone frequently was in the $5-$15 range (1887, $10; 1888, $12.50; 1889, $10; 1890, $5; 1903, $5). In 1881 (Sept. 5), out of a total annual church budget of $679.10, Keystone Academy was awarded $125, and in 1884 (Sept. 3), in her will, Mrs. Mary Hallowell, a member of the Berean congregation, left Keystone $200.

When the church had unanimously voted to call Rev. Grow to the pulpit it was P. S. Joslin who personally notified Rev. Grow of the church's decision. When Rev. Grow wished to leave Berean Baptist it was to P. S. Joslin that he, on March 6, 1876, verbally tendered his resignation. Not wishing to leave the church in a lurch, but wishing to firmly yet graciously resign, Rev. Grow suggested that the church might itself state when the resignation would take effect. One suggestion was that it take effect five years hence, but all knew that Rev. Grow wished to leave, and a very reluctant church finally voted to accept the Grow resignation, April 16, 1876.

Rev. Grow, who once (p. 120) referred to himself as "a plain unlettered minister of the Sacred Word," affectionately described at the end of his life his feelings about Berean Baptist (pp. 298-299):

During pastoral interims, I have usually been called upon to do the work of the pastor. In joy and in sorrow I have been brought into the closest fellowship with a multitude of families, and in all of these relations I have sought to show myself worthy of the love and confidence universally bestowed.

In her history of 1948, Louisa Howells remembers Rev. Grow:

In later years of his life he became what might be called pastor emeritus of our church and many of us cherish the memory that he had extended the hand of fellowship to us when we were received into the membership of the church. The W. B. Grow Bible Class was named in his honor.

In the four months between the acceptance of the resignation of Rev. Grow (April 16, 1876) and the date C. Wilson Smith accepted the call of the church to become its regular pastor (August 17, 1876), the pulpit was occupied by at least 8 different persons, one of whom was (April 23, 1876) a Mr. Dunbar (an agent of the A & T Bible Society; Mr. Dunbar preached and presented the claims of the Society; in the budget of the church for 1876, a small amount was allocated to the A & T Bible Society), and another of whom was (July 9, July 16) Rev. C. Wilson Smith of Philadelphia.

As he had done on so many different occasions over a period of some thirty years, Rev. William B. Grow continued to actively participate in Berean Baptist church life throughout the pastorate of Rev. Jepson. Near the end of his autobiography (p. 297), Rev. Grow talks about this participation and about his warm relationship with P. S. Joslin:

During my Clinton pastorate I had the privilege of attending the mid-week prayer and covenant meetings, and at the close of the pastorate of Rev. T. E. Jepson, I was frequently called upon to conduct these meetings. In this work Deacon P. S. Joslin shared the burden with me; and then, as for all years of my life in the Berean church, I found him a "true yoke-fellow." The deacon and I have grown old together. At my coming here in 1865 he, like myself, was in the prime of life; now we are both living in our eighty-sixth year. Brother Joslin is of that type of men whom the Lord must have had in mind when he said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." With unselfish devotion he has given himself to all the interests of our church, and enjoys the love and confidence of old and young.

This photograph of Deacon Philander S. Joslin, who, as we shall shortly see, offered the "Invocation of the Divine Blessing" at the beginning of the week-long Berean celebrations in 1904, was published in the booklet issued by Berean in 1904. There the photograph is captioned thusly: "The venerable clerk of our church was born at Rome, N.Y., April 24, 1817. He united with our church in 1859. In the same year he was elected clerk, and in 1861 he was elected deacon. These two offices he still holds and fills with great honor. Although now in his eighty-seventh year, he is very regular in his attendance upon all the services, including the evening meetings, and is active in the discharge of all official duties." A great deal of information about the ancestors, life, and work of P. S. Joslin is to be found in the biography (pp. 168-169) of him included in Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, a work that was published in 1897.

11. C. Wilson Smith

Mrs. E. Anna Smith

came from: Frankford Ave. Baptist Church, Phila., Pa.

went to: St. Clair, Pa., April 1889

April 16, 1876: Grow resignation accepted.
August 7, 1876: C. Wilson Smith unanimously called.
August 17, 1876: C. Wilson Smith accepts the call.
August 26, 1876: C. Wilson Smith begins pastorate.
September 4, 1876: Letters of dismission from the Frankford Avenue Baptist Church to Rev. Smith and Mrs. Smith were presented and received.
April 16, 1882: Rev. C. Wilson Smith announced his resignation as pastor, to take effect the first of May (BEC 2, p. 123).
April 30, 1882: "At the close of morning service the church was requested to remain, when a paper, testimonial of the esteem of the church for their retiring pastor, was read, and unanimously adopted. A copy which was afterward given to him."

In 1898, Joslin described Rev. Smith in this way:

Elder Smith was a graduate of Surgeon's college, England. The key-note of his sermons was "grace." This was very helpful for any one who labored under the idea of salvation by works.

The portrait of Rev. C. Wilson Smith that emerges from the church records is of a man who is a great organizer, and formulator. He regularized and standardized many of the church procedures. Some of these accomplishments may be sketched here:

(1) Procedures concerning baptism: As it often happens, though nothing be said about a situation, the situation can be inferred from the rules which are laid down in order to correct the situation. Apparently there was a certain sloppiness, perhaps confusion, with regard to the proper procedures which one should follow if one wanted to join Berean Baptist via the route of baptism, for roughly three months after assuming the pulpit:

On Sunday morning at close of service, at the request of the pastor, the members of the church remained when the pastor stated in substance, that he would recommend that names of candidates for membership and baptism be laid before the church at some meeting prior to their coming forward for the relation of their experience. When, on motion of Bro. Grennell, it was ordered, that all persons who give evidence of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, desiring admission to membership should be received without regard to color, and that the names of persons proposing to become members of this church by Baptism, shall be presented to the church at some regular meeting of the Church, previous to the one on which they shall come for the purpose of relating their Christian experience (BBC 2, p. 97; Dec. 10, 1876).

(2) The By-Laws of the Ordinance: Having been the text of a circular letter drawn up and signed by the pastor and the deacons and sent, in February, to each member of the church, "The By-Laws of the Ordinances" were unanimously adopted by the members of the church on March 1, 1880 (BBC 2, pp. 114, 117). The complete text of these By-Laws is as follows:

- In order that every member may have an opportunity to attend the Lord's Supper, the ordinance shall be held in the morning or evening of the first Lord's day in each month, in January in the morning, in February in the evening, and so on alternating throughout the year.
- The Pastor, and in his absence, the Deacons, shall keep a faithful record of attendance and members shall be supplied with communion tickets to be collected at the ordinance, by the deacons.
- Members neglecting to attend for six months, unless they have been prevented by causes satisfactory to the church, shall be understood to have withdrawn from membership and their name shall be erased for non-attendance provided that members failing to attend for five successive months have after the fifth month been reminded of these by-laws, by the Pastor or Deacons, and their non-attendance reported to the Church at the following Church or Covenant meeting following the sixth month, if no satisfactory reason be given, their names shall be erased, and the clerk shall inform them of the action of the church.

(3) As early as November 6, 1876 (BBC 2, p. 95), the month after assuming the pulpit, Rev. C. Wilson Smith requested for his own use--and received--a book for the registration of the names of the church members who attend the ordinances (of baptism and Communion).

During the middle years of Rev. Smith's pastorate, the foreign and home mission societies at Berean Baptist emerged. In her histories of 1948 and 1973, Louisa Howells describes the past and the present activity of Berean's missionary involvement:

Berean Church has always been a missionary church, and organized missionary effort dates back to 1878 when the Woman's Foreign Society was organized with Mrs. E. E. Hendrick as president and two years later, 1880, the Woman's Home Society with Mrs. E. M. Peck as president. About 1912 these two societies united and from that time on were known as the Woman's Missionary Society. In the early days it was customary for faithful women to go to the homes to solicit gifts for missions and from the earliest records Bereans did their part to send the gospel to the far corners of the earth. It was the missionary zeal of such women as Mrs. W. B. Geary, Mrs. Mary Smith, Mrs. John Booth, and others that has made Berean one of the outstanding missionary churches in our state. In 1924, work among the younger women of the church was started by Mrs. A. C. Estabrook and Mrs. George Miller, resulting in the Sunshine Chapter of the World Wide Guild. Through the years several chapters of the Guild were organized. In 1924 we adopted Miss Sigrid Johnson, a missionary nurse in the Clough Memorial Hospital at Ongole, India, to represent us on the foreign field. For twenty-three years the support of Miss Johnson has been an incentive and a glorious opportunity. The fact that we have had a real representative in missionary work has made White Cross work and the packing of missionary boxes a vital service for us. At present we have three active missionary organizations--the Woman's Missionary Society, the World Outlook League and the Irene Jones Guild.

In 1973 Miss Howells brought her survey of Berean Baptist missionary activity up to date:

In later years Berean Church supported Clifford and Rose Mary Gilson, missionaries to India, when their services in India terminated they accepted a pastorate in New York State. Our present missionaries are Dr. Alvin and Dorothy Mundhenk, who are serving in a hospital in Nigeria, Africa in cooperation with the Progressive National Baptist Association.

Rev. Smith resigned from the pastorate at Berean Baptist on April 30, 1882. Many years later, about 1899, Rev. C. Wilson Smith accepted the pulpit at the Baptist Church at Aldenville (IWC 1902, p. 133). Rev. Smith died at the Nugent Home, a home for retired missionaries and ministers, in Germantown, Pa., on April 5, 1900.

Between April 30, 1882, and August 6, 1882, when Rev. J. H. Groff succeeded to the pastorate at Berean Baptist and preached his first sermon, the pulpit was occupied by at least two candidates and at least one supply--Rev. William B. Grow, who on June 4, 1882, preached at the morning and evening services and at the evening service administered the ordinance of the Lord's Supper and gave the hand of fellowship to a new member.

12. John Howard Groff

Mrs. Anna M. Groff came from: Radnor Baptist Church; went to: Shelbyville, Indiana, Mrs. Groff's letter was from the in April 1889

Jersey Shore, Pa., Baptist Church

- April 30, 1882: C. Wilson Smith resignation effective.
- May 21, 1882: Rev. J. H. Groff supplied the pulpit.
- May 22, 1882: Unanimous call to Rev. J. H. Groff.
- August 6, 1882: Rev. J. H. Groff succeeded to the pastorate and preached his first sermon.
- Sept. 14, 1882: Rev. J. H. Groff and Mrs. Groff present to Berean letters of dismission from their former church, and are received into membership.
- Sept. 19, 1882: J. H. Groff ordained at Berean Baptist.
- Sept. ?, 1884: The precise date when Rev. Groff resigned does not seem to have been recorded, but since Rev. William B. Grow was Moderator of a church meeting held on Sept. 29, 1884, we may, it seems, assume that Rev. J. H. Groff had terminated his pastorate before this date.
- October 20, 1884: Rev. P. D. Root pastorate begins.

Joslin (1898): "Rev. Groff was a very plain, but instructive preacher, and was very popular." Joslin (1904): "Rev. Groff was a very spiritual, practical and instructive preacher." Stanton (1923): "Rev. Groff soon won a name for himself as a spiritual and instructive preacher."

When Rev. Groff was ordained at Berean Baptist on September 19, 1882, he became the third of the Berean Baptist pastors to be ordained while occupying the Berean pulpit, having been preceded by Rev. Griffin and by Rev. Gault. Invitations to the Groff ordination services were sent to the Carbondale Protestant clergy--Presbyterian, Methodist and Episcopal Churches--and invitations were sent to the churches of the Abington Association "to send Pastor and one Delegate, to sit in council," and invitations were sent to several pastors in the adjoining associations to be present at the ordination to the Gospel Ministry of J. H. Groff. Pastors and delegates from the following churches attended: Abington, Abington Valley, Blakely, Peckville, Clarks Greene, Clifford, Chestnut St., Hyde Park, Greenfield, Mill City, Clinton, Homestead, Passyunk, Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, Union, Welsh Baptist Carbondale.

From among those assembled for the ordination services, Dr. George Freen of Wilkes-Barre was chosen Moderator and Rev. J. R. Remsen of Clinton was chosen Clerk. Dr. Bevan of Clarks Greene led in prayer. The candidate was then invited to state his Christian experience, call to the ministry, and doctrinal views, which he did--so the careful notes made at the time by the Berean church clerk, Philander S. Joslin, tell us--"in a very clear and satisfactory manner," so that the council unanimously voted to proceed to ordination." In the evening of the same day, the ordination was completed. The evening service consisted of: scripture reading, introductory prayer, sermon, ordination prayer, Laying on of hands, Hand of Fellowship, Charge to Candidate, Charge to Church, Final Remarks by Moderator. It will be seen from this enumeration of the component parts of the services to ordain a minister that the service is quite similar to the ordinance of Baptism--albeit one of a higher level. Rev. Groff was ordained September 19, 1882.

Building No. 6: The Romanesque stone building dedicated April 1, 1889

1. Initial planning.

It was during the pastorate of Rev. J. H. Groff that the initiatory steps were taken that led to the erection of the stone Romanesque building on the northwest corner of Lincoln Avenue and North Church Street. In his history of 1904 (p. 14) Joslin relates the following:

In 1882 the interest in the church increased, seats were in demand, and the seating capacity limited. Both congregations and Sabbath-school grew in numbers, so that early in 1884 a move was made to enlarge the audience and Sabbath-school rooms. An architect suggested alterations and made estimates of cost, but they so far exceeded our expectations that the plan was dropped.

Joslin, in the church minutes, recorded the details of these deliberations concerning the prospect of making enlargements to the Greek Doric building--dedicated November 29, 1859--and these minutes reveal that the Greek Doric building was also in need of some repairs. On April 14, 1884, a Committee of Estimates was appointed to determine the probable cost of the work proposed, and this Committee reported on April 17 that the entire improvement and repairs would cost about $3,700, and "On inquiry of the Committee they thought that $2500 would build the annex and (make the) necessary repairs without doing anything about the front of the church as talked of. A motion was then made that if $2000 was pledged from reliable parties that the church proceed to make the repairs, relying on future subscriptions to fully pay for the work, which was adopted" (BBC 2, p. 138). And too, the furnace in the Greek Doric building had been causing a problem for some time as well. During the pastorate of Rev. Gault the Trustees were directed to have the furnaces repaired or renewed immediately (BBC 2, p. 65; Oct. 6, 1873), and during the pastorate of Rev. Groff a "committee on stove for basement" was appointed and directed to purchase a stove (BBC 2, p. 83; Dec. 7, 1875, March 6, 1876). And the parsonage, too, had been the cause of a sustained drain on the treasury. During the C. Wilson Smith pastorate repairs were ordered (Nov. 6, 1876) and undertaken shortly thereafter (BBC 2, pp. 95-96), and again in the Summer of 1882 more repairs were necessary on the parsonage--at a meeting on July 28, 1882 (BBC 2, p. 125), the church voted "to make no improvements beyond what was absolutely necessary." All of these expenses were of course trying on both the patience of the members and on the resources of the treasury. The total budget in the year 1881 was $679.10, and out of this amount $141.00 was spent on the "church edifice" (BBC 2, p. 122). But all was not bad news. In the late Fall of 1881, "it became known that one of our heating furnaces had become past repair, and the question came up, on the necessity of procuring a new one, when Mr. E. E. Hendrick, having one out of use which was yet very good, presented it to the church. On putting it up it was found necessary to procure some new parts of it, when on motion a committee (was appointed) to solicit funds for necessary repairs" (BBC 2, p. 128; November 2, 1882).

At the end of July, 1884, at a special church meeting at which Rev. Groff presided, Brother Peck stated that the object of the meeting was "to consider the projected of selling our present church edifice, and building anew on another site"; moreover, at this same special church meeting "the Trustees were authorized to offer the building to the Father Mathew Society, with power to sell, at any price, in their discretion they saw fit to take, and also to secure a lot for a new building" (BBC 2, p. 141).

The decision to "get rid of the used car and to buy a new one" was made, and on September 29, 1884, a meeting was called "to take into consideration the expediency of securing the lot which we had in contemplation of building a new church upon, before being disappointed in effecting the sale of the old building." At this same meeting a motion that the church secure the lot was moved, and carried. The Trustees were authorized "to use the means they deem best for raising the money to pay for it." Mrs. E. E. Hendrick and Mrs. R. H. Smith were appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions from parties outside of the Church, and E. M. Peck to see the members of the church, and, on motion, the Trustees were ordered to purchase a furnace for the church and to have proper repairs done on blinds and windows of the church (BBC 2, p. 142; Sept. 29, 1884).

At a meeting on October 20, 1884, Brother Peck "stated the necessity of securing the lot immediately, and that the Trustees must be authorized by the Church to secure the lot by borrowing money. A vote was taken and decided in the affirmative," and on motion, Rev. P. D. Root was called by the church to become the regular pastor (BBC 2, pp. 142-143), Rev. J. H. Groff having resigned at some time just previously.

13. Parley D. Root

Mrs. P. D. Root

came from:

went to: New York state in April 1889

Sept. 1884: Rev. J. H. Groff resigned.

Oct. 20, 1884: Rev. P. D. Root began his Berean pastorate.

Feb. 25, 1885: Letter from West Winfield Baptist Church recommending Rev. P. D. Root and his daughter, Miss Carrie L. Root, to membership with Berean was read, and received accordingly.

May 13, 1886: Mr. P. D. Root presented a letter from West Winfield Baptist Church, recommending her to membership at Berean, upon which she was cordially received.

Oct. 1, 1887: Rev. P. D. Root's resignation took effect.

Rev. and Mrs. P. D. Root. Studio photograph by Edson, 3 5/8" X 5 3/8", in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner, copy print by DWP.

Joslin tells us the following about Rev. Root:

Mr. Root, in spirit, was much like Elder Tombes. He believed that the new Testament contained Divine teaching for faith and practice, and that the Baptist church as near as possible adhered to that belief, and all others who departed in any particular from that law, were not fulfilling the command of Christ. Holding such a belief, he was not backward in proclaiming it (1898). He was a strong and able preacher (1904, p. 13).

Immediately on coming into the pulpit at Berean, Rev. Root took an active part in the important meetings regarding the purchase of a lot on which to build a new church, the sale of the old church building, and the sale of the old parsonage and the building of a new one. About the latter we learn, again from Joslin's notes (BBC 2, p. 143), that on January 22, 1885, the Trustees reported that they had sold the parsonage to W. C. Giles for $2,000, and further that the Trustees were at that time authorized by the church "to take all necessary steps for the erection of a new parsonage" and "to execute the deed to Mr. Giles."

In the meantime, plans and estimates for the new church were undertaken, and the various schemes used to raise the money necessary in order to carry out the contemplated grand plans were continued. At a church meeting on March 2, 1885, "The Trustees reported plan of Church as submitted by Bro. W. H. Dennis, and estimated cost of the same as $9500. It was urged that the remaining subscriptions be collected and paid on the lot, and that new subscriptions be solicited to complete the payment of the purchase money on the lot" (BBC 2, p. 144).

Berean Baptist was at this time--in the early Spring of 1885--quite obviously on the verge of taking a major step. They had sold their parsonage, they had begun the proceedings and collected most of the money for the purchase of a lot on which to build a new church, and they had received at least one plan, with a cost estimate, for their contemplated church building, and yet, astonishingly, there were some in the membership who hesitated. On April 28 (BBC 2, p. 147) a special meeting of the church convened "to consider the feasibility at this time of going forward in the building of a New Church. Remarks were made by the Moderator (Rev. Root) and Brethren Peck, Kent, Joslin, and Sisters Hendrick and Smith, when on motion to test the voice of those present that we made arrangements for building and push it this present season, about one half of those present voted for it and balance mostly did not vote at all." This was obviously a time when strong and confident leadership was required in order to carry the day.

In July, 1884, the Trustees had been authorized to sell the Greek Doric building to the Father Mathew Society at whatever price the Trustees deemed fit. The Father Mathew Society was obviously quite interested in purchasing the building, for on May 2, 1886, a special meeting of the church was called in order to consider an offer which the Father Mathew Society had made. "Bro. Peck, chairman, Board of Trustees, stated the offer of the Father Mathew Society to be $4,500 with the title of the D & H Coal Co. which, he stated, would cost $1000. After some debate, in which the advantages as well as the disadvantages to us would be, it was proposed that the vote be by ballot, which was carried. Tellers were appointed and the ballot collected and counted, resulting in 30 votes for sale and 23 against it. On motion, the Trustees were authorized, with Pastor Root as Chairman, to open books for subscriptions for monthly payments for the purpose of building a new house of worship" (BBC 2, pp. 151-152). This was May 2, 1886, when the church voted to sell their building to the Father Mathew Society for $4,500. Apparently after this time it was deemed advisable to up the price just a bit, for on June 13, 1887, at a specially called church meeting, "Bro. Peck said he had voted in favor of selling the church property for $4,500. He made a motion to reconsider the vote taken at the meeting of May 2. After some discussion, the vote to reconsider was carried unanimously. Bro Evans moved that the price be fixed for the church building and lot at $6,000, which was adopted" (BBC 2, p. 152).

The precise details of the erection of the new parsonage on the lot at the northwest corner of Lincoln Avenue and Salem Avenue have not come down to us. There seems to be no doubt whatsoever, however, that the new parsonage was built during the pastorate of Rev. Root, that is to say before October 1, 1887.

At a special church meeting, September 19, 1887, Rev. Root "asked that the term of his pastorate should expire October 1st, and that letters should be granted to himself, Mrs. Root and Cora Root, following the same by some remarks in regard to his closing pastorate. After some remarks by members the clerk (P.S. Joslin) tendered his resignation to take effect at once. Resignation accepted. It was moved and adopted that resolutions should be framed and presented to the Pastor commendatory of his labors in this church, and that Brothers Kent and Chase be a committee to prepare same" (BBC 2, p. 159).

Whereas our Pastor Rev. P. D. Root has felt it to be his duty to tender his resignation as Pastor to take effect Oct 1st Resolved that it is with respect we in accordance with his request accept the same Resolved that in his labors in our Church and community we recognize the faithful and efficient work of an earnest Christian minister Resolved that we cheerfully commend him to the Church of which he is to become pastor and bid him God speed by our words and by our prayers By order of The Berean Baptist Church Carbondale, Pa. Sept. 19, 1887 E. A. Kent C. S. Chase Committee (BBC 2, p. 160; Oct. 3, 1887).

came from: Utica, NY. went to:

October 1, 1887: Root resignation effective.

October 31, 1887: Pulpit Committee authorized to call Jepson.

November 31, 1887: Jepson letter of acceptance (dated Nov. 9) received and read to church.

December 1, 1887: Rev. Jepson begins his ministry (Joslin 1904, p. 13).

December 8, 1887: Rev. Jepson and Mrs. Jepson received into membership by letter.

June 25, 1899: Pastor Jepson preached his farewell sermon.

On January 31, 1888, at a specially called church meeting, Bro. Peck reported that the Trustees had disposed of the church edifice (the Doric building) for $4750, $4000 of which had been paid and deposited in the Bank to the credit of the Berean Baptist Church and the balance--$750--had been secured by judgement note which had been entered against the property. Right after the announcement of the sale of the Doric building, the Church voted to build a new building and to appoint a building committee (which turned out to be the Trustees) with authority to raise funds by subscription and by loan. Also, on January 31, 1888, the attention of the church turned to the matter of a plan for the new building. Bro. Peck reminded the church that "some three years ago (March 2, 1885) the Trustees had been empowered to secure plans for the building but that it (the plan secured from W. H. Dennis) has been relinquished some time ago" (BBC 2, p. 167). At a meeting of the church, March 1, 1888, detailed deliberations transpired concerning the plan which would be built:

"At the close of prayer meeting Bro Peck exhibited to the church a plan of a new church edifice which had been selected from others by the building committee as the most appropriate to the wants of the church. This plan was gotten up by T. E. Lacy arch. of Binghamton, N.Y. He also showed plan of H. Bolton of Philadelphia Pa, and from A. C. Hall & Bro. Arch of Carbondale, Pa. Bro. Peck stated that the estimates on either building were about the same amount that is 9 or 10,000 dollars. After some remarks by Pastor a motion was made by S. F. Lingfelter seconded by C. Bailey that church adopt the plan selected by committee. Motion was carried. Bro. Peck after stating the cost of a stone structure would swell the above amount (which called for wood) from 40 to 50 per cent asked the church to further instruct committee. After some remarks by various members Bro. A. C. Hall made a motion that the question of material to be used should be left to the judgment of committee, the Pastor here stating that whatever that body decided upon should be heartily endorsed by the church and that motion being seconded by Bro. Tyler was carried unanimously. A motion was then made and carried that architects presenting plans which had been discarded should be tendered thanks for their services. The subject of raising funds for the new building was then discussed and the committee having at a previous meeting agreed upon the plan of monthly subscription a motion was made and carried that the Pastor appoint persons to solicit said subscriptions. Bro. Peck here stated that the mortgage had been cancelled and that the note ($750) given by Jas. Norton to secure balance of purchase money had been paid."

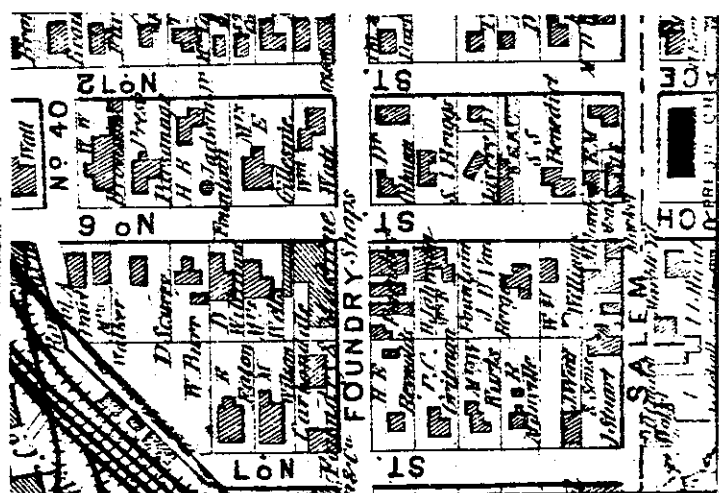

Joslin (1904, p. 13) says the following of Thomas E. Jepson: "Mr. Jepson was direct, convincing and spiritual in his sermons, and had no superior as a leader of prayer meetings. During his pastorate, Monday evenings were set apart and free for all to consult him upon spiritual things."

At some time between 1873, when the map reproduced below was published, and April 26, 1888, when excavation for the church building was begun at the lot on the northwest corner of the intersection of Lincoln Avenue and North Church Street, the J. Benjamin & Co. steam foundry, which had opened for business on this site in 1830, vacated the premises, and moved their operations to Electric Street.

The Benjamin & Co. Foundry was later taken over by Van Bergen & Co. The Romanesque stone building that was built on this corner and dedicated April 1, 1889, was destroyed by fire on August 21, 1968. On April 20, 1979, Rev. Arthur W. Meneely reported to the author that when the roof was off of the church after the fire, a sump pump was brought in, and in the course of excavating for pillars for the new building, the builders found that deep down on this site there was river bed gravel--sandy gravel. "I was told," Rev. Meneely related, "that Racket Brook Creek used to run there."

At some point after March 1, 1888, T. E. Lacy was replaced by A. C. Hall as the architect who would build the church, for in her histories of 1948 and 1973, Louisa Howells tells us that "plans for a new church were presented by several architects and those prepared by A. C. Hall of Carbondale were accepted." At a business meeting held May 3, 1888, the church voted to build a church of stone:

Bro. Peck in opening the meeting stated that the committee had used great effort in securing bids that were in accordance with the expressed wishes of the Church; and that the Committee had instructed him to state that in their opinion the price now obtained was very reasonable it being $19,000 for a stone structure and $15,000 for wood and that the committee were unanimous in recommending to the Church that the bid for stone be accepted. After some pointed questions and able discussions on the subject it was moved that a ballot be taken as to whether we should build of stone or wood. Ballot was taken... resulting as follows--Stone 32 Wood 3.

On the 26th of April, 1888, excavations were begun at the northwest corner of Lincoln Avenue and Church Street, and on June 27, 1888, with "impressive exercises" the corner stone was laid for the Berean Baptist stone building. On December 2, 1888, the Berean Baptists held their last services in their Doric building and on April 1, 1889, the new stone building was dedicated. In an article entitled "Dedicating the New Church," which appeared in the Carbondale Leader on April 2, 1889, we are given an extremely vivid account of the details of the dedication the day before of the Berean Baptist Church building on the northwest corner of Lincoln Avenue and North Church Street. The afternoon services were of a congratulatory nature and were divided into three parts--praise, prayer and history. Rev. Jepson presented the "Review of the Church"--the historical part of the program--which we have already here examined in some detail. We may therefore pass on immediately to the report of the remarks made by the Chairman of the Building Committee, E. M. Peck, concerning the cost of the new building:

What the Church Cost. E. M. Peck reported for the Building Committee. The old church was vacated in February, 1888. Excavations for the new one were begun April 26 and the corner stone laid June 27 of the same year. The financial part of his report showed that the receipts had been as follows: From the old church, $4,750 less debt for the ground of $1,659.95; interest on deposits $17.55; amount of subscriptions $4,585.61, making a total of $7,697.21. The church cost $19,786.86, leaving an indebtedness of a trifle over $12,000. Aside from the cost given above are to be added the organ, bell, windows and other memorials which are not included in the liabilities. The report of the building committee returned thanks to the architect, contractors, ladies and contributors to the fund.

Following the report of E. M. Peck, Rev. David Spencer, of the Penn Avenue Baptist Church, Scranton, read a lengthy paper entitled "Our Memorials," in which he enumerated the many gifts made by individuals and organizations to the new church. The entire text of Rev. Spencer's paper was printed in the newspaper, and we reproduce portions of it here:

It is with great pleasure that I join you in these services and most heartily do I tender my congratulations on what I see in this unique and beautiful house of the Lord. You have built for the present and in the future, in many respects old things have passed away and all things have become new, but the past has not been forgotten--sacred names of other days mingle with equally sacred names of the present in this edifice. In the gifts in memory of the workers of other days there is a beautiful tribute of respect and appreciation.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF CARBONDALE, PA. 1872. Detail, showing "6 Benjamin & Co's Foundry & Machine Shops" "7 Benjamin & Co's Office"; photographic copy print by DWP.

Yonder is the memorial window to that good man--that indefatigable worker, the historian of the Abington Association, your former pastor, Rev. E. L. Bailey, the generous, filial and beautiful gift of his worthy son, Dr. D. Leland Bailey.

There also is the window, memorial to Rev. J. J. Owens, during whose brief life in this his only pastorate in this country he won so many hearts to him by his many excellent qualities and whose body rests in your own pioneer city--beautiful and worthy tribute from the King's Daughters.

Nor has deacon Homer Grennell been forgotten. He who was the important pillar in this church when the former building was erected, giving $1,000 and more towards its construction. His was a life of service to the Master and for the church and most appropriately does his esteemed widow, Mrs. F. M. Grennell, and adopted daughter, Mrs. Wm. R. Baker, give yonder window in his memory.

An adopted son, Alva Dolph, very kindly remembers good deacon John Showerman, and a token of love and gratitude to him places in this structure a window to his memory.

Many a rose is born to blush unseen, and waste its fragrance on the desert air. Not so, however, with the beautiful rose window over this platform, the graceful gift of Miss Mary Hendrick and Mrs. Lillian Colville, members of a family in whose hearts this church for more than a quarter of a century has found a warm and helpful place.

To me the "whatsoevers" of the Bible are very interesting, and when this unique and majestic audience room, needed a corona for its special use when the shades of night should gather, you had a society ready to do "whatsoever" their hands found to do, and so that brilliant chandelier is the gift of your willing handed "Whatsoever Society."

I love to hear the sound of the church going bell. Its tongue in clarion notes rings out to homes and reaches ears as the voice of the living preacher cannot, and its every ring is a sermon, an invitation, and a warning, whose power God has honored and will continue to do so. I congratulate you on the possession of a sonorous, sweet-toned bell, to whose pleasant call we have responded in gathering for this service. God bless the generous donor, Mrs. Mina F. Nickerson, a former member of this church and now an active worker in the Baptist church of Afton, N.Y.

The communion table and stands for the platform, yet to come, are the gifts of Mrs. Everson's circle of "the King's Daughters."

Nor can I close these references without speaking of the Ladies Aid Society which has so beautifully carpeted this house. Most gladly do I salute these women who labor with their noble pastor in the gospel.

The new building completed and dedicated, the Berean Baptists now sponsored a Bible School Convention (Sept. 3-5, 1889) and invited in two evangelists to conduct revival meetings--Rev. Thomas Nedham, who came on November 13, 1889, and led meetings for two weeks, and Rev. D. L. Chubbuck of Boston, who came on February 14, 1890, and preached for a couple of weeks. As a result of that convention and the work of those two evangelists, a great tidal wave of conversion took place, and on February 2, 1890, 35 persons who had been baptized in the preceding few weeks or received by letter or experience were present to receive the hand of fellowship. On June 7, 1891, the 77 members of the church who had been received since the last communion were extended the hand of fellowship.

The Romanesque stone building at the northwest corner of North Church Street and Lincoln Avenue, dedicated April 1, 1889. The ancient Greeks used only the post and lintel system for the construction of their buildings. A more advanced means of spanning the distance between two posts--by means of an arch composed of separate wedge-shaped blocks called voussoirs (the voussoir at the top or center of an arch is called the keystone)--was invented and extensively used by the ancient Romans, the successors in the Mediterranean world of the ancient Greeks. In the early Medieval period (1000-2000) a style of architecture which made extensive use of the round arch as its fundamental unit was used to build an enormous number of churches. This early Medieval style has by architectural historians been labeled "Romanesque" (like the Roman). At the end of the 19th century in America a great many churches were built and the style of architecture used to build them was the Romanesque style of the early Medieval period. And so—to summarize—when the year 1898 rolled around, the Berean Baptists had not only a brand new parsonage and a brand new church building, but also an extremely large and enormously active church membership. What could be better circumstances than these under which to celebrate a jubilee! Not only did the Pastor and Elder Grow arrange a program of four days and nights worth of activities but the Church issued an 8-page booklet which details these activities. In addition, the newspaper covered all of the activities of the jubilee celebrations—Monday, February 28, Wednesday, March 2, and Thursday, March 3—with exhaustive articles: "THE BAPTISTS' GOLDEN JUBILEE, Commencement of the Celebration in the Tabernacle, Auditorium Beautifully Decorated for the Occasion—Rev. T. E. Jepson, the Pastor, Preaches the Annual Sermon, 'Our Jubilate' Interesting Facts About the Growth of the Church"; "HISTORY OF THE BAPTIST CHURCH, Deacon P. S. Joslin Gave an Interesting Sketch"; "CLOSE OF BAPTIST JUBILEE, Last of Services Held Yesterday Evening, The Pastor Receives a Testimonial From the Congregation—He Compliments the City Papers in His Reply—A Historical Sermon by Rev. S. J. Arthur."

And, finally, let us leave the Jepson era by having a piece of cake! Mrs. Jepson's recipes for lemon loaf cake and sponge cake apparently met with local approval, for they were included in The Carbondale Cook Book of Tried and Tested Recipes (1912, pp. 101, 108), a publication prepared by the young women of the Carbondale Methodist Episcopal Church:

Lemon Loaf Cake. One cup of butter, two cups of sugar, one-half cup of milk, four eggs, two and one-half cups of flour, two teaspoons baking powder, a little salt. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, add the eggs unbeaten. Mix well, add other ingredients. After mixing all well, add another half cup of milk and one-half cup of cornstarch. Flavor with nutmeg and grated rind of a lemon.

Sponge Cake. One cup of sugar, one cup of flour, yolks of four eggs, one-half cup of water, two teaspoons baking powder, beat eggs and sugar very light, add water, and baking powder sifted with the flour. Beat again and flavor with the grated rind of a lemon.

During the eight months between the farewell sermon of Rev. Thomas E. Jepson (June 25, 1899) and the beginning of the pastorate of Rev. H. J. Whalen (4 March 1900), a large pulpit committee invited six different candidates for the pulpit to come and preach, with the result—it was the custom then for candidates to preach for at least two consecutive Sundays—that the pulpit was during these eight months regularly supplied for all but a few of the Sundays. Rev. H. J. Whalen, of Honesdale, was one of these six candidates, and, on invitation, he preached on the morning of January 28, 1900. At the close of that morning service the church organized as a business meeting and, on motion, a call was extended to Rev. Whalen. In the course of the week that followed, Rev. Whalen notified the church that he would accept their call, saying that he would begin his work at the Berean Baptist Church on the first Sunday in March.

March 4, 1900: Rev. Whalen began his pastorate.
March 29, 1900: Rev. Whalen and Mrs. Whalen presented letters of dismission from their former church and were received into membership at Berean.
Feb. 6, 1908: Rev. Whalen tendered his resignation, to take effect on the last Sunday in February, 1908.
Feb. , 1908: Rev. Whalen's pastorate at Berean closed.

Writing in his autobiography in 1902, Rev. William B. Grow, then in his eighty-fifth year, spoke (pp. 297-298) very kindly about Rev. Whalen:

The present pastor, Rev. H. J. Whalen, D.D. began his labors here a month after the resignation of my last pastorate (not Grow's Carbondale pastorate), and during these two years and more my relations with pastor and people have been intimate. I am made to feel very comfortable by the courtesies of both the pastor and the congregation. Dr. Whalen has generously given me the pleasant privilege of extending the hand of fellowship to all that have been received during his pastorate, and as an evidence of the steady growth and progress of the church under his care, I may mention the fact that there has been no communion service, during the two years and more when there have not been members received. At the recent (1902) April communion I had the delight of giving the hand of fellowship to twenty-two. In his ministering to the sorrowing I have had a share in his labors, and in nearly every funeral in the families of the congregation I have participated with him in the service. It is a pleasure to an old minister, which cannot be written out in words, to have for his pastor a man who has in his heart a place for one who has passed the days of his active service, and who also has sense enough to understand that his people do not love him less because of the kindness which they may feel and occasionally express toward an old friend and former pastor.

In 1923, the author of the text of the church history in the booklet issued to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the church says this about the eight-year pastorate of Rev. Whalen:

During his eight years of sterling service the church made great strides. In March, 1904 a three fold celebration was held: the recognition of the fifty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the church, the cancellation of the mortgage and other indebtedness, and the beginning of the fifth year of Dr. Whalen's pastorate. A very fine program was prepared and enjoyed.

The booklet issued by the church on this triple occasion contains not only the complete program for the six days of activities (Sunday, March 6--Friday, March 11), a complete list of the officers of the church and the officers of the church organizations and classes, a detailed history of the church and of its buildings written by Philander S. Joslin, a history of the Ladies' Aid Society written by Mrs. Milo Gardner, the text of the ceremonies at which the church received a chapel organ, a telescope organ, and $3,000 to be used for the purchase of a new pipe organ, portrait photographs of the church and parsonage, Deacon P. S. Joslin, Rev. William B. Grow, and Rev. H. J. Whalen, but also a portion of the original mortgage.

We are told in the church minutes (BBC 2, p. 237) that during the 1904 celebrations that O. L. Utley gave a history of the church debt and of its final cancellation, and that the original mortgage, instead of being burned—as was the customary practice of the time—was cut up into pieces about one by two inches square and pasted into a space provided for it in the report of the Chairman of the Trustees in the booklet, so that every one who bought a booklet—$1 each, according to 1938 Ellin—obtained a piece of the mortgage. The 1938 Ellin history says the following about the booklets which contain these pieces of the mortgage: "Today, these mementoes are very valued articles and highly prized by the children's children of the original members who so faithfully carried the burden in former years." Perhaps one day these pieces will be once again united, perhaps as a money-making scheme. The piece of the mortgage reproduced on page 12 is slightly smaller than the original. Writing about the 1904 celebrations, Louisa Howells tells us (1948) that "in more than fifty years of its existence, Berean Church had never been free from debt. Under the able direction of Dr. Whalen, and through many struggles and self denials on the part of the members, in March 1904, the Church stood free from debt."

Milo M. Gardner was a Trustee of Berean Baptist Church from 1892 to 1899. In 1898, Mr. Gardner, together with Rev. Jepson and P. S. Joslin, organized the arrangements for the celebrations of the Berean Baptist jubilee, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of its organization. Studio photograph by Jewell, Scranton, Pa. in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner, Carbondale, Pa.; copy print by DWP. A great deal of information about the life of Milo Gardner has been preserved in two published sources: a biography in 1897, pp. 484 and 487, and an article entitled "Realized Boyhood's Dreams" published in The Delaware and Hudson Company Bulletin, Vol. 5, No. 4, February 15, 1925.

Harriet Annis Curtis married Milo M. Gardner on January 1, 1883. The couple were the parents of four children: Ray N. Gardner, Burdette Curtis Gardner, Edith A. Gardner, Gertrude Gardner. Studio photograph by D. A. Cramer, Carbondale, Pa., 7 5/8" X 9 5/8", hand-colored, in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner; copy print by DWP.

Joslin (1904, pp. 14-15) stresses the great role played by the Ladies' Aid Society in the payment of church debts in the period following the erection of the new stone building. The early history of the Ladies' Aid Society would doubtlessly be found in the text of the paper entitled, "The Women Helpers in Our Church," read by Lucy Joslin, Tuesday afternoon, March 1, 1898, as part of the celebrations of the jubilee of the organization of the Berean Baptist Church. Mrs. Milo Gardner, in 1904 the secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, prepared a detailed history of the Ladies' Aid Society, and from this history, which was published in the 1904 booklet, we learn: "Forty years of splendid self-sacrificing labors might briefly tell the history of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Berean Baptist Church. It was on November 30, 1864, that a few godly women met at the home of Mrs. P. S. Joslin, a woman of blessed memory, and organized themselves for the furtherance of the interests of the Kingdom of God... The names of the women in attendance upon this first meeting constitute one of the honor-rolls of the church, and are as follows: Mrs. E. L. Bailey, Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, Mrs. P. S. Joslin, Mrs. J. Underwood, Mrs. N. P. Cramer, Mrs. Thomas Samuel, Mrs. Robert Holland, Mrs. Edward Howell, Mrs. John Kase, Ann Sherwin, Charlotte Andrews, Louisa Wilson, Mrs. Thomas Lewsley, Mrs. George Moses, Ann Hall, Mrs. W. B. Grow, Mrs. Homer Grennell and Miss Ella Jones. From the minutes of the second meeting we learn that the committee appointed at the previous meeting presented a constitution which was adopted, after which the society proceeded to the election of officers, the ballots cast electing the following: President, Mrs. E. E. Hendrick; secretary, Miss Ella Jones; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas Samuel. Forty years have wrought many changes, and of its earliest members but few are now living. Among the living are Miss Jones, the first secretary of the society, who resides in Philadelphia; Mrs. Robert Holland, Mrs. W. B. Geary and Mrs. Mary Rivenburg, all of whom are living in this city, and active in all the affairs of the church. In the remembrance of the present secretary, some of our noblest women have been called to their reward, among whom were Mrs. Louisa Wilson, Mrs. John O. Miles, Mrs. George Moses, Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, Mrs. Homer Grennell, Mrs. T. K. Jones, Mrs. Thomas C. Davis, Mrs. Elizabeth Bowen, Mrs. W. B. Grow, Mrs. Nicholas Moon, Mrs. S. F. Lingfelter, Mary J. Correll, Esther Moon Mitchell, Mrs. P. S. Joslin and Mrs. J. E. Bone. The society has had an honored list of presidents, as follows: Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, Mrs. Homer Grennell, Mrs. C. Wilson Smith, Mrs. Thomas C. Davis, Mrs. Mary Rivenburg, Mrs. R. H. Smith, Mrs. A. E. Shields, Mrs. W. B. Grow, Mrs. J. F. Kinback, Mrs. D. O. Jones, Mrs. S. F. Lingfelter, Mrs. I. E. Whipple, Mrs. F. J. Colwell, Mrs. Milo Gardner, Mrs. Wallace Dimmock, Mrs. John Booth, Mrs. Daniel M. Davis, Mrs. E. A. Morgan and Mrs. S. S. Shields. For twenty successive years Mrs. E. M. Peck served the society as secretary, and during the same period Mrs. E. E. Hendrick was the society's treasurer. The society has devoted almost all of its earnings to the property interests of the church. In the earlier years the society assumed a debt of eight hundred dollars on the old church property, which was fully paid, and bought the first parsonage at a cost of two thousand five hundred dollars. The two thousand dollars later realized from the sale of that parsonage was used in the building of the present handsome house occupied by the pastor's family. The present beautiful church edifice, erected in 1888, was dedicated in 1889, with a debt of twelve thousand five hundred dollars resting upon it. In the payment of this heavy indebtedness the ladies have borne an honorable part. The records of the society show that, since its organization until now, the society has paid into the church treasury the magnificent sum of thirteen thousand nine hundred fifty-eight dollars. In addition to this, the ladies also furnished the carpet and chandelier for the new auditorium."

16. Percival Hylton Lynch

came from: Jersey Shore Baptist Church      went to: New Castle, Pa., in 1923

February , 1908: Rev. Whalen closed his Berean pastorate.
 May 21, 1908: Rev. P. H. Lynch given unanimous call to Berean.
 July 2, 1908: Rev. Lynch presented his letter from his former church and was received into Berean membership.
 July 5, 1908: "Rev. Percival Hylton Lynch became our pastor, occupying the pulpit today, administering the ordinance of the Lord's Supper at the close of the sermon."
 July , 1917: Rev. Lynch's pastorate closed (Stanton, 1923).

In her church history written in 1948, Louisa Howells describes the pastorate of Rev. Lynch in this way:

Rev. P. H. Lynch, who was a very well educated man and one of the most eloquent preachers that the Berean Church has had. His splendid sermons attracted large crowds which frequently made it necessary to open the Sunday School room to accommodate the Sunday evening congregations. It was during this pastorate the Billy Sunday evangelistic campaign was held in Scranton and that gave a great impulse to religion throughout the valley. Personal Workers groups were organized and frequently went to smaller churches to conduct meetings. Under Mr. Lynch's deeply spiritual guidance many of our members became titheers, and the church adopted the principle of free will giving.

The 1923 Stanton history describes the Lynch pastorate in this way:

It was another of the outstanding ministries. The revival spirit was abroad. Rev. "Billy" Sunday holding meetings in Scranton, and Dr. Crabill in Carbondale. These meetings gave a great impulse to religion all through the valley. All churches benefited, and as Brother Lynch rose to the situation magnificently, the total increase in members during his pastorate reached the fine figures of three hundred and nineteen. (Note: "The fine figures of three hundred and nineteen" is an incorrect statement. During the Lynch pastorate 634 members were added to the church. The incorrect figures were picked up and repeated by the 1938 Ellin historians and by Louisa Howells in 1948 and 1973.)

Louisa Howells describes the Sunday School during this period in this way:

In this period, the Sunday School increased to such a size it was imperative that something be done to accommodate large numbers that were attending. When the church was built, the tiny room at the left front of the auditorium was the beginner's room and the adjoining room was the primary room. By 1904 we had outgrown these accommodations and the large upstairs room was built; this became the primary department. About 1911, while Mr. Lynch was pastor, the part of the basement under the Sunday School room was excavated and prepared for the primary and junior departments and about eight years later the larger room in the basement was completed. During the years of the rapid growth of the Sunday School, the primary and junior departments were ably supervised by Mrs. Milo Gardner and Mrs. A. C. Esterbrook, the former having spent sixty years of continuous service in Sunday School work and the latter more than forty years. For many years Mrs. George Stanton was superintendent of the beginner's department. The memory of these fine women is precious to all of us, and the hundreds of children whose lives were modeled and guided by their council will always bear the imprint made on them by the godly women. During the same period, the adult department was under the superintendency of Mr. A. S. Lewsley, who served in that capacity for thirty years.

In the Spring of 1912, Berean Baptist celebrated the sixty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the Church and the completion of the extensive building in the church basement. A four-page booklet, entitled "Sixty-fourth Anniversary and Re-opening Exercises, Berean Baptist Church, February 29th to March 10th, 1912," details the program of activities which took place and contains the two-page text of an address delivered by Rev. Lynch on February 26th, 1912.

On the night of Friday, November 7, 1913, a most regrettable event took place at Berean Baptist Church. The details of what happened were reported the following morning in The Carbondale Leader (Saturday, November 8, 1913, p. 1) in an article headlined thusly:

SABBATH-LIKE QUIET PERVADES CITY WHERE LAST NIGHT A MONSTER MOB HELD SWAY
 The Beautiful Berean Baptist Tabernacle Was the Storm Centre Around Which Surged a Crowd of Two Thousand Persons - - - Many Were Merely Bystanders but Hundreds of Hoodlums Stoned the Church in Rage. ROBERT WILSON AGAINST WHOM VENGEANCE WAS DIRECTED MYSTERIOUSLY MADE ESCAPE TO SAFETY Cause of the Riot Was the Fact That Detective Wilson Was Inside the Church Delivering an Anti-Roman Catholic Address. Entire Police Force on Scene but Helpless in Their Effort to Disperse the Mob and Preserve Order.

Robert Wilson, the head of a private detective agency in Scranton and a resident of Dundaff, delivered a speech "down the line" somewhere a few weeks previous to November 7, and, as the Leader reports, someone, a member of the Catholic faction, gained entry to the speech and made a report to the world outside of the content of the speech. "According to his report," the Leader tells us, "many copies of which have been circulated throughout the country, it was the vilest attack ever directed at the Catholic church, its priests, sisters and societies. The alleged speech was couched in such language that females would not be asked to make copies of it. A number of copies of the alleged speech were printed at a job printing office down the valley and were widely distributed among the male Catholics in this city and vicinity. No attempt was made to refute the statements alleged to have been made by the detective and as he was regarded as a religious fanatic who had become crazed on the subject." When it was learned that Wilson would deliver his speech in Carbondale, at the Berean Baptist Church, on invitation of Rev. P. H. Lynch, prominent Carbondale business men attempted to persuade Rev. Lynch to have the speech called off.

"Early in the day the Leader received a statement from a reliable source that the Detective would positively not appear here and a statement was published to that effect in order to restore peace and harmony among all denominations. The report, unfortunately, was not true, as Wilson made his advent into this community that has been known far and wide as 'The City of Eternal Sabbath,' on the 6:15 p.m. Delaware and Hudson train. He was watched closely and it is understood that he was to be placed under arrest as he entered the church but he succeeded in getting in unnoticed. The news, 'Wilson's in town!' spread like wild fire and as the doors were closed for the meeting to begin there were fully a thousand people surrounding the church. Guards stood at the entrances to the church and it was feared that an attempt would be made to force an entrance to the edifice. It was some time after the meeting started that the boys started to throw stones at the stain-glass windows and later on bricks were hurled in the audience. Not satisfied with the damage done to the exterior of the building a gang forced entrance at a rear door of the church and made a thorough search for Wilson doing considerable damage to the interior." The result of the evening's fury was that several hundred dollars worth of damage was done to the church and several persons were injured. "Mr. Wilson had been speaking for about ten minutes when suddenly there came a bombardment of stones through every window in the church, which almost immediately became the scene of a panic. It is remarkable that on one was hurt at that time. The bombardment continued until every window in the edifice had been punctured in hundreds of places. The detective did not stop his lecture, and he seemed to be the least afraid of the howling mob outside. Police were guarding the entrances and for the time being they were able to cope with the angry crowd, whose passion had not been excited as yet to the extreme. But when Mr. Wilson had completed his talk and the audience started leaving the church, the frenzy of the mob exploded into action. About 9:30 o'clock the trouble started in earnest and lasted until long after midnight. Just before the meeting closed some one telephoned the electric light company that a live wire had fallen on a man and to save his life it would be necessary to turn off all the lights. The city was without lights for fully fifteen minutes as a result, and this fact placed the mob beyond the control of the police, who pulled night sticks and revolvers in their endeavor to preserve peace. 'Where is Wilson?' 'Lynch him!' 'Lynch Lynch!' 'Drive both of them out of the city!' 'They are disturbers of the peace!' the mob yelled and roared."

We Owe No Man Anything Except the Blessings of the Gospel

THE original mortgage indebtedness upon our church property was placed in two mortgages of $5,000 each. One of these was given to Mr. John Williams, and the other to Mrs. Emeline M. Peck. The latter of these was satisfied and discharged of record June 21, 1895;

the former one, which had become the property of the estate of Elisha P. Strong, was satisfied and discharged of record March 9, 1903. The temporary loan secured to cancel the Strong claim was paid March 1, 1904, on which date all other indebtedness of the church of every character was fully paid, so that we enter upon the fifty-seventh year of our history owing no man anything except the blessings of the Gospel. The church having adopted, as the jubilee souvenir, a portion of the original mortgages, we have caused the same to be mounted upon this page.

In behalf of the trustees, O. L. UTLEY, Chairman.
WALTER E. BENNETT, Secretary.

At the close of the Sunday morning service on March 6, Rev. Whalen made two presentations. The text of Dr. Whalen's remarks and the responses were printed in the commemorative booklet, and because of the magnitude of the presentations involved, we repeat here large portions of that text:

Dr. Whalen: On the roll of our church membership there are many honored names of men and women who, in the years past, were partners with you in your struggles, but who are now residing in other places and laboring in other churches. Their interest in the old home church--its struggles and triumphs--has never ceased, and their joy today is equal to your own.

Some of these absent ones have a record among us for Christian giving, and your pastor, in correspondence with them concerning this anniversary service, found them desirous of contributing something to the joy of the occasion; and he had only to indicate to them some of our present needs to have placed in his hands the means for meeting these needs.

It is, therefore, my great pleasure to present to the Sunday-school, in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Avery, of Philipsburg, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Nye, of Glendive, Montana, this beautiful chapel organ, for the use of the primary department, presided over by Mrs. Milo Gardner; and further, in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dennis, of Bradford, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Morgan, of St. Louis, Mo., this handsome telescope organ, for the use of the kindergarten department, presided over by Miss Bartlett, and for all uses of the congregation where a portable organ may be required.

Mr. A. S. Lewsley, Superintendent of the Sunday school, accepted those two beautiful gifts in behalf of the Sunday school. Dr. Whalen then continued:

In anticipation of this time of jubilee, there came to me, many months ago, a desire to enhance the joy of the occasion by securing for my people a gift which might be a suitable recognition of their labors, and that might push aside a burden which seemed to inevitably await us when once in full ownership of our property. As time passed this desire became a hope, and the hope became a realization, and it is with inexpressible pleasure and profoundest gratitude to our Heavenly Father that I am able to present to you at this time the sum of three thousand dollars, to be used for the purchase of a new pipe-organ. This gift comes in equal amounts from Mr. Andrew Carnegie, prince of philanthropists, and Hon. E. E. Hendrick, the most public-spirited citizen of this city and the most liberal benefactor the Berean Baptist Church has ever known. To you, members of the Board of Trustees, as the custodians of our church property, I now entrust the papers relating to the gift.

Mr. O. L. Utley, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, rose and expressed the sincere thanks of the Board of Trustees for that splendid gift.

During the four months--March, April, May, June--between the last Sunday of February, 1908, when Rev. H. J. Whalen left to accept a call to the Baptist Church at New Castle, Pa., and the first Sunday of July, 1908, when Rev. P. H. Lynch occupied the pulpit as the regular pastor of Berean Baptist, the pulpit was supplied each Sunday by some pastors who were members of the Abington Baptist Association and by some who were candidates. During these four months, Percival Hylton Lynch, from the Jersey Shore Baptist Church, preached twice, and on May 21, 1908, Rev. Lynch was unanimously called by the church. Having been notified of his call, Rev. Lynch sent a letter saying that he accepted the call of the Berean Baptist Church and that he would begin his labors at Carbondale on the first week of July, 1908.

Among those who had direct confrontation with the mob were J. Russell Jones and George Stanton. "J. Russell Jones... used intemperate language in expressing his opinions of the gathering before the mob with the result that he had to flee for his life. After two vicious blows were landed on his head he ran down Church street followed by a horde of people and at the Palace Creamery, one block from the church, he received protection for which he is indebted to former chief of police J. A. McAndrew and Constable E. J. Neary." "George Stanton, who was outside guard at one of the church doors, was rushed off his feet and badly beaten, before Chief Bell with his revolver drove the crowd back. Stanton was game, though, and with his two eyes swollen and blackened and his face and head bruised, took up his post at the door and from time to time dodged stones and bricks that were heaved at him."

"Strange stories were passed from one to another and each one distorted in the telling. Thus the story that a plan was contemplated of dynamiting the church spread through the neighborhood and frightened women, including the family of Rev. Mr. Lynch, sought safety through the night at homes of friends remote from the scene. The aged mother of Rev. P. H. Lynch bowed with age was reduced to a condition of collapse through fright and had to be removed through the gardens in the rear to a waiting automobile where she was taken by her son to the home of friends and medical assistance summoned. It is feared that her health has received a serious setback by the horrors of the night."

17. Warren L. Steeves

came from:                      went to: In Lima, Ohio in 1923

July, 1917:                      pastorate of Rev. Lynch terminated.
October 18, 1917:              Rev. Warren L. Steeves and Mrs. Warren L. Steeves presented their letters and were received into membership.
1921:                              Rev. Steeves' successor, Rev. Stanton, came in December, 1921.

In her 1948 history, Louisa Howells described the Steeves pastorate in this way:

In 1917, Rev. W. L. Steeves became our pastor. He was strongly evangelistic in his preaching, and during his four years in Carbondale 155 members were added to the church. It was while Mr. Steeves was pastor that we suffered the dreadful scourge of the influenza epidemic. Without thought for himself, he went into the homes, helping the sick and to minister to the dying. It did not matter who the people were or to what church they belonged, the fact that they needed help was all that he cared about. He was truly a pastor in every sense of the word.

18. Frank A. Stanton

Mrs. Frank A. (Annie) Stanton
Helen Stanton

came from: First Baptist Church Salem, N.J.

went to: On leaving Berean, Rev. Stanton "accepted the position of Field Secretary to the Pennsylvania State Association" (Ellin 1938). In 1938, Rev. Stanton was in Scranton, Pa.

December 1, 1921: Rev. Stanton began his Berean pastorate.
February 9, 1922: Rev. and Mrs. and Helen Stanton, on presentation of letters of dismission from their former church, were received into Berean membership.
1928: Rev. Stanton closed his Berean pastorate.

During the second Spring of Rev. Stanton's pastorate (March 1923), the church celebrated the 75th anniversary of its founding, and the commemorative booklet issued on the occasion, Souvenir Program of the Seventy Fifth Anniversary Services of the Founding of Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, March, 1848 to March, 1923, records the week-long program of activities.

Louisa Howells described the Stanton pastorate in this way:

Each minister who served our church has had some particular talent, some phase of work in which he had special ability and Mr. F. A. Stanton, who came to us in 1921, was particularly able as an organizer. He served as assistant superintendent of the Sunday school and did much to build up that branch of the church by promoting much interest among the young people. During the seven years of his pastorate, the church prospered, and the community was benefited by his ministry.

19. Charles A. Fulton, D. D.

came from: Denver, Colorado                      went to:

October 18, 1928: Rev. Fulton began his Berean pastorate. Rev. and Mrs. Fulton were received into the membership of Berean by presentation of their letters of dismission from their former church, in October of 1928.
July 31, 1936: Rev. Fulton closed his Berean pastorate.

The 1938 Ellin history tells us the following about Rev. Fulton:

In 1928, Rev. Charles A. Fulton of Denver, Colorado, ably and graciously acted as a supply pastor for the summer while possible candidates were heard from various places. Finally the choice seemed to center on him and for eight years he was the guiding star and counselor of the members and many others who shared his beneficence in the city of Carbondale. He decided it was for the best to retire from the ministry after 55 years of service for his Master and closed his pastorate on July 31, 1936.

To this we need only add the following remarks about Rev. Fulton from Miss Howells's 1973 history: "It was during the dark years of the depression that Rev. Fulton was in Carbondale and his warm sympathy and generosity made him one of our most beloved pastors."

20. George Robert Ellin, S.T.B.

came from: Central Baptist Church, Atlantic Highlands, N.J.

went to: First Baptist Church, Hollywood, Florida, then
Sidney, N.Y.; died April 2, 1948

Oct. 1936: Rev. Ellin called to Berean (Ellin 1938).
Nov. 1, 1936: Rev. Ellin began his Berean pastorate.
Dec. 5, 1936: Rev. and Mrs. Ellin present letters from Central Baptist and are received into Berean membership.
Feb. 15, 1942: Rev. Ellin's Berean pastorate closed.

Rev. George Robert Ellin, S.T.B. Photograph from 1938 Souvenir Program, 3 1/4" X 5 1/2"; copy print by DWP.

It was during the pastorate of Rev. Ellin that the church celebrated the 90th anniversary of its founding. In the commemorative booklet issued on the occasion, Souvenir Program of the Ninetieth Anniversary Services of the Founding of Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, March, 1848 to March, 1938, the authors of the church history--Mrs. Milo Gardner and Emmons L. Peck--describe their present pastor, who was then in the second year of what would be a pastorate of six years length, as follows:

Rev. Ellin has increased the congregation of both morning and evening services, and added thirty-nine new members. By his forceful preaching and instruction in the Word of God, a deeper spiritual growth has been manifested among the members, resulting in a true sense of their responsibility to give for the work of the Lord, so that obligations are met when due, notes reduced, repairs made, and the achievements of the last years are a fitting climax to the years of struggles and successes, joys and sorrows in the work begun by the little band of seven God-fearing Christians ninety years ago.

We are able to put together a rather complete description of the program for the entire anniversary week, thanks to the information contained in the commemorative booklet issued by the church, and from an article entitled "Berean Baptist Church Founded By Welsh Miners 90 Years Ago," which appeared in (?) The Carbondale Leader on Saturday, February 26. From this newspaper article we learn the details of some of the services.

Sunday Feb. 27: "The Great Commission" will be the sermon theme on Sunday night of the Rev. George R. Ellin, pastor, at the opening of the anniversary. An appropriate program will be presented under the direction of Prof. Oswald Evans, church organist and choir leader. The vested choir will sing.

Tuesday, March 1--Thursday, March 3: Greetings from former pastors and from the clergy of Carbondale will be given at services Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. On Wednesday evening a dramatized history of the church will be presented under the direction of Mrs. William Rundle. Sunday School and Young People's Night will be observed Thursday evening and the Rev. R. B. Deer, executive secretary of the State Baptist Convention, will speak.

Friday, March 4: Home Coming Night will be observed Friday, and a public reception will follow.

The Committee of Arrangements for the Anniversary Week consisted of the following: Chairman, Rev. George R. Ellin; History--Mrs. Milo Gardner and Emmons L. Peck; Dramatization--Mrs. William Rundle and Albert Estabrook; Exhibits--Miss Florence Bateman and W. U. Carey; Publicity and Printing--Fred Hauenstein and Harry Bateman; Speakers and Greetings--Horace G. Likely and Arthur L. Lewsley. At a reception on Friday, refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid Society, The Philathea, Mispah and Gleaner Classes of the Sunday School. Decorations for the week's activities were by Mrs. Bly's Class.

Over the years a great many special classes have been established at Berean Baptist, and the George B. Stone Sunday School class is one of the oldest. George Bingham Stone was a Trustee of Berean Baptist in 1895, 1896, and 1902, and he was a member of one of the pioneer families of Fell Township, and the son of a Baptist minister. Thanks to family records preserved by his nephew, Joseph Wallis, and his nephew's wife, May Cosklo Wallis, we know that George B. Stone was the second child of George W. Stone by his first wife, Eliza Wedeman. G. B. Stone married twice: by his first wife, Carolyn May Everson Stone, he had eight children: Lila, Everett, Leland, Mildred, Carrie, Helen, Louise, Edith; by his second wife, Cora Burlingame Stone, he had one child, Georgianna. George W. Stone received, on April 1, 1877, a Certificate as a Lay-Precacher in the Finch Hill Church (a Free Will Baptist Church) in Greenfield Township. His ministry was principally of a missionary character--he looked after small rural churches, although he officiated at a great many baptisms, marriages, and funerals in the late 1870s and early 1880s in Fell and Greenfield Townships. "George W. Stone with his activities of the church was the possessor of very strong convictions, and (was) often intolerant of the views of other people who adopted the more modern trends in thought and deportment." In 1923, the officers of the G. B. Stone Class were: Mrs. Albert Thomas, President, Mrs. Arthur Perry, Vice President, Mrs. Leon Brush, Secretary, Mrs. Louis Davis, Treasurer. In recent years a great many special classes and groups have been organized in the Church and Sunday School, among which are: W. B. Grow Bible Class, Good Samaritan Class, What So Ever Class, Ever Ready Class, Men's Bible Class of the Sunday School, Beacon Class, Maranatha Class, Philathea Class, Evening Ladies' Aid Society, Gleaners Class, Margaret T. Bly Class, Women's Council (composed of the Ruth, Naomi and Melchiah Circles), Ann Judson Guild, Berean Builders, BYF.

21. Harold Franklin Damon 22. C. Gordon Stone

Mrs. Harold F. Damon
Stuart Damon
Harold Damon, Jr.

came from: went to: San Jose, California in 1979

April 15, 1942: Rev. Damon's Berean pastorate begins.
May 3, 1942: Rev. and Mrs. Damon, Stuart and Harold, Jr. are received into Berean membership on the presentation of their letters of dismission from their former church.
June 11, 1945: Rev. Damon granted a leave of absence.

In her 1948 history, Louisa Howells described the Damon pastorate at Berean thusly:

Rev. R. F. Damon became our pastor in 1942. While he was pastor, Carbondale suffered the worst flood in its history and considerable damage was done to the basement Sunday School rooms, necessitating the laying of new floors. Through his ingenious plan whereby the floor space was divided into blocks and paid for at one dollar a square foot, the necessary money was on hand before the laying of the tile floor was completed. A year or so later, by a similar plan, the indebtedness of the church was paid off, leaving the church without a mortgage for the first time in forty years or the second time in its history. During Mr. Damon's pastorate 153 boys and 4 girls from our church and Sunday School were called to serve our country. Feeling that he, too, could render service as a chaplain, Mr. Damon enlisted in the United States Army and left for training June 11, 1945. For the remainder of the war and later, he served as a chaplain on transports and in camps.

During Rev. Damon's pastorate at Berean, he wrote an article entitled "Anchors for Driven Souls," which appeared in an August issue of the Moody Monthly, a publication of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. An undated newspaper clipping in the church files not only gives the entire text of this article, but also includes a photograph of Rev. Damon. This article begins by describing an episode in the life of the apostle Paul. Having spent two years in a prison cell, Paul was then taken by ship on the Mediterranean to Rome and while at sea a terrible storm--by the name of Euroclydon--came up which cast much of the cargo of the ship into the sea and which necessitated that great chains be thrown around the hull in order to keep the ship together. The crew was distraught, but Paul, the prisoner, was calm, "proving the promise: 'Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee' (Isa. 26:3). On the fourteenth day of the storm, deeming they were near to the shore, after sounding, they cast four anchors out of the stern and wished for the day."

"Life for most men today is paralleled by the experience of Paul. It is like a voyage upon the sea when driven by the storm. Euroclydon in its fury seems to have broken upon the men of this generation, and instead of abating the storm seems to be increasing in raging turmoil. However, there are anchors for the driven souls of men, keeping them through the night, until the breaking of the day."

Rev. Damon then proceeds to make many anchor analogies (the anchor of faith in God, the anchor of an experience with Jesus Christ, the anchor of a knowledge of the Bible, the anchor of Christian service) and ends in this way:

After casting out the anchors the shipmen together with all on board Paul's ship, wished for the day. We wish for the day of changed circumstances that will certainly come. Unless our Lord comes quickly, circumstances are sure to change. We may wish for the day of life after death. Death for the Christian is not the coming of night, but it is "until the shadows shall be lifted, and the mists be rolled away." Then all instructed Christians wish for the coming of that morning, that altogether incomparable day, the coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. "Even so, come Lord Jesus."

came from: went to:

September 1, 1945: Rev. Gordon commenced his interim pastorate at Berean Baptist (Rev. Damon was granted his leave of absence on June 11, 1945)
August 1946: Rev. Gordon closed his Berean pastorate.

Louisa Howells (1948) described the Gordon period at Berean in this way:

As Mr. Damon had been granted a leave of absence, Rev. A. H. Gordon became an interim pastor. His rich experience in the ministry and his deep spirituality were good for Berean Church in those closing months of the war. Mr. Gordon visited the home of every member and endeared himself to young and old. It was with deep regret that we learned that his health would prevent him from returning to Carbondale for a second year.

D. William Aston

D. William Aston, who later became an ordained minister, was the interim pastor in 1946 (LH 1973).

came from:

went to: Ford City, Pa.

November 7, 1946: Rev. Stone called to the Berean pastorate and accepts the call.
May 15, 1947: Rev. Stone received into membership of Berean on the presentation of his letter of dismission from his former church.
April 15, 1953: Rev. Stone's resignation (tendered March 26, 1953) effective.

Writing in 1948, Louisa Howells described the pastorate of the Berean pastor at that time, Rev. C. Gordon Stone, as follows:

In the fall of 1946, Rev. C. Gordon Stone was asked to fill the pulpit until such time as a permanent pastor should be chosen. He had recently been discharged from the Navy, after having served as a chaplain and having seen service in Japan. As so many of our boys were being discharged from the armed services, a pastor whose experiences were similar to theirs appealed to them. Consequently, at the request of the young people, Mr. Stone was asked to become our pastor. He is particularly fitted for young people's work and has organized two groups--a Young Adult Group, made up chiefly of young married couples, and the "Happy Hour" for young children. Two branches of the Youth Fellowship are in a flourishing condition, with good attendance.

The great celebrations on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the Berean Baptist Church took place during the second year of Rev. Stone's pastorate, but the preparations for them began many years before, on April 5, 1945, during the pastorate of Rev. Damon.

Rev. C. Gordon Stone. Photograph from 1948 Centennial Program, 4 1/2" X 6"; copy print by DWP.

Our Pastor called attention to the 100th anniversary of our church which will be in 1948 and suggested we appoint a Forecast Committee immediately to chart a program of objectives to be attained during the next three years. The Com. to report at a specially called church meeting at the beginning of our work in the fall months. A motion by Deacon Estabrook that we appoint a Forecast Com. as soon as possible was seconded by Deacon Gleason and was carried.

The Committees for Arrangements that organized the actual event were: General Chairman--Alfred P. Wells; Historical--Miss Louisa Howells, Oswald Evans, Miss Edith Gardner; Youth--Austin Barrows, Rev. C. Gordon Stone; Organization--Miss Caroline Trautwein, Edwin Booth; Homecoming--Arthur Lewsley, John Larson; Church--Oswald Evans, Charles Booth; Exhibits--Miss Mildred Stone, Mrs. John Jones, Emmons Peck; Correspondence--Miss Florence Bateman, Mrs. Fred Lewis, Miss Anna Milligan; Publicity and Printing--Miss Edith Gardner, Miss Louisa Howells, Pierce Snyder; Recording Secretary--C. Ronald Isger.

One of the highlights of the week-long program of activities was the Monday night, May 3, 100 Years of Berean History, History of the Church, Interspersed with Living Pictures and Historical Episodes. Throughout the preceding essay we have been from time to time looking at photographs of these "living pictures and historical episodes." The following day, Tuesday, May 4, 1948, the paper published an article, "BEREAN CHURCH FILLED FOR IT'S PAGEANT, Trace History To Early Years, Historical Night Program Participants Garbed in Clothing Of Eras Represented." The newspaper reported:

A crowd which filled the Berean Baptist church to capacity enjoyed the Historical Night program presented in the church last evening in connection with the Centennial Week celebration of the congregation. The program offered was planned, written and directed by Miss Louisa Howells.

Miss Howells read the church history which she had prepared and at appropriate intervals actors representing characters from out of this history came "on stage" garbed in clothing of the eras which their parts depicted. The program as a whole was the result of the considerable research, writing and arranging on the part of Miss Howells, and much work and searching for costumes on the part of those participating. It was arranged in eight episodes.

Before the pageant was offered on Monday night, special recognition was paid to members of Berean for fifty years or more; there were thirty "fifty years or more" members, the oldest being Mrs. A. P. Trautwein (the former Mary Emma Hendrick), who was baptized April 13, 1873.

Through the week speeches, sermons and addresses were delivered by many distinguished persons from near and far: Dr. Luther Wesley Smith, Rev. Edgar C. Smith of Philadelphia, Dr. Irene A. Jones, Miss Sigrid Johnson, a missionary from Ongole, India, supported by Berean Baptist, Rev. F. Paul Langhorn of Clifford Baptist Church, and of course, Rev. C. Gordon Stone.

During the Stone era major repairs and improvements were made to the church. On April 1, 1948, Trustees recommended the following improvements: a new church organ or the present one repaired, kitchen be remodeled, and new carpet for the main Sunday School room. The Trustees were authorized at their own discretion to make these improvements, and on March 15, 1951, the Trustees asked for and got permission to borrow $7,250 with interest @ 4 1/2% to complete payment on church improvements. These improvements were: new carpet, upholstering of seats, new cleaner, repairs made to the kitchen, work done on the roof. The organ problem was not taken care of at this time, and in May of 1951 (May 24) it was deemed necessary to have the church roof repaired and to have the stone work on the belfry pointed in order to prevent rain water from making its way into the interior and doing more damage--the cost, the roof repairs--$2,079, the belfry work--$800. The Trustees asked for and received permission to borrow an additional $3,250 to cover these new expenses.

Such heavy expenditures called for special action on the part of the Finance Committee and Mr. Booth, chairman of that committee, "said he would call on representatives from the various organizations of the Church and Sunday School to meet with him in the near future to make plans for personal calls in every home, in an effort to stimulate more interest in their Church and urge them to try to increase the amount of money they had been giving and also to try to get them more familiar with what is needed to keep our Church beautiful, also try and get members to give who are not giving now" (May 24, 1951).

Norton Vail

came from: Carbondale, Pa. went to:

For the 15 months between the date when Rev. Stone's resignation became effective (April 15, 1953) and the date when Rev. Howard R. Stewart began his pastorate at Berean Baptist (July 25, 1954), Norton Vail, who later became an ordained minister, was acting pastor at Berean.

In her history of 1973 Louisa Howells noted the following about Norton Vail: "The Church was proud to have a man who grew up in Berean Church fill the vacancy until Rev. Howard Stewart became pastor in 1954." From the minutes of the annual church meeting of 1954 (April 1), we learn that everyone was happy with Norton Vail as acting pastor. "The pastor's report was given by Mr. Vail in which he commended the work of individuals and the general cooperation and spirit of all the church members. The report of the Board of Deacons especially emphasized the appreciation of the Board and the congregation of Mr. Vail's splendid work as supply pastor."

During the Spring of 1953, major repairs and improvements were undertaken to put the parsonage "in a presentable condition." The Trustees were, on May 6, authorized to borrow $5,000 to undertake this work.

Mrs. Evelyn Stewart

came from: Woodlyn Baptist Church, Woodlyn, Pa.      went to:

- July 25, 1954: Rev. Stewart began his Berean pastorate, having been called June 10, 1954.
- Sept. 30, 1954: Rev. Stewart and Mrs. Stewart were received into Berean membership on presentation of letters of dismission from their former church.
- June 18, 1956: Rev. Stewart closed his Berean pastorate.

Rev. Stewart's pastorate at Berean was just short of two years in length, but during this time many improvements and innovations were made. On July 29, 1954, the Trustees were granted the authority to borrow $3,150.00 to cover the cost of removing the old set of boilers from the church and the cost of installing the new boiler. On July 29, 1954, the church voted that beginning on September 12, 1954, the church would hold evening church services every Sunday in place of the present plan of every third Sunday. On December 30, 1954, Rev. Stewart was granted permission to appoint two members of the congregation to work with him and the other pastors and their representatives to formulate and carry out plans for union church services. On December 30, 1954, the Trustees were authorized to purchase, when the funds were raised, the new hymnals recommended by the music committee, and an effort was made to have the congregation underwrite the cost of the hymnals by having them subscribe to one or more books by filling out a form to be placed in the bulletin on Sundays. On December 30, 1954, Rev. Stewart explained to the church the need of establishing a Board of Christian Education, and asked for and was granted permission to appoint a temporary Board until the annual meeting in April when such a board would be provided for by an addition to the church By-Laws. On January 20, 1955, Rev. Stewart suggested—and the church approved—a plan to effect a change in the customary manner of conducting the Prayer Meeting. In order to increase attendance and interest in Prayer Meeting, Rev. Stewart suggested that beginning on March 10, 1955, the regular prayer service be held in the main church auditorium and that the official name of the service be changed to "Hour of Power."

At the annual business meeting, March 31, 1955, the first business meeting held since Rev. Stewart began his Berean pastorate, the clerk made the following note about Rev. Stewart's report:

The Pastor's report was read and revealed the astonishing amount of work he had performed in his pastoral duties and in the services of official capacities in several organizations at seminary, state and associational levels. Despite a busy schedule of pulpit and pastoral demands, he found time to increase and strengthen his capacity to serve by reading many appropriate books.

Following equally as eventful, enthusiastic and optimistic reports by the Board of Deacons, Board of Trustees, and 20 additional organizational (classes and societies) and fiscal reports, Edwin Booth, the clerk, noted the following:

All the above reports presented strong evidence of the willing, sacrificial work of the congregation, classes and organizations throughout the year in their efforts to uphold the traditional spirit of Berean Church; their untiring zeal and definiteness of purpose in reaching quotas and meeting obligations in the work of the Master at home and abroad merited a "well done, good and faithful servants."

It will be recalled that the repair or replacement of the pipe organ was one of the top priorities in April 1948, during the Rev. Stone era. This important matter was brought up again by Rev. Stewart on February 16, 1956, and following extensive discussion, a committee composed of equal numbers from the Board of Trustees, the Board of Deacons, and the Music Committee was appointed to thoroughly investigate the merits of rebuilding or installing a new type of organ. This organ committee reported on March 15, 1956, in the form of a printed sheet distributed to all members, recommending the purchase and installation of a Hammond Model RT-3 organ. The report was discussed and approved and the Trustees were authorized to contact the Wittig Music Store, Scranton, to arrange for the immediate installation of the Hammond RT-3.

Cost estimates for proposed improvements to the entrance approaches and replacement of the church doors were brought to the attention of the Church on April 5, 1956. After further study the Board of Trustees reported to the Church on September 13, 1956, that they had received estimates from various contractors covering the expenses of repair work on the entrance steps, replacement of the entrance doors of the church, and alterations to the Sunday School room in the basement, and asked for—and were granted—permission to award the contracts and to borrow $2,800 to finance the work.

During the eleven months between the close of the Stewart pastorate (June 18, 1956) and the beginning of the Brinkman pastorate (May 1, 1957), Berean had two supply ministers—a morning one and an evening one. Rev. R. J. Williams (retired) was the morning supply from June 18, 1956 to April 8, 1957, and Norton Vail was the evening supply from June 18, 1956 to May 1, 1957.

24. Edward P. Brinkman

came from:      went to:

- May 1, 1957: Rev. Brinkman began his pastorate at Berean Baptist.
- June 5, 1960: Rev. Brinkman closed his pastorate at Berean Baptist.

In her 1973 history, Louisa Howells described the Brinkman pastorate in this way:

Rev. Edward Brinkman was pastor from 1957 thru 1960, during this period Rev. Brinkman was active in committee work at the local, association and state levels.

Between the closing of the Brinkman pastorate (June 5, 1960) and the opening of the Meneely pastorate (January 1962), the Berean pulpit was supplied by three men, as we learn from Louisa Howells (1973):

Rev. Marple Lewis acted as interim pastor from 1960 to 1961. During his pastorate the Cottage Prayer meetings were started. Groups would gather in homes in the various sections of town for the purpose of prayer and meditation.

The pulpit was next filled by Rev. Carr, who served for several months and later by Rev. William Hand, who served until January, 1962 when Rev. Arthur Meneely was called to Berean Baptist.

- Rev. Marple Lewis - Interim (Sept. 11, 1960--June 25, 1961)
- Rev. William Carr (supply) (July 1, 1961--Sept. 1, 1961)
- Rev. William Hand (supply) (Sept. 1, 1961--Jan. 7, 1962)

25. Arthur W. Meneely

Mrs. Elouise Meneely

came from: First Baptist Church, Ulysses, Pa. went to: First Baptist Church, Sunbury, Ohio 43704.

- January 21, 1962: Rev. Arthur Meneely begins his Berean pastorate.
- August 21, 1968: Building destroyed by fire.
- June 30, 1979: Pastorate of Rev. Meneely ends.

In an article that appeared on page 1 of The Carbondale (Pa.) News (Thursday, May 31, 1979) entitled "Rev. Meneely going to Ohio. New Pastorate ends 17½ years in city," we learn many of the details of Rev. Meneely's life:

- Beginning July 1, 1979, Rev. Meneely became the pastor of the First Baptist Church, Sunbury, Ohio, 43704.
- Rev. Meneely's pastorate at Berean Baptist was the longest in the history of the church--17½ years. At the close of his Berean Baptist pastorate, Rev. Meneely was Carbondale's senior clergyman.
- Rev. Meneely has been a minister for over 31 years. His first pastorate was the Pequea Baptist Church in Lancaster County; his second was First Baptist Church, Fairchance, Fayette County; his third was actually two charges--Ulysses and Gold in Potter County.

Rev. Arthur W. Meneely. Photograph from 125th Anniversary Program, 3 1/2" X 4 7/16"; copy print by DWP.

- Over the years he has served on the regional board and the executive committee of the American Baptist Churches of Pennsylvania and Delaware and, at the close of his Berean pastorate, was the moderator of the Abington Baptist Association (he also served the Abington Baptist Association in other capacities).
- Locally, he was on the Red Cross Board and the YMCA Board and held various offices in the Carbondale Ministerium.
- Rev. Meneely's hobbies include woodcarving, stamp collecting, golfing, and while vacationing, boating and waterskiing.
- During Rev. Meneely's pastorate in Carbondale, his wife, Elouise, was a math teacher at Mountain View High School in Kingsley; she was also active in women's work at the church and in the Delphic Club.
- The couple are the parents of three children: Virginia Heath, R.N., whose husband is associated with Allegheny College in Meadville, Pa.; Rev. Arthur David Meneely; William, on the library faculty at Georgia State University at Atlanta.
- Rev. and Mrs. Arthur W. Meneely have three grandchildren.

In her history of 1973, Louisa Howells relates some of the personal qualities and outstanding achievements of Rev. Meneely:

Arthur Meneely will always be remembered by personnel of both of the Carbondale hospitals for his devotion to those who are sick and in need. Many people who have been hospitalized will testify to the encouragement that they received from his daily visits. Rev. Meneely is also active on the Abington Baptist Association committees and represented our association on the Regional Board of American Baptist church of Pennsylvania and Delaware. A highlight of Rev. Meneely's career came in 1971 when he was chosen to be part of a Preaching Mission in Nicaragua and El Salvador in Central America.

Building No. 7: The re-built Romanesque stone building dedicated September 13, 1970

In her history of 1973, Louisa Howells also relates the details of the destruction of the stone building and the rebuilding of the present church on the same site:

On August 21, 1968, we lost a building but kept the church.

For 125 years the Berean Baptist Church has sought to minister to Carbondale, from a humble beginning of a white frame structure to a stone building that the people of God built.

Although the fire, which originated in the bakery next door, was battled by firemen from our town and surrounding communities, damage was extensive and the building was termed a complete loss.

We continued to worship on Sunday mornings for two years in the auditorium of the Benjamin Franklin High School and Sunday School was carried on in the class rooms.

On August 28, 1968, the congregation met and agreed to rebuild on the present site. It was felt that the people would want to share in rebuilding the Berean Baptist Church, such a financial responsibility was going to require a total commitment from the church membership--the goal was to raise $125,000.00.

The furnishings would be replaced by memorial gifts, given as a tribute to our departed loved ones. The size of the gifts varied, however, each one would know what his fair share should be--for his heart and conscience would dictate. Our church had to be built on sacrifices. We know that each commitment would be truly sacrificial expression of one's own means.

Contracts were let out after Gelb and Company gutted the stone walls to start from the ground up. Mr. Joseph Young was selected as architect. When designs were approved, bids were called for and R. D. Richardson was selected as prime contractor; Joseph Capazo, Plumbing and Heating; Harold Hoffman, Electrical; Lustig's, Floor Covering; Paddock Glass, windows.

The Building Committee consisted of the following: Donald Thomas, Chairman, Wilson Bruning, Vice Chairman, W. Uriah Carey, Secretary, Mrs. Austin Barrows, Roy Crocker, Miss Louisa Howells, Merle Morgan, Miss Mildred Stone, Mrs. Derwood Williams, Edwin Booth, Harold Pierson, Garfield Thomas, George Williams, Walter Cramer, Julius Henry, John Moon, Donald Shaffer, Lloyd Gillow, Mrs. Bruce Lewis, Norton Vail, Rev. A. W. Meneely.

Sunday morning service in the Benjamin Franklin High School auditorium. After the fire destroyed their church building, the Berean Baptists held services for two years in the auditorium of the Benjamin Franklin High School, and Sunday School was carried on in the class rooms of the school. Photograph, 6 1/2" X 4 7/16", in the Berean Baptist Church files; copy print by DWP.

The members of the Building Fund Committee were: John Moon, Co-Chairman, Ervin Chubb, Co-Chairman, Mrs. Francis Tonkin, Secretary, Harold Francis, Carlton Sellick, Rexford Williams, Miss Ruth Pierce, Rev. A. W. Meneely, Garfield Thomas, W. Uriah Carey, Mrs. Russell Rehkop, Fred Walker.

During the period the church was being re-built we were notified of a sizable bequest made to the church in the will of Miss Caroline Trautwein, who was a devoted active member of the Berean Baptist Church.

We deeply appreciate the fine workmanship done by these contractors and their workers. All areas of our building, both for worship and education, are attractive and useful. We are also grateful to everyone who contributed not only time and talent, but those many people who remembered us during this time with prayers.

Rev. Meneely had one of the most difficult situations a pastor could experience—that of guiding the congregation thru the period of rebuilding that which was destroyed by fire—under his leadership the congregation remained together until we moved into our church. During the period from the fire until the church was completed our pastor spent many hours doing various jobs that were "above and beyond the call of duty" of a minister.

Of the original stone church only the outside walls were re-used in the re-building. The church interior was entirely re-built at a cost of $125,000.

Two years after the fire the church building was rebuilt and on September 13, 1970, the building was dedicated. In order to commemorate this occasion, the Church issued a booklet: Berean Baptist Church, Carbondale, Pennsylvania, Service of Dedication, 2:30 P.M. Sunday, September 13, 1970. From this booklet, we reproduce below the names of the individuals and organizations who are responsible for the existence of the present church building:

The program of activities for the celebration of the 125th anniversary of the Church were organized and carried out under the direction of the Anniversary Committee: E. J. Booth, Chairman, Merle Morgan, Co-Chairman, Cedric Chubb, Thelma Chubb, Ervin Chubb, George Williams, Norton Vail, Alta Mae Vail, Emily Miller, Carolyn Thomas, W. U. Carey, Roy Crocker, Wilson Bruning, Lavinia Spencer, Lois Turner.

An article entitled, "Berean Baptist Church 125 Years Old," in The Miner (Thursday, May 17, 1979, pp. 1-2), reprints the church history from the 125th Anniversary booklet, and notes that festivities are planned for May 18, 19, and 20, to celebrate the anniversary. The front page of The Leader from June 28, 1888, is reproduced and is superimposed with three photographs: Rev. Meneely, the new church building, and the old building burning. Another photograph shows Rev. Meneely holding a "Communion pitcher which was recently returned to the church by Roy Stanton of Honesdale. The pitcher is dated 1872-1897. In front of Rev. Meneely is an old Communion table probably handmade by Grace Hall's father and dates to the turn of the century. On the wall is another prized collection of the church, an old copy of the Carbondale Leader newspaper, printed on cloth, with a story of the laying of the church's cornerstone back in 1888."

The Board of The Berean Baptist Church: During the course of the year 1978 a major organizational change took place within Berean Baptist Church. The Trustees, the Sunday-School directors and the Deacons were done away with--in name only, of course--and were replaced by three separate committees: the Business Committee (formerly the Trustees), the Christian Education Committee (formerly the Sunday-School directors), and the Spiritual Life Committee (formerly the Deacons). These three committees are the principal components of the new Board of the Berean Baptist Church.

On Tuesday evening, June 12, 1979, in Fellowship Hall of the Berean Baptist Church, a testimonial dinner honoring Reverend and Mrs. Arthur Meneely was held. The after-dinner program, conducted by John Moon, toastmaster, included: Invocation by Rev. Frank Skitzki, St. Rose of Lima Church; Remarks from (1) the Carbondale Ministerium by the son of the Methodist minister, Rev. Cooper, Jr., on behalf of his father, Rev. Cooper, Sr. (2) the Trinity Episcopal Church by Jane Shrader (3) the Church by W. U. Carey and Gloria Seigle (4) the Guest Speaker, Rev. Leland Pease (5) Rev. Charles F. J. Starzger, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church (6) Attorney Walter O'Hara on behalf of the Red Cross; Presentations by Donald Thomas and by Bill Martin (from Berean Builders); Music included congregational singing of hymns and Quartet Selection by The Sheridans, Solo by Betty Cornell with piano accompaniment by Pam Hudson.

Walter O'Hara remarked that Rev. Meneely has been "a member of the Board of the local chapter of the Red Cross for almost eight years, and in that time has donated 4 gallons--32 pints--of blood." Preceding his presentation, Donald Thomas remarked about Rev. Meneely: "He is one of the most dedicated people to the church we have ever had, he has touched more lives in Carbondale than any minister we have ever had, and, he, to use Rev. Meneely's own phrase, kept getting 'gooder and gooder.'" The program concluded with brief remarks by Rev. Meneely and Mrs. Meneely.

When Joslin wrote his first history of the Berean Baptist Church in 1898, Rev. Jepson was the pastor. When Joslin arrived at the present in his chronological survey of the Berean Baptist pastors he tactfully--and forcefully--dealt with the difficult problem of bragging about the accomplishments of the present in this way:

Rev. T. E. Jepson began on his pastorate with us the first of December, 1887, and is still with us. I do not think it necessary to speak of his ministry with us. We, like the weeping widow, at the funeral of Dorcas have only to show his works. They speak for themselves.

In her history of 1973, Louisa Howells states:

Yes, Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale has completed 125 years of work for God, and service to mankind. As we continue our existence as a church, we crave God's continued blessing as expressed by Paul in his letter to the Church at Colosse, Colossians 1:9-12--"That we might be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding. That we may walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work and increasing in the knowledge of God. Strengthened with all might according to his glorious power unto all patience and long suffering with joyfulness. Give thanks unto the Father which has made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light."

On Wednesday evening, May 5, 1948, the third day of the week-long activities commemorating the 100th anniversary of Berean Baptist Church, the program was entitled "Centennial Recognition of Missionary and Organizational Work." In this photograph, shown standing behind the pulpit on the platform in the principal auditorium of Berean Baptist are the two women who gave the program that night: Berean member Dr. Irene A. Jones (left), and the guest for the evening, Miss Sigrid Johnson (right), Berean's own missionary from Ongole, India. From the moment of its conception, and continuing until the present time, Berean Baptist has taken an extremely active role in missionary work. On March 1, 1848, the day before Berean was organized, the Articles of Faith and Church Covenant as accepted by the seven constituent members were read aloud, and they both specifically mention missionary work. The complete text of the thirteenth and last of the articles of faith read on that day is: "XIII We believe that the Christian church is a Missionary Society--that the field is the world." The Preamble and last paragraph of the Church Covenant as read that day are: "Having been, as we trust, brought by Divine grace, to embrace the Lord Jesus Christ, and to give ourselves wholly to him; we do now solemnly and joyfully covenant with each other, To Walk Together in Him, with Brotherly Love to his Glory as our Common Lord. We do therefore in his strength engage... That we cheerfully contribute of our property for the spread of the Gospel over the world, the support of the poor, and for the maintenance of faithful ministry among us." On January 7, 1855, the Berean Baptists decided to make regular offerings for Home Missions, Foreign Missions, and the Bible cause. The text of the resolution which was presented and adopted is as follows: "Believing that it is the duty of Christians to aid according to their means in sustaining the cause of Christ at home and abroad, therefore, Resolved That Quarterly collections be taken as follows, viz., On the 1st Sabbath of Jan. for the Bible cause. On the 1st Sabbath of Apr. for domestic missions. On the 1st Sabbath of July for foreign missions. On the 1st Sabbath of October for incidental expenses. Photograph, 4 1/2" X 6 1/2", in the collection of Miss Edith A. Gardner; copy print by DWP.

Building No. 1

Patrick F. Moffit

The section of 1880 (p. 444) dealing with the early schools of Carbondale states that during the decade 1840-1850 Patrick Moffit was one of the "prominent school officers." Since the Patrick Moffit whose biography we have cited in the text was born in 1847, and this Patrick Moffit was a school director in the 1840s, then the Patrick Moffit who was born in 1847 must be—if the two are related at all—"Patrick Moffit Jr." Bailey, writing in 1857, says that in 1857 the site of the Deacon Bowen house is "now occupied by the store of Patrick Moffit, Jr." The map which identifies a "P. Moffit" building was published in 1873.

Building No. 3

From the Eleanor Pritchard Jones Centennial History First Presbyterian Church of Carbondale, Pa. (Carbondale, Penna: June, 1929) p. 25 we learn that Temperance Hall was destroyed by the Carbondale fire of 1850, and it is therefore understandable that in that year that the Berean Baptists should have found it necessary to buy the former meeting house of the Methodist Society. The Carbondale Historical Souvenir of 1901 describes the academic school which met in Temperance Hall just before the fire, and the extent of the fire: "About 1846, in addition to the several good public schools, Carbondale citizens established an academic school known as the 'Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute.' This institution was located in Temperance hall, corner of Church street and Salem avenue, and was patronized by most of the well-to-do families of the town." Presumably the academic school and the Berean Baptists both met in the same building. "The business interests of the town received a severe blow September 28, 1850, by a disastrous fire which broke out in the Carbondale House, kept by G. W. Thomas, and burned nearly that entire portion. The space burned over extended from Memorial park northward on Main street and on the west side of Church street. It consumed sixty buildings owned by forty-two people. The loss was estimated at $70,700."

This "old print" has been published three times in recent years and in none of these instances are the buildings identified. It appeared first in the 1901 Historical Souvenir of Carbondale, and there no reference is made to the print. It is simply inserted in the text several pages after a general discussion of some of the early Carbondale churches. The second time it appeared is in the Eleanor Pritchard Jones Presbyterian Church history. Recently (Thursday, July 22, 1971), in the Carbondale (Pa.) News serialization of Durfee's 1875 book, the print was published among the visual embellishments of the Durfee text. I am unable to locate an original copy of this "old print" and I am unable to determine when the print was first done. The original Durfee Reminiscences was unillustrated. When the city of Carbondale was incorporated, in 1851, a pictorial map was issued. If a copy of the 1851 map could be located it might contain the answer to the riddle of just what precisely are the four buildings in this "old print" (for the reference on the 1851 map, see Eleanor Pritchard Jones' Presbyterian Church history, p. 21).

No non-Baptist money-making affairs in the church building. Constant demands on the supply in the coffers of the church treasury demanded constant attention on the part of the Church to money-making schemes. From the information contained in a resolution adopted on May 20, 1877, we learn of one such scheme and also of its marked success: "Bro. E. M. Peck submitted a resolution of thanks be tendered to the Cambrian Glee Club, to Mr. Marcy Corby, and others who participated in the concert on Friday evening, and also to Mr. S. T. Corby for the use of his piano, kindly loaned for the occasion, and to the public for the patronage extended, the net receipts being nearly $50." Apparently the "songs of Zion" rang out and the shekels poured in within the auditorium of the Berean Baptist church building in the middle of May, 1877, but the luxury of such privileges was only available for church-connected ventures, for not only could non-Church money-making activities not be held in the church building at that time, but it was also forbidden (July 1, 1878) that they even be publicly announced: "Ordered that, - No notice for concert, exhibition, or lecture, for the personal benefit of any individual, church or society, where an admission fee is to be asked shall be read from the pulpit... except those directly concerning this Church."

Building No. 5

Builders. Joslin's 1898 history tells us who built the Doric building and how much it cost: "The building committee was composed of Homer Grennell, Jerome Underwood, and A. O. Hanford, all practical mechanics. The contract was given to Mr. Grennell, at the price of $5,000, towards which he gave $1,000." The members of the building committee were apparently also the actual builders. Strictly speaking they--Grennell, Underwood and Hanford--can not be called architects since they surely selected a picture out of one of the numerous and readily available architectural handbooks of the day and built it. They are therefore builders and not architects. Architects design their own "from scratch" and may also take part in the building of the design; builders typically copy the ideas of others.

First idea for a Berean Baptist Church building. How interesting it is to compare the Doric building actually built by the Berean Baptist Church with the building "dreamed about" by the Berean Baptists in the first months of their organization. Berean Baptist was organized on March 1, 1848, and at the first church meeting, March 13, 1848, four resolutions were adopted, the third of which is this: "Resolved to appoint a committee to apply for a building lot." At the third church meeting, April 17, 1848, the Berean Baptists specified the building they wished to erect: "A special meeting was called on this evening for the purpose of acting upon business respecting a meeting house we wish to build. Resolved, that we will build a meeting house for the Lord in Carbondale if we can procure means so to do. Resolved, the house shall be built as follows--the length to be fifty feet, the width thirty five feet, the length of the posts to be nineteen feet. Resolved that D. E. Bowen, Homer Grennell, Enoch Jones, William W. Davis act as a committee to get subscriptions."

Sale. At some point--clearly after June 13, 1887--when the Baptists upped the price $500--the sale of the Doric building to the Father Mathew Society fell through. "On Sunday afternoon last the Joint Committee of the Father Mathew Societies in the city was held and a new meeting place talked over. The result of the meeting was that a committee was appointed to confer with John Jermyn for the handsome block on Wall Street owned by him, and to offer him for the same $15,000. Some time ago, Mr. Jermyn was anxious to sell and in negotiations with the Father Mathew men he fixed his price at $15,000, so that a deal is possible, the only thing known to stand in the way being the possibility of a long lease held by the Masonic lodges. Some weeks ago the societies made an effort to secure the building and property now used by the Baptist denomination, and the congregation voted to sell to them at a meeting held to consider the offer, but at a subsequent meeting they reconsidered their action and the deal fell through" ("FATHER MATHEWS WANTS JERMYN BLOCK They Decide to Offer $15,000 for the Building," The Carbondale Leader, Wednesday, Sept. 14, 1887, p. 4, col. 2). Despite this temporary set-back, the Father Mathew Society ultimately did purchase the 29-year-old Doric building. In a recent article ("Father Mathew Society, Temperance society, begun in city in 1868") in the Carbondale (Pa.) News (Wednesday, May 2, 1979, p. 12), Dr. Charles P. Connor outlines the history of the Father Mathew Society.

The date the building was vacated. The E. M. Peck report cited in the Carbondale Leader and cited in the text of this essay (p. 15, col. 1, paragraph 4) says the Doric building was vacated in February 1888. That is incorrect. The church minutes (BBC 2, p. 174) are very clear on this: "Sunday morning Dec. 2nd (1888) the Pastor Rev. T. E. Jepson preached a sermon in which he reviewed the history of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale from its foundation to the present time, touching upon the chief features of the dealings of the Lord with this people and also recounting all God's mercies as he has led them these forty years... The Sabbath School after their usual session filed out of the old church and by classes repaired to the new church school which was in readiness for them and took an informal possession of the various class rooms... In the evening the sermon was preached to young men and was also the farewell sermon to the old building, possession being given to the Catholics on the following day. After the services communion service was held in which all members present participated. The church services hereafter being held in the new building."

BOWEN

"Brother." Modern readers who are unfamiliar with former practice might find it a bit embarrassing to hear the terms "Brother" and "Sister" used by the early Baptists to address or refer to each other. By the same token, modern readers might be quite surprised to learn that, beginning in 1843 and continuing for a few years, in the minutes of the Abington Baptist Association the pastors of the churches are referred to as "Bishops." Bailey (1863, pp. 47-48), in his remarks on the thirty-sixth anniversary meeting of the ABA held at Damascus, September 6th and 7th, 1843, tells us that "Until this time the pastors of the churches have usually been designated as 'Elders,' but the clerks of this year, took the liberty of publishing them as 'Bishops.'" In the same passage, Bailey discusses the term 'Reverend,' the term then in common use as the convenient ministerial designation.

CURTIS

E. M. Peck, on Pioneer Day (Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pa.), September 7, 1915, delivered a paper entitled CLINTON PIONEERS THEIR MEMORY VENERATED and in it he recalls Rev. Curtis: "I also remember Elder Curtis' holding services in the grove back of the present meeting house after the old building was destroyed by the cyclone. Elder Curtis to me was a man to whom God had given the keys of Heaven and I was sure that he was the man who held the key of Heaven and could shut or open them as he thought best. As for the sermons, I have no remembrance of them only as they increased my ideas as to his power to punish sin and reward good. With all my boyish fears, I never for a moment doubted but that Elder Curtis was just and whatever he said must be so and right." To anyone at all familiar with Baptist affairs in the northeast of Pennsylvania in the 1830s, 1840s and early 1850s, the name of Rev. Henry Curtis will hardly be one that is unfamiliar, for he was a recognized leader both on the local and regional level. In the annals of the Abington Baptist Association for the decade 1827-1837, E. L. Bailey (pp. 40-41) records that in 1836 Rev. Henry Curtis wrote and the ABA published a pamphlet entitled "THE TRUTH AS IT IS." This pamphlet is specifically concerned with the issue of "missions," and in it "the previous course of the Association on the subject of missions is faithfully reviewed and ably vindicated from the charge of anti-mission tendencies." Moreover, for every year of the fourth decade of the existence of the ABA, 1837-1847, Rev. Curtis acted as Moderator of the Association, and in 1838, 1840, 1842, and 1844 he also delivered the introductory sermon. During the next decade, 1847-1857, Henry Curtis was twice (1850, 1855) Moderator of the meetings, and was thrice (1848, 1850, 1856) the deliverer of the introductory sermon. The introductory sermon delivered by Rev. Curtis in 1856 was apparently of some substantial interest to those who were there assembled, for there was a request made to have the sermon published (Bailey, p. 64): "The opening sermon of this session was historical, embracing brief notices of various early ministers, the Missionary character and the present duties and necessities of the Association. The discourse was listened to with much interest, and by request was published in the Christian Chronicle of Philadelphia." Finally, a word about the salary paid to Rev. Curtis: "Elder Curtis responded to the call and preached his introductory Sermon the third Sabbath in February (Feb. 18th) expecting if the Lord permit to preach every other Sabbath for one year for which we agree to pay him $175.00" (minutes; Feb. 1849).

BAILEY

Many sources tell of the great popularity, both within the Berean Baptist Church and within the city of Carbondale, of Rev. Bailey: "He was highly esteemed by all classes and especially by the young people, of whom a large number united with the church" (Joslin, 1904, p. 10). Rev. Bailey was frequently chosen to perform the marriage ceremony, and frequently one sees in the Carbondale papers of the period notices such as this one: "MARRIED. In this city, July 4th, by Rev. E. L. Bailey, Mr. JAMES E. McMULLEN and Miss HARRIET SANDERS, both of Clinton, Wayne Co., Pa." (The Advance, Vol. 2, No. 6, July 10, 1858, p. 3, col. 2). Durfee's Reminiscences (Chapter XV, pp. 74-75) record the popular attitude toward Rev. Bailey, who was known as a "marrying minister."

GROW

Date his pastorate began. I am at a great loss to explain the disparity between the date when Rev. Grow in his autobiography says he accepted the Berean Baptist pastorate (April 1874) and the date that the church records and Joslin's church histories record as the date of acceptance--November 2, 1874.

Pulpit style. Rev. Grow considered his first calling to be that of an evangelist, and throughout the final third of his life he resided in Carbondale yet travelled widely in order to conduct revival meetings. A description by Rev. Grow himself (p. 99) of an incident that took place as he was travelling alone by horse and carriage from Franklin, Pa., to Carbondale--in order to join his wife and his sister-in-law and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hendrick, who had gone ahead by train--gives an impression of Rev. Grow's preaching: "My route brought me through Lewisburg, the seat of our now widely known university. After getting located for the night, following the laws of affinity, I at once inquired for the Baptist minister, and was told that Brother Judd was the pastor, and when I called upon him I learned that extra meetings were in session. That settled the question as to how I would spend that evening. Accompanying the pastor to the church, I was given a seat on the little pulpit platform and allowed to sit there undisturbed until the meeting was drawing to a close. Instead of a regular sermon, several of the professors and others contributed words of doctrine, counsel, and exhortation, and I was then called upon to pray. I felt, as on few occasions, the greatness of the need of the descent of the Holy Spirit to press home to listening hearts the many important truths that had been spoken. The Spirit helped my infirmities, giving me great freedom at the throne, and the result of it all was that nine persons asked for prayer and Christian help, the larger number of whom were then and there converted to the Lord."

LYNCH

Large congregations. The steadily increasing size of the membership of Berean Baptist between 1875 and 1924 is readily apparent from these statistics: 1875, 214; 1885, 209; 1895, 416; 1904, 500; 1915, 740; 1924, 1057. A remedy to a need for more space was adopted at a meeting of the church on July 5, 1915: "Realizing the crying present need for better seating accommodations for our large congregations and having faith to believe in the future, (when) congregations will be yet larger, after careful consideration and thoughtful deliberation, Be it resolved, that we earnestly and respectfully recommend to the church the removal of the windows and supports between the auditorium and S. S. room and the substitution of such doors as will be thought proper and advisable."

My thanks here to Doris and Austin T. Barrows for kindly bringing the article about the seige of the Berean Baptist Church to my attention and for lending me historical materials concerning the Berean Baptist Church and the city of Carbondale.

MEMBERS OF THE BEREAN BAPTIST CHURCH 1848-1979

This complete list of the members of the Berean Baptist Church from the establishment of this church to the present day is made possible thanks to the sustained and conscientious effort of the 14 clerks who have served this church for the past 131 years. As defined by the Church By-Laws as formulated October 1977, any person professing faith in Jesus Christ as personal Lord and Saviour, who is in accord with the faith and practices held by this church, and who assents to its Church Covenant, may be admitted to membership, and persons may be received into membership of Berean Baptist by any one of three methods, as may be appropriate, upon recommendation of the Pastor and the Board and the vote of the church: (1) By baptism: Any person professing faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, giving evidence of a change of heart and the testimony of a Christian life, may be received into this church upon baptism by immersion; (2) By letter: a) By letter of dismissal from another church of like faith and order--full members; or b) By letter from another church where Profession of faith has been made but mode of Baptism has not been immersion--associate members (restricted only from holding an office and voting on church policy); (3) By Christian experience: Any believer, having been previously baptized, may be received upon a satisfactory statement of Christian faith and experience. The distinction made in the October 1977 formulation of the Church By-Laws between the two kinds of members who are received by letter (full and associate) was not made in the past. In the past, persons of "like faith and order" were received as full members on the presentation of a letter from their former church, and persons who were not of "like faith and order" were received into full membership only upon baptism by immersion. In the list that follows, those persons who were admitted to the Berean Baptist Church by baptism are marked "B," those who were admitted by letter are marked "L," and those who were admitted on the basis of the relation of their Christian experience are marked "E." If you see an error in this list or if you can add information to the entries given (middle names, dates of admission, for example), please convey that information either to the Church Clerk, or to the editors of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

VII. OF GRACE IN REGENERATION.

We believe that, in order to be saved, sinners must be regenerated, or born again; that regeneration consists in giving a holy disposition to the mind; that it is effected in a manner above our comprehension by the power of the Holy Spirit, in connection with divine truth, so as to secure our voluntary obedience to the gospel; and that its proper evidence appears in the holy fruits of repentance, and faith, and newness of life.

Jno. 1:13; Jno. 3:3, 5, 7 and 8; Matt. 3:8-10.

VIII. OF REPENTANCE AND FAITH.

We believe that repentance and faith are sacred duties, and also inseparable graces, wrought in our souls by the regenerating Spirit of God; whereby being deeply convinced of our guilt, danger, and helplessness, and of the way of salvation by Christ, we turn to God with unfeigned contrition, confession, and supplication for mercy; at the same time heartily receiving the Lord Jesus Christ as our Prophet, Priest, and King, and relying on him alone as the only and all-sufficient Saviour.

Mark 1:15; 1 Jno. 5:1; Acts 2:37-38; Rom. 10:9-11.

IX. OF GOD'S PURPOSE OF GRACE.

We believe that election is the eternal purpose of God, according to which he graciously regenerates, sanctifies, and saves sinners; that being perfectly consistent with the free-agency of man, it comprehends all the means in connection with the end; that it is a most glorious display of God's sovereign goodness, being infinitely free, wise, holy and unchangeable; that it utterly excludes boasting, and promotes humility, love, prayer, praise, trust in God, and active imitation of his free mercy; that it encourages the use of means in the highest degree; that it may be ascertained by its effects in all who truly believe the gospel; that it is the foundation of Christian assurance; and that to ascertain it with regard to ourselves demands and deserves the utmost diligence.

2 Tim. 1:9-10; 2 Thes. 2:13-14; Rom. 8:28-30.

X. OF SANCTIFICATION.

We believe that sanctification is the process by which, according to the will of God, we are made partakers of his holiness; that it is a progressive work; that it is begun in regeneration; and that it is carried on in the hearts of believers by the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, the Sealer and Comforter, in the continual use of the appointed means,—especially, the word of God, self-examination, self-denial, watchfulness and prayer.

1 Thes. 4:3; Prov. 4:18; Phil. 2:12-13.

XI. OF THE PERSEVERANCE OF SAINTS.

We believe that such only are real believers as endure unto the end; that their persevering attachment to Christ is the grand mark which distinguishes them from superficial professors; that a special providence watches over their welfare; and they are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation.

Jno. 8:31; 1 Jno. 2:19, Phil. 1:6.

XII. OF THE HARMONY OF THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL.

We believe that the law of God is the eternal and unchangeable rule of his moral government; that it is holy, just, and good; and that the inability which the Scriptures ascribe to fallen men to fulfil its precepts, arises entirely from their love of sin; to deliver them from which, and to restore them through a Mediator to unfeigned obedience to the holy law, is one great end of the gospel, and of the means of grace connected with the establishment of the visible church.

Rom. 3:31; Rom. 8:2, 4, 7 and 8.

XIII. OF A GOSPEL CHURCH.

We believe that a visible church of Christ is a congregation of baptized believers, associated by covenant in the faith and fellowship of the gospel; observing the ordinances of Christ; governed by his laws; and exercising the gifts, rights, and privileges invested in them by his word; that its only scriptural officers are Bishops, or Pastors, and Deacons, whose qualifications, claims, and duties are defined in the Epistles to Timothy and Titus.

1 Cor. 1:1-13; Acts 2:41-42.

XIV. OF BAPTISM AND THE LORD'S SUPPER.

We believe that Christian baptism is the immersion in water of a believer, into the name of the Father, and Son, and Holy Ghost; to show forth, in a solemn and beautiful emblem, our faith in the crucified, buried and risen Saviour, with its effects in our death

The Schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania 1681-1895

From the Editors:

The present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is a history of the schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1681-1895. It was written by Silas Robert Powell.

In this history, the author examines some of the many schools that were established in the eleven-county area of Northeastern Pennsylvania (Bradford, Carbon, Columbia, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Wayne, and Wyoming Counties) in the period from William Penn's acquisition, in 1681, of more than 26 million acres of land--present-day Pennsylvania--in the "New World," up to the final years of the nineteenth century. A special section of the present issue, in addition, focuses on the schools of Carbondale, PA, in the nineteenth century.

The author is indebted to, and is pleased to here express his thanks to, the following persons, for having made available to him information about, or photographs and engravings of, the early schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania: Mrs. Rebecca Colville, Carbondale, PA; Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis, Waymart, PA; Miss Edith A. Gardner, Carbondale, PA; Mrs. Alice Curtis Lund, Seelyville, PA, and Melbourne, FL; Rev. William P. Lewis, Executive Director, Lackawanna Historical Society, Scranton, PA; Mr. Kurt A. Reed, South Canaan, PA; Mrs. Gertrude Gardner Snyder, Danville, PA.

The author is similarly indebted to, and is pleased to here acknowledge the help of, those historians whose names and works are listed in the Bibliography herein, for having put to paper the vast quantity of information that is presently in print about the schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania. Without their pioneer works in the field, the present study could not have been written.

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume I, Number 4) will be a history of studio photography in the nineteenth century in Northeastern Pennsylvania. It will be written by Donald Walter Powell, and will be published on May 21, 1980.

I. 1681-1682

William Penn was the son of Sir William Penn, an admiral in the royal navy, who at his death left a claim of 16,000 pounds against the government of Great Britain. Having become familiar with the Delaware River region, and with the schemes for its colonization, William Penn conceived the plan of founding there a colony, the government of which would be in accordance with the pure principles not only of his Quaker faith, but also of the New Testament. In so doing, William Penn planned to undertake, to use his own words, a "holy experiment."

Accordingly, William Penn, in 1680, petitioned Charles II of England for a grant of a tract of land, west from the Delaware River, in liquidation of the claim that he had inherited from his father. The extent of the tract of land: three degrees of latitude in breadth by five degrees of longitude in length; the eastern boundary to be the Delaware River, and the northern boundary to begin on the three and fortieth degree of north latitude. The petition was granted and the charter signed by Charles II on March 4, 1681.

A royal address was at once issued, informing the inhabitants of Pennsylvania that William Penn was the absolute proprietor and ruler thereof, subject only to the King of England, for whom was retained the right to review the laws passed in the Province and to hear appeals against judgments therein pronounced. In April 1681, William Penn, a broadminded, generous, and scholarly statesman who conceived of the state as founded on an educated and religious citizenry who are freed from the binding restrictions of narrow sectarianism and political autocracy, issued a proclamation to the people living within the territory covered by the charter, setting forth the policy that he intended to adopt in the government of his Province. In that letter/proclamation, he explicitly declared his desire that the citizens of Pennsylvania be self-governing:

I hope you will not be troubled at your change, and the King's choice, for you are now fixed at the mercy of no Governor that comes to make his fortune great; you will be governed by laws of your own making, and live a free, and if you will, a sober and industrious life. I shall not usurp the right of any, or oppress his person. God has furnished me with a better resolution, and has given me the grace to keep it. In short, whatever sober and free men can reasonably desire for the security and improvement of their own happiness, I shall heartily comply with.

Carbondale High School, Carbondale, Lackawanna County. Full size xerographic copy from the copy of this engraving in The Carbondale of To-day ("Issued by The Herald Publishing Company in conjunction with their Industrial Edition, June, 28, 1894") in the Russell Homestead Library, Carbondale, PA. This high school, located at the corner of Terrace Street and Lincoln Avenue, was opened in 1889. See pages 21-25 of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA for a discussion of the schools that were established in Carbondale, PA, in the nineteenth century. A photograph of this high school building appears in this issue on page 25.

Effective self-government, William Penn believed, can only be instituted by men of wisdom and virtue, and maintained if those men address themselves to the virtuous education of their children, thereby guaranteeing the transmission of wisdom and virtue from one generation to the next. Given those beliefs, William Penn, still in England, drew up, in 1682, a Frame of Government for his Province, in the Preface of which is the following statement:

That therefore which makes a good constitution must keep it, namely men of wisdom and virtue, qualities that because they descend not with worldly inheritance must be carefully propagated by a virtuous education of youth.

To institute that educational objective, William Penn provided, in the twelfth section of that Frame of Government:

That the Governor and Provincial Council shall erect and order all public schools, and encourage and reward the authors of useful sciences and laudable inventions in the said province.

He further provided, in the twenty-eighth section of that Frame of Government:

That all children within the Province of the age of twelve years, shall be taught some useful trade or skill, to the end none may be idle, but the poor may work to live, and the rich, if they become poor, may not want.

On October 27, 1682, William Penn arrived in Pennsylvania, on the ship Welcome, was graciously received by the inhabitants of the Province, and the "holy experiment" began.

II. 1682-1683

In December 1682, the first legislative body in the Province was convened by the Proprietor, who, though he was vested with all the powers of a proprietary governor, saw fit, in the furtherance of his original plan, to adopt a purely democratic form of government. The body was a general assembly of the people, and was held at Upland (now Chester). During the four days that that body met with William Penn (December 4-7, 1682), it accepted Penn's Frame of Government and passed the Great Law, which consisted of 71 sections or chapters. Nothing was said therein directly about education, but Chapter LX clearly implies the idea of schools in the following paragraph:

That the laws of this Province, from time to time, shall be published and printed, that every person may have knowledge thereof; and they shall be one of the books taught in the schools of this Province and Territories thereof.

This clearly presupposed an education sufficiently advanced to enable the young to prepare for citizenship by reading and understanding the laws under which they are to live.

On March 10, 1683, the second General Assembly of the colony met, in Philadelphia. Of the numerous laws passed by this Assembly, none possesses more historic interest regarding education and schools than Chapter CXII (dated April 2, 1683), which reads as follows:

And to the end that poor as well as rich may be instructed in good and commendable learning, which is to be preferred before wealth, Be it enacted, etc., That all persons in the Province and Territories thereof, having children, and all the guardians and Trustees of orphans, shall cause such to be instructed in reading and writing, so that they may be able to read the Scriptures and to write by the time they attain to twelve years of age; and that then they be taught some useful trade or skill, that the poor may work to live, and the rich if they become poor may not want: of which every County Court shall take care. And in case such parents, guardians, or overseers shall be found deficient in this respect, every such parent, guardian, or overseer shall pay for every such child, five pounds, except there should appear an incapacity or understanding to hinder it.

The Frame passed by the second General Assembly contains a provision relating to education not in the old charter. Directly after requiring that the "Governor and Provincial Council shall erect and order all public schools," it provides:

Eleventh: That one-third part of the provincial council residing with the Governor from time to time, shall with the Governor have the care of the management of public affairs relating to the peace, justice, treasury, and improvement of the Province and Territories, and to the good education of youth, and sobriety of the manners of the inhabitants therein as aforesaid.

This is generally regarded as one of the strongest and most comprehensive compulsory education laws ever passed in any country. It is, to be sure, unique in early American history. The statute remained in force for 10 years, when it was abrogated by William and Mary. It was subsequently re-enacted in 1693, by Governor Fletcher, "by and with the advise and consent of the representatives" of the Province. There does not seem to be any record showing that it was ever formally repealed. It probably became a dead letter on account of not being revived under the operation of subsequent frames of government.

Such were William Penn's ideals and explicit intentions with reference to public education, and such were the laws formulated by him and those formulated and passed by the people of Pennsylvania in 1682 and 1683. More than 150 years elapsed, as we shall see, however, before the public educational opportunities envisioned by Penn and his contemporaries were established throughout Pennsylvania. In the historical essay that follows, we will review the legislation enacted by the citizens of Pennsylvania regarding education and the history of the schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania from March 4, 1681 (the day on which Charles II granted Pennsylvania to William Penn) to May 16, 1895 (the day on which Pennsylvania's compulsory education law was passed).

III. 1683-1776

What legislation regarding education was passed in Pennsylvania in the period 1683-1776? In a word, none. Not until 1776, when the provisional constitution for the state of Pennsylvania was framed, was another law enacted regarding public education in Pennsylvania. Section 44 of that Constitution required (1) that an elementary school or schools be established by the legislature in each county, (2) that the teachers' salaries be paid from public funds, (3) that higher education be encouraged in the Commonwealth. Section 44 reads as follows:

A school or schools shall be erected in each county by the Legislature for the convenient instruction of youth, with such salaries to the masters paid by the public as may enable them to instruct youth at low prices; and all useful learning shall be duly encouraged and promoted in one or more Universities.

What can be said of the schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1683-1776? Very little, for the simple reason that there were very few white men who lived in the 11-county area of Northeastern Pennsylvania during this period (the 11-county area of Northeastern Pennsylvania was not purchased from the Indians until 1784<sup>2</sup>), and, therefore, very few schools were established.

Consider, for example, the fact that the first white man to come into Wayne County to live, we learn from an article published in The Wayne Independent in November 1961, was Moses Thomas, who settled with his family two miles down the Delaware River from Damascus in 1750.<sup>3</sup> Consider, as well, the fact that the Lackawanna Valley was not explored until 1753. Settlements in all other areas of Northeastern Pennsylvania were not earlier, and, therefore, organized efforts to establish schools were not made at this period. The first organized effort to establish schools in Lackawanna County, and perhaps in Northeastern Pennsylvania, took place, according to Murphy, in 1773. Murphy states:

In 1773 the first organized effort to establish schools in the settlement, which then clustered chiefly about Wilkes-Barre, was made. "In the following year," says Pearce in his history of Luzerne, "the first school committee consisting of Captain Lazarus Stewart and fifteen others was appointed with power to erect school houses and to employ teachers." It may be taken for granted that no schools were erected within what is now Lackawanna County (p. 200).

IV. 1776-1834

The Constitution of 1776 was amended in 1790. The latter Constitution contains broader provisions for public education than the former. The latter Constitution contains, thanks in no small part to the efforts of Thomas Pickering of Luzerne County, the following educational provisions:

Section I. The legislature shall, as soon as conveniently may be, provide by law for the establishment of schools throughout the State, in such a manner that the poor may be taught gratis.

Section II. The arts and sciences shall be promoted in one or more Seminaries of learning.

Section I of the Constitution of 1790, as we shall see, eventually became the legal basis for a free public school system in Pennsylvania.

Acts of the Legislature of 1802, 1804, and 1809 made effective Sections I and II of the 1790 Constitution. The 1802 law, passed at the urging of Governor McKean, required that the overseers of the poor in each city, borough, or township secure the names of children whose parents were too poor to send them to school, and notify such parents that they might send their children to school and have their tuition paid by public taxation. This law, providing free elementary education to the poor, remained in force for three years.

In 1804 a law was passed that repealed the 1802 law and required all teachers to "receive into their schools and teach as aforesaid, all such poor children as shall be recommended to them by the Overseers of the poor." This law provided, in addition, that the teachers be paid regular tuition for such pupils and that the funds come from the treasury of the city or county in question.

This law, like the law of 1802, had very few positive educational consequences. That being the case, in 1809 another educational law was passed. This law made it a requirement for the Commissioners in each county "Annually to direct and require the assessors of each and every township, ward and district, to receive from the parents the names of all children between the ages of five and twelve years, who reside therein, and whose parents are unable to pay for their schooling." The 1809 law further provided that lists of pauper children be provided to teachers and that the parents of such pauper children be notified that their children could be educated gratis in the elementary schools. The teachers of such pauper children were to keep a record of the attendance of these children, and the supplies furnished them, and present the bills to the State.

The 1809 law, not unlike the laws of 1802 and 1804, was largely a failure, and not very many children benefited from it. The reason for the failure of the 1809 law is well stated by James Pyle Wickersham, the dean of the historians of education in Pennsylvania (see engraving this page), in his monumental work, A History of Education in Pennsylvania, published in 1886:

This Act did not provide for the establishment of a single school, nor did it attempt to regulate in any way the existing schools it proposed to patronize. But its negative character was not its worst feature; it compelled parents to make a public record of their poverty, to pauperize themselves, and to send their children to school with this invidious mark upon them. Its practical defects were apparent from the first to the friends of a general system of public education (p. 266).

In 1824, an act that marked a more direct step in the direction of a general system of public education was passed. This act required, among other things:

- that three school men be elected in each township, ward or borough
- that the assessors prepare lists of poor children between the ages of 6 and 14, and place such lists in the hands of the school men, who were to revise such lists periodically
- that the school men supervise the education of the poor and furnish them with books and supplies
- that the citizens of the townships vote on schools or no schools; if the vote was in favor of schools, the school men were to levy a tax sufficient to support the schools for the year
- that in those areas where the vote was for schools, the school men were to select sites, erect buildings, furnish supplies, examine teachers, hire teachers, and generally oversee educational matters
- that no child be taught at public expense for more than 3 years
- that in any school under the direct control of any religious body, that the school men were not to employ a teacher without the consent of this body
- that any school under the direct control of any religious body not be prevented from receiving public funds
- that schools under the direct control of any religious body not refuse admission to any child chosen by the school men of the district in question.

This act aroused much opposition, and it was repealed in 1826, and the law of 1809 was restored. The fact that the law of 1824 was repealed two years after it was passed, notwithstanding, it did lay the foundation for a general system of public education in the Commonwealth, and, as we shall see, it contains some of the leading provisions that were in substance incorporated into the Free School Act of 1834.

What can be said of the elementary schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1776-1834? During the final decades of the eighteenth century, the number of schools that were established in this part of the Commonwealth is small, and with good reason: the exigencies of pioneer life were such that education was, for the pioneer settlers, a low priority. The ordinary man was busy in clearing the wilderness or securing the necessities of life, and, for him, education was of little practical value. Nevertheless, a school was taught in 1777 in old Springfield, Bradford County. Craft gives the following information about that school, and other early schools in Bradford County:

Previous to the battle of Wyoming, 1778, there were about forty settlers in old Springfield, many of whom were near or upon the site of the Indian town, and there is a tradition of a school taught there in 1777; but at this late day I have been unable to find evidence sufficient to establish the fact, although the tradition is probably correct (p. 120).

The first public school in the Wyoming valley, held in a building near the Ravine colliery in Pittston, was taught by John Jenkins for several winters before 1781 (1880, p. 332).

The earliest schools in Columbia County are described by Battle (pp. 106-107) as follows:

The first organized educational effort [in Columbia County] was probably made at Millville, in 1785, but this progressive sentiment was restricted by no sectarian limits, and primary schools multiplied, in Fishingcreek in 1794, in Benton in 1799, in the following year at Berwick, and elsewhere in the county in rapid succession.

James Pyle Wickersham was born in 1825 in Newlin Township, Chester County, Pennsylvania, and died March 2, 1891. He was of the fifth generation in direct descent from Thomas Wickersham, who settled, in 1701, on a tract of 1,000 acres of land in East Marlborough Township, Chester County, deeded in England, in 1682, to his father-in-law, Andrew Killingbeck, by William Penn, and by Killingbeck to Wickersham and his children in 1700. The Wickersham family came from the parish of Bolney, in the county of Sussex, England. James Pyle Wickersham attended the first common schools opened in his neighborhood, and studied the sciences, mathematics, and the Latin and French languages at the Unionville Academy. His degree of A.M. was conferred by Washington College, and his degree of LL.D. by Lafayette College. He began teaching at age 16; became principal of the Marietta Academy, Lancaster County, in 1845; in 1854 he was elected the first County Superintendent of Lancaster County; in April 1855, he established the Lancaster Normal Institute in the building erected at Millersville as an academy. At the end of the three months' term, the original idea of an academy was dropped and the institution was soon reopened as the Lancaster County Normal School. He opened the Normal School at Millersville, mainly as a school for the teachers of that county, guided it through its several stages of development, until it became the first State Normal School in 1859, and remained at its head with the exception of one session, that of 1855-56, until the time of his appointment as State Superintendent, November 1, 1866. He helped organize the Lancaster County Educational Association, and was its second president, in 1853; he helped organize the National Educational Association and was its seventh president. Two of his books, School Economy and Methods of Instruction, were used as textbooks in nearly all institutions in the country established for the training of teachers, and were translated into Spanish, French, and Japanese. In 1866, he published his monumental work, A History of Education in Pennsylvania, Private and Public, Elementary and Higher. From the Time the Swedes Settled on the Delaware to the Present Day (Lancaster: Published for the Author by Inquirer Publishing Company, 1886). He was State Superintendent of education from 1866 to 1881. He wrote many articles for school journals and for ten years was editor of The Pennsylvania School Journal. When he left the office of State Superintendent he was appointed by President Arthur, in part as a recognition of his educational services, Minister to Denmark.

In 1788 or 1789, a school was taught by a certain Master Root in Athens, Bradford County, the school building standing on a lot almost directly west of the school building in Athens in 1878 (see Craft, p. 120).

Similarly, elementary schools were established very early in Wilkes-Barre. In 1880 (p. 200), we read:

As early as 1790 there was a school-house--the only one in the town plot--standing upon the east side of the public square just in front of where now is William H. Sparring's grocery store, which was usually occupied about nine months during the year. At a later period there was another on the plains near the residence of Henry Courtwright, and another on the hill, on Dr. Covell's farm, just below the site of the depot of the passenger railroad in South Wilkes-Barre.

A school was established about 1791 in Burlington Township, Bradford County. Craft describes that school as follows (p. 289):

The first school-house built in Burlington was in the first settlement on Sugar creek, and very soon after the first pioneer families came in, in 1791. Mr. McKean gave an acre of ground for a cemetery and church site, the building to be erected for the double purpose of a church and school-house. It was on the same ground now occupied by the old church, and the burying ground near it.

The first school in Wayne County, of which there is any record, was opened in 1794 by Miss Lucy Stearnes in the house of Elijah Dix in Pleasant Mount. There were 12 students who attended this school. For her services, Miss Stearnes was paid 6 shillings per week.

A school was established very early in Fairmount Township, Luzerne County. The following information about that school is from 1880 (pp. 254-255):

The pioneer school-house in this [Fairmount] township was built of logs, in or about 1794, near the site of the Methodist Episcopal camp ground, between Huntington and Kitchen's creeks. The first teacher of whom we have any account was Mrs. Margaret Trescott, mother of Colonel E. L. Trescott, now living in Huntington. She taught the school in the summer of 1796.

The first school in Macedonia, Asylum Township, Bradford County, is described by Craft as follows (p. 269):

About 1798 a log school-house was built on the ridge below Israel Smith's, and the first school taught here was presided over by William McCarty.

Such are some of the schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania during the final decades of the eighteenth century.

Beginning around 1800, conditions were such that a great many schools were established, wholly through the voluntary efforts of the pioneer settlers, in a great many localities in Northeastern Pennsylvania. Most of these schools, like those that were established during the eighteenth century and like the majority of those that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period before the passage of the Free School Act in 1834, were of two types: (1) family schools and (2) neighborhood schools (also known as "pay" or "subscription" schools).

Prior to the enactment of the public school law in 1834, it must be recalled, the education of children was almost wholly a matter of private concern. Parents provided such education for their children as they wished or found convenient. That being the case, it is not at all surprising that family schools were frequently established by enlightened parents for the education of their children, and perhaps also for the children of their friends, tenants, or employees. Education was in the home or in a family structure, and the teachers were employed by the family. Such family schools were found throughout the State, not only in the period before the passage of the Free School Act, but also during the entire nineteenth century. Later in this essay, we will examine two such family schools that were established in Carbondale, Lackawanna County, in the second half of the nineteenth century: one by James Russell, and one by Eli E. Hendrick.

More numerous than family schools in the period 1776-1834 were the neighborhood schools. Such schools were frequently started in the following manner: The most education-conscious family or families of a community or settlement, having children to educate, would propose to their fellows that they establish a school. Those in favor of such an action would determine the number of pupils that would likely attend, provide a suitable room or building, and if none were available, they would erect such a structure. It was not uncommon for one of the families to donate the land necessary upon which to build the building themselves. Tuition fees were set and a teacher employed.

From papers in the document archive of Mr. Kurt A. Reed of South Canaan, Wayne County, PA, we learn the procedural specifics of the establishment of the Waynesville School, Canaan Corners, Wayne County, PA, in 1826 (this school is referred to as "School No. 1" on the map of Canaan and South Canaan Townships, Wayne County, that is given on page 40 of Beers' 1872 Atlas of Wayne County).<sup>4</sup> On January 26, 1880, Mr. Reed graciously granted the author permission to examine those documents. Given the fact that the procedures followed by the organizers of the Waynesville School are, doubtless, the same as those that were followed in hundreds, perhaps thousands, of neighborhoods/communities in Northeastern Pennsylvania during the early years of the nineteenth century, it is altogether fitting that we reprint here two of those documents.

First, the initial subscription form, signed by those subscribers who were willing to donate labor, money, or materials for the purpose of erecting the Waynesville School itself:

We the subscribers do agree to pay to the treasurer of the center district in Canaan township the sums affixed to our several names in cash or materials for the purpose of building a house on land given by Mr. Leonard Starkweather and John Fobes Esqr. on the Owego and Milford Turnpike near the intersection of the two Turnpike roads, of the following dimensions 30 feet long 24 wide and 10 feet [2 posts] to be occupied as a school House and a House of public worship for any religious denomination also for doing the public town business.

George Rix - $5 cash, 10 days labor, 500 pine ft inch; Vene Lee - $3 cash, 500 feet of [?]; Silas Hoadley - $3 cash, 10 days labor, glass 50, 2000 hemlock; Charles Stanton - 1000 claboards; Samuel Rogers Jr. - 500 Pine Board ft.; Noah Rogers - $1, 50 glass; Thomas Starkweather - $5, 10 days labor; Stephen Blatchley - $1, 10 days labor; William Griffing - $10; David Freeman - $1, 10 days labor; Ransellaer Benjamin - 6 days labor; Hiram Frisbie - $1, 4 days labor; David E. Freeman - 4 days labor; Isaac Hickman - 5 days labor; Robert Hosmer - $2, 8 days labor; Leonard Starkweather - $1, 4 days labor, one acre of land; John Fobes - $1, one acre of [? Co.] land and 4 days labor; Finley Cook - [? services of] Elijah Sampson; Edward Carr - $1, [? services of] Elijah Sampson; Joseph Ames - 4 days labor; John Shaffer - $3, 5 days labor, 300 ft. pine boards; William Chumard - 5 days labor; William Stanton - clapboard 600 pine boards.

In 1834, it is estimated (Wickersham, p. 179) that that there were 4,000 neighborhood schoolhouses in Pennsylvania, all of which were built, as was built the Waynesville School at Canaan Corners, Wayne County, by the volunteer contributions of the people in their respective communities/neighborhoods.

Listed below are some of the many neighborhood schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1800-1834:

--during the winter of 1799-1800, J. Tyler taught in the first school house erected in Wayne County, one built of logs near Philo Spencer's in Pleasant Mount; in 1806 a frame building was built in the same township

--"The earliest school [in Monroe County] of which any one appears to have any recollection, says Mr. Morey, was the one on Keever's Hill, in Stroud township, on the public road leading from Stroudsburg to the Wind Gap, and outside of the present borough limits. The citizens chiefly instrumental in building this school-house were Daniel Stroud, John Stroud and Mr. Hollinshead. It was a log structure, built after the model of the log houses of those days. The first teacher was a Mr. Curtis. He gave instruction only in the ordinary English branches. This was prior to the year 1800, but the exact date cannot be given. In the year mentioned, or possibly a little earlier or later, the school was moved to a stone building within the present borough limits, situated where Green Street now is, on a lot adjoining the Friends' Meeting-House... At Hamilton Square, in Hamilton township, a school was in successful operation about the year 1800. The building in which it was held was also a log structure" (Matthews, p. 1015).

--"George Vance taught an English school in a log building [in Bloomsburg, Columbia County] on the site of the Protestant Episcopal Church edifice in 1802, and about the same time, Ludwig Eyer taught a German school in a building at the northeast corner of Second and Market streets. Robert Fields, William Ferguson, Murray Manville and Joseph Worden were among the immediate successors of these two pedagogues" (Battle, p. 165).

--as early as 1803, a school house was erected in Newport Township, Luzerne County, on the Middle Road, opposite the cemetery

--"The First School in this locality [Towanda, Bradford County], of which we have any record, was taught by Miss Weltha Tracy, afterwards Mrs. Reuben Hale, before 1803, in a small building on the bank of the river north of the lime kiln. Eliphalet Mason taught a school of four months in the winter of 1803-04, in 'Wm. Mean's district,' and taught in the same district during the Spring and early part of the Summer of 1807" (Heverly, p. 191).

--"The first school in the vicinity of Glenwood [Lenox Township, Susquehanna County], and probably in all Lenox, was taught about 1804 by Miss Molly Post, in a barn belonging to John Marcy, whose farm was partly in Susquehanna County, though his residence was just below the line, in Luzerne, now Wyoming County. The barn was soon needed to store the hay of that season, and then a large tree was selected as a shelter for the scholars and teacher till the close of the term" (Blackman, p. 243).

--about 1805, a school house was built by the inhabitants of Forkston Township, Wyoming County, on a piece of ground owned by M. Krewson; it was a framed building; John Spaulding from Vermont, and Elihu Fassett were among the early teachers; the Burgess and Adams children were among the first students --"In the winter of 1806 the first school [in Canton Township, Bradford County] was taught, by Martha Wilson, a sister of Dr. Wilson. She also taught the following summer. She was compelled to close her school a portion of one day, in consequence of the total eclipse of the sun in 1806, the darkness being as deep as that of any starlight night" (Craft, p. 298).

--"In 1807 there was but one school-house in Gibson [Gibson Township, Susquehanna County], and that was roofed with bark. It stood on Union Hill, about forty rods from James Bennett's house. Miss Molly Post taught the school, and Charles Bennett, now of South Gibson, was one of her pupils. Lyman Richardson, since a faithful pastor, and the honored head of the University at Harford, taught a school in Capt. Potter's house during the winter of 1808 and 1809. A Mr. Follett is mentioned as a teacher prior to 1810, and, it is possible, prior to Miss Post" (Blackman, pp. 205-206).

--"The first school-house in the borough [of Waymart] was erected by Leonard Starkweather, in 1808, near the present residence of R. P. Patterson. Captain Thomas Starkweather was the first teacher. He was followed by Charles Kennedy, and he by Buckley Beardslee, Esq. A private school was held in the building for some time, but no record of the teachers can be obtained" (Matthews, p. 546).

--in 1808, George Gordon (whose mother was a sister of Eleazer A. Atherton) taught what is believed to be the first school in Lackawanna County, in Eleazer A. Atherton's barn in Taylorville

--as early as 1810 a log school house was built in Ashley Borough, Luzerne County, on the site of the Lehigh and Susquehanna repair and machine shops; the building also served as a church

--a log school house was built as early as 1810 in Lehman Township, Luzerne County, near the site of W. H. Ide's house; J. I. Bogardus and Abed Bladwin were the earliest teachers; four other early teachers in that school were Julius Pratt, Burr Baldwin, Mr. Perry, and Elijah Worthington

--"The first school [in Meshoppen Village, Wyoming County] was taught by Parmelia Ellsworth, in a barn near the site of William M. Sine's house, in 1812, and consisted of about twelve scholars. Probably there was a school at Black Walnut prior to this. The village school was long kept in a house--built about 1825 or 1830--near the mouth of the creek, south side, close by Owen Daley's barn. The old school-house, which was also used for a church, was abandoned about 1855 and soon became a ruin" (1880, p. 519).

--"The pioneer school-house [in Scott Township, Lackawanna County] was an old log building near Orvis Corners, and the first frame school-house was built at Orvis Corners in 1814, near where the present one stands. The first teacher was Josiah Fell. Soon after this there was a school-house near C. Lowrey's place, known as the 'Hibbard school-house.' Among the other early teachers were John Sherman, Fanny Hierlihy and Harriet McKinney" (1880, p. 493).

--about 1814 a school house was built at La Grange, Tunkhannock Township, Wyoming County, and taught, in 1815, by Hiram Luck

--"In 1818 the first school-house in Providence township [now North Scranton, Lackawanna County] was erected a short distance from the Holmes house ("near the Corners"); it is still standing, though not used for educational purposes" (1880, p. 400)

--"The pioneer school-house in school district No. 1 [in Greenfield Township, Lackawanna County] was built in 1820, of logs, and stood opposite the site of the Free Will Baptist church. The first frame [school] house was built in 1824, by Leonard Spencer, nearly on the site of the residence of H. C. Spencer" (1880, p. 478).

--in 1828, Lewis Pestana taught a school in Honesdale; the first school house erected in Honesdale, Wayne County, was built at the corner of High Street and Dyberry Avenue; four early teachers were: M. A. Whitney, Mary Ann Garrett, M. A. Bidwell, and Mrs. M. A. Bidwell

Many other examples of neighborhood schools established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1800-1834 could easily be given. Suffice it to say that hardly a community/neighborhood was, in this period, without its own locally established--and locally controlled--elementary school. Wickersham makes the following remarks on the elementary schools established in the Commonwealth prior to 1834.

Without any controlling law on the subject, and therefore necessarily without system, prompted by the wish to obtain at least some education for their children, but guided only by the light which a rough experience in an American wilderness furnished as to what should be provided, and limited always by the scanty means at their command, our fathers built schoolhouses, employed teachers, and sent their children to schools as best they could, and the wonder is not that under the circumstances so many sections of the country were poorly supplied with schools, but that education was so general. (p. 179)

What can be said of the early school buildings themselves? Many of the earliest schools were built of logs or poles and the spaces between the logs were filled with chips of wood and plastered with mortar made with clay. The windows were few in number--a log could be left out and the opening covered with paper rendered transparent by rubbing it with tallow or lard. Benches were made of logs split in two and hewn down to a proper thickness and supported by four legs. Stools and tables were made in a similar manner. The ceilings were low. In the better schools, the floors were made of puncheons. In others they were of dirt. Desks for the older children ranged around and faced the walls of the house; for the younger children, slab benches were arranged in the center of the room.

Everywhere, in the course of years, these somewhat crude, uncomfortable, and poorly lighted and heated structures were replaced by something better—houses constructed of hewn logs, framed lumber, stone or brick. The Farno School, Clinton Township, Wayne County (see photograph this page) is a good example of a framed school building of the type found in Northeastern Pennsylvania, as well as in many other parts of the country, in the period from the middle of the nineteenth century to the middle of the twentieth century.

The Stone Jug School, South Canaan Township, Wayne County (see photograph this page) is a good example of a second type of school structure that replaced the early log buildings—the octagonal stone building. The following description of the Stone Jug School is from History of South Canaan (p. 4) compiled and edited by Kurt A. Reed, and presented by him at old Canaan Day, September 2, 1973:

There is no record of the year the Stone Jug school house was built, but from what evidence is available it was probably in use in the late 1830's. It was built of native stone, with walls eighteen inches thick. It was eight-sided, an octagon shape. On opening the heavy two-inch door you stepped right into the schoolroom, facing the big pot-bellied coal-burning stove, which stood in the exact center of the room. At the back end of the room facing the stove and the door was the teacher's desk, this sat on a platform about six inches high. The blackboard stretched across the side behind the teacher's desk, going right and left and covering two of the eight sides of the building. The left of the room was the boys' side and the right the girls'.

The first seats were long homemade benches. In the 1890's the school board had these seats removed and replaced by seats with the seats and desk attached, these were factory made. The deep window sills held the lunch pails. Just inside the door to the left was a low bench that held the drinking water pail, this had a long-handled tin dipper hanging inside it. Pupils considered it a treat to be named by the teacher to go and get a pail of water from a near neighbor.

The school was not graded... This building was used until 1900. Then it was sold by the school board for $40.00 to the man on whose land it stood, to be used for the storage of farm tools and equipment.

A representation of the Stone Jug School, South Canaan Township, Wayne County, appears on the membership cards and stationery of the Citizens for Preservation of Our Local Heritage, Inc., Post Office Box 27, Honesdale, PA 18431. A membership card of that organization is shown below:

Farno School House, Clinton Township, Wayne County. This photograph appears on a Christmas card in the collection of Mrs. Lois (Norton) Curtis, Waymart, PA. On the back of the photograph is written the following: "This school was closed August 1944 By Clinton Twp. School Directors." The last teacher of this school—which was located just South of the Clinton Baptist Church in Clinton Township—was Mrs. Beatrice (Curtis) Bartholomay, Waymart, PA.

From the middle of the eighteenth century to the final decades of the nineteenth century, secondary education in Pennsylvania was carried on largely by the Academies, which were established throughout the State by groups of local citizens or by religious denominations. Prior to the passage of the Free School Act, and for a few years thereafter, the State, instead of financing a public school system, chose to subsidize private and sectarian schools on the secondary level. When grants of money or land were made to such academies, they were usually coupled with the condition that a certain number of poor children were to be instructed gratis for a limited period of time. These poor children were expected to become teachers in the elementary schools of the Commonwealth.

At the time of the passage of the Free School Act in 1834, the following academies—many of which were chartered by the State—were in operation in Northeastern Pennsylvania:

1. WILKES-BARRE ACADEMY, Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County; opened in 1804 and incorporated in 1807, given $2,000 by the State in 1807.

The description of the Wilkes-Barre Academy that is given below is from 1880 (pp. 472-473):

If some old citizen of Wilkes-Barre were asked to name the institution that had done most for that town and the county of Luzerne, he would most likely point to the place where the building stood in the public square, and say, with an anection still warm, the Wilkes-Barre Academy. Unlike most institutions of its class, it was open from the first to both sexes, and on its rolls were the names of the leading families of the Wyoming Valley. Wilkes-Barre Academy was chartered in 1807; in 1838, with other alterations in the charter, the name was changed to Wyoming Academy. An old log building, used as a Court-house prior to 1804, was the seat of the Academy for thirty-one years, when it gave place to a more pretentious brick structure. Garrick Mallery, afterwards President Judge, was the first Principal. Among the students who became prominent, may be mentioned Judge George W. Woodward, Congressman Hendrick B. Wright, Doctor S. D. Gross, Bishop Samuel Bowman, and Professor John S. Hart.

The announcement for the Wilkes-Barre Academy that is given below was published in The Susquehanna Democrat, December 4, 1812:

WILKES-BARRE ACADEMY

The Trustees and Managers of the Wilkes-Barre Academy inform the public that the Superintendence of that institution is now intrusted to Mr. Jennison under a permanent engagement for the term of three years at least. Scholars are instructed in all or any of the following branches: viz., Spelling, Reading, Penmanship, Book-keeping, Arithmetic, English Grammar, in its various parts, Geography and the use of Globes, History, Composition, the Latin and Greek languages in all their respective classical authors, Rhetoric, Logic, Mathematicks in all the different branches, including Natural Philosophy and Astronomy; and generally all the branches of Science which are taught in any of the Academies of our country. The studies of scholars, if requested, will be so calculated as to prepare them for admission into any college which may be desired, or the pupils by a longer continuance at the Academy may obtain the substance of a complete scientific education.

The following account of the Wilkes-Barre Academy, from its founding in 1804 up to 1880, is here reprinted from 1880 (pp. 200-201):

THE WILKES-BARRE ACADEMY.

In 1807 the Wilkes-Barre Academy was incorporated with a donation of $2,000 from the State. Ebenezer Bowman, Lord Butler, Matthias Hollenback, William Ross, Jesse Fell, Joseph Sulton, Joseph Slocum and others were the trustees. Ebenezer Bowman was president of the board up to the day of his death. What memories are recalled by the mention of this institution, where many of the most influential men of the Wyoming valley received their education, and from which others have gone out to win names and fame in the outside world! It was the first and for some time the only institution of learning above the grade of common school in old Luzerne. The board of trustees obtained from the county the old court-house and jail, which they improved and converted into their school-rooms, and opened a kind of school as an apology for a classical institute. The first teacher was Samuel Jackson. He was succeeded by a Mr. Root. Then David Scott took charge of the concern and organized an English grammar class. He wrote the text-book, and each pupil had to make his own copy in manuscript, until "Murray's" was introduced in 1809. This year the trustees enlarged their building and imported from Yale Garrick Mallery (just then graduated) as principal, at a salary of $1,000 per annum; and now Wilkes-Barre began to be looked upon as the educational center of all northern Pennsylvania and southern New York. The institution was fairly opened with Garrick Mallery as principal, Edward Chapman and Thomas Bartlett as assistants, and Jacob Taylor as writing master.

The little town was crowded with students from abroad. The catalogue embraced some seventy-five non-resident pupils. The school flourished as long as Mr. Mallery remained at its head. At the end of the year he retired to pursue his law studies, and was afterward president judge of the State courts, and as an able lawyer he won a national reputation. During the administration of Mr. Mallery Andrew Beaumont, then a new comer, and an active young man of much promise, who has since been a representative in the State Assembly and in Congress, and held other important official positions, was employed as his assistant. Under their management Greek, Latin, mathematics and the higher English branches were taught.

Their successor was Rev. Mr. Thayer, a Congregational minister of the Old School and a graduate of Harvard University, who retired at the end of a year. He was succeeded by Mr. Janeson and then Rev. William Woodbridge and others conducted the institution up to about 1818, when Joel Jones, a graduate of Harvard college, became the principal and remained two or three years. Upon his retirement his brother Joseph H. Jones took charge of the institution, and conducted it with great ability for several years. He was followed by Messrs. Woodbridge, Baldwin, Granger, Orton, Miner, Talcott, Ullman, Hubbard and Dana. After the erection of the second court-house the old building was converted to the uses of the academy, having been removed to a point within the public square, a little west of the present court-house. After many years' use the old edifice was sold to Colonel H. F. Lamb, and a portion of it was removed to Franklin street and constituted a part of a dwelling.

Among the students of the old academy we may mention the following, who have gained distinction in their chosen careers; Lieutenant J. C. Beaumont, of the United States navy; Major A. H. Bowman, of the United States army; Major E. W. Morgan, who served his country in Mexico and later was principal of the Newport, Ky., military school; Hon. Hendrick B. Wright, a well known lawyer and politician of Luzerne county and the State at the present time; Hon. B. A. Bidlack, who represented his district in Congress, and later was sent as United States minister to New Granada, where he died; Hon. George W. Woodward, one of the most eminent legal lights of the commonwealth; Judge Luther Kidder; Dr. S. D. Gross, an eminent professor of surgery in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia; Rev. Samuel Bowman, D. D., at one time acting bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in Pennsylvania; ex-Attorney General Ovid F. Johnson; George Catlin, the well known American artist; Rev. Zebulon Butler, D.D., of Mississippi, and Prof. J. S. White, at one time a prominent educator of Philadelphia. With such results the older citizens of Wilkes-Barre have just reason for pride in memory of the old academy.

2. KINGSTON ACADEMY, 1812

3. ATHENS ACADEMY, Athens, Bradford County; chartered, February 27, 1813, and given $2,000 by the State; four poor children were to be taught gratis.

The following account of the Athens Academy is from Craft (p. 123):

The first attempt to found an academy in this place [Bradford County] was at Athens.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of this place, held Feb. 11, 1797, the matter of higher education having been discussed, a series of resolutions was passed in which it is declared to be the earnest wish of many of the inhabitants of this town that a public building should be erected, to be occupied for the accommodation of an academy or seminary of learning for the instruction of youth, also to be occasionally occupied as a place of public worship and other public purposes; the building to be erected on one of the public lots of Athens; the capital stock to consist of at least twenty shares, at thirty dollars each, in which each share should have one vote, and the business of the association to be managed by three trustees. The building which it was contemplated to erect was to be forty feet in length, twenty-four feet in width, and two stories in height; the upper story to be finished in one room, or hall, with arched ceiling. There was to be an "elegant balcony," and the windows were to have venetian blinds.

The subscribers to the fund held their first meeting at the house of Capt. Elisha Matthewson, March 2, 1797. Noah Murray was elected chairman of the meeting, Clement Paine secretary, and Maj. Elisha Satterlee, John Spalding, and John Shepard, trustees of the society. Among the numerous resolutions passed at this meeting was one that the name of the association should be the Athens Academical Society; that the legislature should be applied to for an act of incorporation, and for the grant of a lottery to raise an endowment fund, and the Susquehanna company asked for a grant of land.

The institution, however, was of slow growth, for although at a meeting held May 12, 1798, it was voted that the trustees be requested immediately to take measures to procure the frame for an academy, to be completely inclosed, it was voted, May 21, 1808, that the trustees be and are hereby directed to advertise the academy for sale. The sale, however, was not effected, and subsequently the resolution was revoked, and the trustees required to have the building repaired and painted, and "not to allow any person to put hay or flax or any other thing whatever in said building, as it has heretofore received essential injury from such means."

June 21, 1811, the proprietors sold to the Masonic lodge the upper room for $80 and to finish the upper story, in which the lodge expended $400.

The academy was incorporated by act of legislature, Feb. 27, 1813, and the sum of $2000 granted to the trustees to be invested, and the interest appropriated to the purposes of the institution, which was to be available when the owners should relinquish to the trustees, for the use of the institution, all of their interest in it.

The room was reported finished Dec. 6, 1813, and the school was opened by Sylvanus Guernsey as principal, with a salary of $500 per year.

March 4, 1842, the academy was burned to the ground. Rooms were immediately procured for the use of the school, and at a meeting held Feb. 21, 1843, steps were taken for the erection of a new building. This building was completed in 1845, and was used for academical purposes until sold to the school-board of Athens borough, in 1872, since which time it has been occupied as a graded school, which has now four teachers and about two hundred pupils.

4. BEECHWOODS ACADEMY, Bethany, Wayne County; chartered, May 4, 1813, and given $1,000 by the State; five poor children were to be instructed gratis.

The building was of brick, two stories high, and built on a stone foundation with the first floor walls 16" thick, second floor walls 12" thick; a fireplace was built on the stone foundation on the first floor, and another on top of it on the second floor. The building was ready for occupancy in the winter of 1820. At that time, Ephraim Torrey was selected as the first principal. Matthews says the following of the course of study of the Academy and of some of the students who attended: "Although the course of study was not extended, it was thorough and practical, and a number of men who afterwards rose to distinction were among the pupils of the next few years. Thomas Fuller, a brother of Amzi, taught it about 1824; and in 1826 or 1827 L. C. Judson, the father of 'Ned Buntline,' the well-known writer of adventurous tales, was principal" (p. 498).

In 1855, by an act of the Legislature, the property was sold, and the proceeds appropriated to the Northern University of Pennsylvania (see Section IX, below).

In 1976, the Beechwoods Academy building was owned by the Paul Carpenters.

5. DELAWARE ACADEMY, Damascus, Wayne County; chartered in 1813, and given $1,000 by the State; five poor children were to be instructed gratis.

"The building at Damascus was a wooden structure, two stories high. As an academy it never ranked high, and it is now simply a private elementary school" (Wickersham, p. 491).

6. PLYMOUTH ACADEMY, Plymouth, Luzerne County.

From 1880 (p. 355) we learn the following information about Plymouth Academy:

The old Academy was built in 1815. The early teachers in this building were Jonah Rogers, Thomas Patterson, Dr. Thomas Sweet and Charles C. Curtis. 'The languages were first taught in the old Academy as early as 1829' by Benjamin M. Nyce. Nyce and Patterson taught three or four years, and then Mr. Seivers, the last teacher who taught the dead languages in the old Academy.

A more complete account of the Plymouth Academy (see photograph this page) is given by Samuel L. French in Reminiscences of Plymouth, Luzerne County, Penna. (pp. 39-40):

The first church building to be erected in Plymouth was undoubtedly the old Academy. Prior to its erection, Col. Wright in his history of Plymouth says, that religious services were held in private houses.

The Old Academy—now transformed into dwellings—was erected, probably by common contributions, some time in the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. The entrance was by high stone steps facing Academy street, and leading to a wide vestibule, on either side of which were stairs leading to the second story which was fitted up with high backed benches for pews, which extended on each side from the centre aisle to the wall. In the centre of the aisle were several wooden columns to support the ceiling, the columns extending the length of the aisle, at the eastern end of which was the high pulpit with a ballustrad stairway of some eight or ten steps on the side ascending into it. In front of, and a few feet distant from the pulpit, on a raised platform with a picket fence enclosing perhaps two thirds the space in front. At short intervals along the walls hung the sconces or candle holders, which at evening services the members of the congregation were expected to supply with tallow candles. I remember of having attended some of those meetings with my mother who would take with her, her quota of illuminating material. The collection bags, or pockets of black velvet, were attached to the ends of long red poles whereby the toll gatherers would be enabled to collect pennies from the sinners seated on the farthest ends of the benches.

The first story of the building was divided into two sections, and fitted up with long desks and benches, and a blackboard on the wall for school purposes.

7. STROUDSBURG ACADEMY, Stroudsburg, Monroe County.

A rather complete account of this Academy—not to be confused with what is referred to as the "old academy" in Stroudsburg, see Section IX below—is given in Matthews (pp. 1153-1154), and we quote herebelow several paragraphs therefrom:

An act was passed by the State Legislature on the 28th day of March, 1814, "incorporating the Stroudsburg Academy, in the village of Stroudsburg, in the county of Northampton." The act declared "that there shall be and is hereby established, in the county of Northampton, an academy, or public school, for the education of youth in the useful arts, sciences and literature, by the name and style of the Stroudsburg Academy; that the first trustees of said academy shall consist of the following persons: Daniel Stroud, Samuel Rees, Jacob Postens, Jacob Brown, William Van Buskirk, William D. Walton, Asa Herring, John Allabach and James Hollinshead; that the said trustees are empowered to erect such buildings and make such improvements as may be found necessary for said institution, and generally to perform all matters which shall be for the well-being of the said academy and the management; that they shall have the power to make and erect ordinances for the government of said academy, and the electing and appointing a master and tutors, of agreeing with them for their salaries and of removing them; and that when the building shall have been completed and the salaries of the masters and tutors arranged, in case any funds shall be left above what is necessary to keep the building in repair, they shall expend the same in the purchase of books, charts, maps, globes and philosophical apparatus for the use of the academy."

The same year in which the charter was granted Daniel Stroud started a subscription for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of a lot and the erection of a building for a public school. In this paper Daniel Stroud donates a lot for the purpose valued at one hundred dollars, and the following persons contributed in various sums: James Hollinshead, Samuel Rees, Jacob Brown, William Van Buskirk, Asa Herring, Jacob Postens, James Burson, George Dreher, Samuel Drake, Burris Montonya, William Gordon, Daniel Koontz, John Allenbach, Peter Allenbach, George Waters, Philip Shafer, William D. Walton, William Wills and William Huston. After the foregoing subscription had been received, and finding the funds inadequate to defray the expense of the building contemplated, a subscription was drawn by Peter Hollinshead. This petition sets forth "the purpose of building a house of worship in the village of Stroudsburg, on a lot already given for the purpose of an academy, providing the consent of the trustees of said lot can be obtained; otherwise to be put on such other lot as can be procured in said village that shall appear to the trustees of said house of public worship eligible for the purpose. It is considered at the time of making this substitution that the use of said house of public worship shall be divided among those religious societies whose members have contributed towards its erection." The following are the names of contributors: Peter Hollinshead, Asa Herring, George Waters, Samuel Pugh, Samuel Drake, Jr., Daniel Stroud, J. Hollinshead, Michael Brown, Hugh Pugh, Daniel Ashton, Francis Drake, Thomas Smiley, William D. Clayton, Samuel Rees, Peter Allenbach, William Colbert, Jacob Brown, Henry Ransberry, John and Michael Ransberry, John Wolf, John Brodhead, Jane Brodhead, John Brown, Jr., Robert Russell, John Juston, and William Torbert. The trustees accordingly, in 1816, erected a stone building two stories high on the present Green Street, near the corner of Main and Elizabeth Streets, the State appropriating four hundred dollars for the purpose. It was used on the Sabbath by the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist congregations until they secured other places of worship.

It is not possible to procure a complete list of the instructors at the academy. At a meeting of the board of trustees held March 19, 1828, it was announced that the services of Joseph Shepherd, of Bucks County, had been secured as teacher. At a later date were Rev. Frederick Knighton, Ira B. Newman and Rev. J. B. Hyndshaw. The pronounced abolition sentiments of Mr. Newman made his presence obnoxious to many citizens and occasioned his dismissal by the trustees. He, in 1839, brought a suit against them, which was decided adversely to him.

This property was finally sold at sheriff's sale, and conveyed by John Kern, sheriff of Northampton County, on the 27th of April, 1829, to Daniel Stroud, William Van Buskirk and James Postens. Messrs. Postens and Van Buskirk subsequently conveyed their shares to the Stroudsburg French Seminary, and the heirs of Daniel Stroud, at a later date, executed a release of the remaining third to the same corporation.

8. SUSQUEHANNA ACADEMY, Montrose, Susquehanna County; chartered, March 19, 1816, and given $2,000 by the State; five poor children were to be instructed gratis.

A very complete account of the Susquehanna Academy is given in Blackman's History of Susquehanna County (pp. 526-528) and portions of that text are given below:

In and by an act of assembly passed the 19th of March, 1816, establishing an academy in the town of Montrose, the following gentlemen were appointed trustees:—William Thomson, Davis Dimock, Isaac Post, Jabez Hyde, Jr., Jonah Brownson, Daniel Ross, Wright Chamberlin, H. Tiffany, Jr., Robert H. Rose, David Post, Charles Fraser, and Putnam Catlin.

These trustees comprised the principal officers of the county, with the president and cashier of the Silver Lake Bank. A meeting was appointed for the 3d of September following. In the mean time the legislature granted $2000 towards the erection of an academy at Montrose.

The care of its erection was given to Isaac Post, and it was completed in 1818. The offices of judges and commissioners in the board of trustees were then filled by J. W. Raynsford, Benjamin Sayre, S. S. Mulford, I. P. Foster, Samuel Warner, Justin Clark, Bela Jones, and B. T. Case, the last named being then secretary, and for several years afterwards.

There was no church edifice in the place, and the second floor of the building was used as a place of religious worship every Sabbath. The Academy at that time occupied the brow of the hill above the new jail, the hill then being much steeper than at present, and containing a valuable quarry but little excavated... About 1828, the building was moved down close to the sidewalk, between the present locations of the new academy and the old court-house, where it remained for twenty-two years. (A correct representation of it appears in the picture of the Montrose Green.)

Among the teachers engaged in this institution, the following are remembered:—1818. William Jessup (advertised by the trustees as teacher of mathematics and "the learned languages") and Bela Jones; J. W. Raynsford, part of the year; 1819. Samuel Barnard, and daughter Catharine (since Mrs. Morgan); 1820. Ralph H. Read, Walker Woodhouse; 1821-24. Albert Bingham, David Benedict, P. Wright; 1825-28. Eli Meeker, Sloane Hamilton, Franklin Lusk, Benjamin and D. Dimock, Jr.; 1829-31. Seth T. Rogers, P. Richardson, S. S. Stebbins, Rufus B. Gregory; 1833-36. B. S. Bentley; 1837-42. L. H. Woodruff, (?) H. S. Fairchild, Payne, Rev. S. Manning; 1843-44. Z. L. Beebe and Lafayette C. Dimock; 1845-47. C. C. Halsey; 1848-49. A. J. Buel. Most of the above were collegiate graduates.

Among the lady teachers after Miss Barnard, and prior to 1830, were Misses Ann Harris (afterwards Mrs. S. Hodgdon), Maria Jones, Abigail Sayre (Mrs. James Catlin), Mary Ann Raynsford (Mrs. D. D. Warner)... 6

In 1832, the academy was thoroughly repaired, and an orrery and other apparatus procured. The same season an infant school was taught by Mrs. Amanda B. Catlin. She had the first piano in the place (1819), and taught music in 1832. Subsequently, and prior to 1837, Misses Jane A. Brand (Mrs. Dr. Justin A. Smith, of Chicago, recently deceased), Lucretia Loomis, A. L. Fraser, Nancy and Caroline Bowman, Caroline C. Woodhouse, and possibly others, were teachers in the lower rooms of the academy, while the classical department occupied the one long room on the second floor...

A new academy had been projected in 1846, but it was not completed until the summer of 1850; the building, 50 by 60 feet, is now occupied by the graded school. Its cost was $4200.

The first board of trustees consisted of William Jessup, president; R. J. Niven, secretary; M. S. Wilson, treasurer; Rev. H. A. Riley, F. B. Streeter, B. S. Bentley, William L. Post, George Fuller, Alfred Baldwin, William J. Mulford, Leonard Searle, D. D. Warner, and Henry Drinker. They made valuable contributions for the foundation of a library and cabinet of natural curiosities, which it is to be regretted have not been well preserved.

The first instructors were Lemuel H. Waters, A. M., principal; Miss Mary J. Crawford, preceptress; William H. Jessup, and Miss A. A. P. Rogers, assistant teachers; Miss Caroline Bowman, superintendent of primary department; Emily C. Blackman, teacher of music; Gustave H. Walther, teacher of German. Succeeding principals were Rev. Isaac Gray, Rufus C. Crampton, William H. Richmond, John L. Mills, and Hartsborne, collegiates. After Miss Crawford, the lady teachers were Misses Bessie Hunting, Caroline Bush, Frances J. Woolworth, and Brown.

A normal school [Susquehanna County Normal School, see Section VI, below] was established in the fall of 1857...

9. MILFORD ACADEMY, Milford, Pike County; chartered in 1827 and given $2,000 by the State; five poor children were to be taught gratis.

Little is known about this Academy. The following information is from Wickersham (p. 485):

In 1827 the State incorporated an Academy or Public School at Milford, and made it a grant of $2,000. A building was erected, and for a time a good school was maintained, but when the appropriations under the Act of 1838 ceased, it soon closed. The property still belongs to the county, but for many years has not been used as an Academy.

10. DUNDAFF ACADEMY, Dundaff, Susquehanna County; chartered in 1830; no appropriations from the State were, at that time, given to this Academy; in 1838, Dundaff Academy was granted a sum of money by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The notice for the Dundaff Academy that is given below is reprinted from the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Volume VI, Number 24, June 8, 1855, p. 4, col. 2):

THE DUNDAFF ACADEMY.

THE Proprietor, MR. RICHARD HOOLIHAN, would respectfully inform the public that he has taken this Institution with the design of fitting young Ladies and Gentlemen for the profession of Teaching according to the Normal mode or for fitting young Men for any other business of life.

This Institution is situated in the pleasant, retired and healthy village of Dundaff, Susquehanna Co., Pa., and is unexposed to the many temptations and vices that are detrimental to the intellectual and moral advancement of Students.

The Preceptress, MISS M. J. SWART, a highly educated and accomplished Lady, will take the entire charge of the young Ladies, both in and out of School. Nor will they be allowed to attend parties or any place of amusement without the express permission and attendance of the Teacher. Miss Swart will give lessons also in Ornamental Needle Work, French Penciling, Crayoning, &c., &c.

One of the prime objects of this Institution has been to establish a Normal department or Teacher's course, for the benefit of those desiring to make Teaching a profession. The whole course of instruction requires three years. In this course it has been the object to embrace those studies of practical importance as well as those of an educational character, and great care has been taken so to classify and arrange them as to present to the Student an easy gradation from the simplest subjects to the most difficult.

Pupils will not be hurried through a superficial course of study; nor will they be encouraged in an undue fondness for any particular science to the neglect of others; but such a course will be pursued as will lead to a systematical development of all the powers of the mind, by directing the thoughts to the study of principles, the relation of cause and effect instead of isolated facts.

Tuition and other Expenses.
Common English Branches per Quarter of Eleven Weeks,	$4 00
Higher English Branches per Quarter of Eleven Weeks,	5 00
Latin and Greek, extra each,	3 00
French, German and Italian, extra each,	3 00
Penciling, Crayoning & Drawing, "	3 00
Music, with use of Piano,	10 00
Vocal Music,	1 00
Board per week,	2 00

Those wishing to board themselves can procure suitable rooms for the purpose.

Board and Tuition Bills invariably to be paid in advance. The Second Term of the Institution will commence May 9th, and as studies will then be arranged and classified, Students are particularly requested to be present.

For further information address the Principal.

We, the undersigned, can, under the present experienced and efficient Board of Instructors who are practically familiar with the Normal Mode of instruction, with implicit confidence commend the Dundaff Academy to the favorable consideration of those preparing themselves for Teachers, and to all those who desire to give their sons and daughters a thorough practical and liberal education.

11. LE RAYSVILLE ACADEMY, Le Raysville, Bradford County; established, January 8, 1830, with Giles De Wolf, Josiah Benham, L. W. Woodruff, Isaac Seymour, Lyman Bostwick, Lemuel C. Belting, and Gould Seymour as trustees.

12. FRANKLIN ACADEMY, or HARFORD UNIVERSITY, Harford, Susquehanna County.

The following information about the Franklin Academy is from Blackman's History of Susquehanna County (pp. 529-530):

In the absence of promised information respecting this institution, only meager items can be given. It was the outgrowth of a select classical school at Harford, begun by Rev. Lyman Richardson, in 1817. Ten years later, his brother Preston had charge of it for a time. In 1830 it became "Franklin Academy," of which, in 1837, Willard, son of Rev. L. Richardson, was the principal; F. B. Streeter, Mrs. L. T. Richardson, and Misses Kingsley, and H. A. Tyler, assistants.

In Nov. 1839, the corner-stone of the new building was laid. Nathan Leighton taught in the spring of 1840, but in the fall following, Rev. L. Richardson resumed the charge, assisted by his daughter, N. Maria, Henry Abel, Miss M. Gardner, and Mrs. L. T. Richardson. From 1848-55, Rev. Willard Richardson was principal. In 1856 his father again took the post, but not long after resigned in favor of Rev. Edward Allen.

This institution, latterly styled a university, had been emphatically a normal school from the beginning, and upon the establishment of the school at Montrose, under the care of Prof. Stoddard, its labors appear to have been permanently suspended, after a duration of half a century.

A very large number of its graduates became professional teachers; many, ministers of the gospel, and not a few, prominent public men. Among them may be mentioned Revs. Moses Tyler and Washington Thatcher; Rev. Wm. S. Tyler, D. D., L.L.D., of Amherst College; Rev. W. H. Tyler, formerly of Pittsfield Institute, Mass.; Prof. John Wadsworth Tyler, a graduate of Union College, and former principal of Cazenovia Seminary, N.Y., who died in 1833; Prof. E. G. Tyler, now of Canandaigua, N.Y.; John Guernsey, State Senator; John D. Stiles, Congressman for Carbon County; F. B. Streeter, President Judge of the 4th Judicial District; Stewart Pierce, State Representative, and Historian of Luzerne County; Jesse Barrett, Prof. of Mathematics in the University of Missouri; G. A. Grow, former Speaker of House of Representatives, U.S.; C. R. Buckalew, U. S. Senator, and late candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania; and Cyrus C. Carpenter, present Governor of Iowa.

The annual exhibition of Franklin Academy brought together several thousand interested spectators. The benefits of the institution were within the reach of those of humble means, owing to the accommodations for students to board themselves; and the best yeomanry of the county were here constantly represented.

In 1865, the buildings of the Franklin Academy were converted into a Soldiers' Orphan School (see below, Section VII).

13. HONESDALE ACADEMY, Honesdale, Wayne County; chartered in 1833.

A comprehensive account of the Honesdale Academy is given in Matthews (pp. 424-425), and we reprint here five paragraphs from that account:

The Honesdale Academy.—This, the most important educational institution which the town ever possessed, besides the graded schools, was organized in 1833, and the old academy building was erected in that year, on the site of the present school building. The original board of trustees in 1833 was composed of J. B. Walton, J. Neal, A. H. Farnum, J. D. Delezenne and S. W. Genung. No effort appears to have been made to conduct an academy here until 1838, the building being rented by the trustees to the school board from 1835 to that time and used by them as a district school-house. In 1838 the trustees, however, opened an academy, with Henry Seymour, A.B., a graduate of Amherst College, as principal. He was followed by Professors Morse, Willard Richardson, B. B. Smith, C. N. Todd and John Proctor, John Proctor, J. H. Sinclair, May & Lott, Lott, Terrell & Briggs and Briggs alone.

In 1853 the old building was removed to the east side of Third Street, between Tenth and Eleventh. It has since been used as a residence, and is now occupied by Mrs. George Bentley. The same year the main part of the present building was erected, F. B. Penniman and Charles C. Waller raising the money for the enterprise. When completed there was a debt of about two thousand dollars hanging over the new building, toward the cancellation of which the following subscriptions were made: John Torrey, $400; Russel F. Lord, $300; T. H. R. Tracy, $250; Richard L. Seely, $250; James R. Dickson, $250; S. D. Ward, $50; S. E. Dimmick, $50, and others stood ready to contribute the residue.

The May term, 1853, was opened in the new building, C. N. Todd and John Proctor being the associate principals, with a corps of assistants, including Mrs. C. F. Tracy, Miss Abbie R. Knight, Miss C. L. Scott and Mr. Godfrey Stoeubly. The trustees at this period were R. L. Seely, T. H. R. Tracy, S. D. Ward, S. E. Dimmick, James R. Dickson and F. B. Penniman.

The academy was conducted quite successfully, under the various principals heretofore named, until 1861, when it was discontinued, and the building was sold to the school directors for twenty-three hundred dollars.

As a matter of interest to many readers, we give a partial list of the pupils of the old academy during the years 1844-45-46, when B. B. Smith was principal. The names were selected from his books and are chiefly those of resident pupils.—Joseph Gustin, Warren Seely, Franklin A. Seely, Thomas Swingle, Miles Swingle, David H. V. 1834-1836

On April 1, 1834, the Free School Act of the State of Pennsylvania was passed. The bill was, for the most part, written by Samuel Breck, referred to by some as the "father of public education."

The primary provisions of the 1834 law are these:

- every county of the Commonwealth was required to form a school division; every ward, township, and borough was required to form a school district
- an annual meeting of the county commissioners and a representative of each school board in the county was to be held; at the meeting it was to be decided by a majority vote whether a county tax should be levied for school purposes; if the vote was in favor of the tax, the meeting arranged for the levy, which was not to be less than twice the amount received from the State; if the vote was against a county tax, the district was to receive no part of the State appropriation for education; districts voting not to have a county tax were to work under the law of 1809
- the school directors were assigned particular powers and duties in locating and building schools and hiring teachers
- school visits were to be made by the board and annual reports were to be made to the district inspectors
- two inspectors of the public schools were to be appointed annually by the Court of Quarter Sessions in each district, whose duty it was to examine and certificate teachers, visit each school at least once in three months, and report conditions to the Superintendent of Public Schools
- the Secretary of Public Schools was made the Superintendent of Public Schools
- the board of directors in each district was given the authority to grade its schools and, consequently, to establish higher schools for those who wished and were prepared to take work beyond the common branches.

The legal basis for the free public school system in Pennsylvania is Section I of the 1790 Constitution of the Commonwealth, which reads as follows: "The legislature shall, as soon as conveniently may be, provide by law for the establishment of schools throughout the State, in such a manner that the poor may be taught gratis." In 1836, the State Supreme Court interpreted this section as not prohibiting the establishment of schools in which all pupils might be taught without charge, and on this purely negative provision the free school system of Pennsylvania was established.

The votes with reference to the Free School Act of 1834 in the six counties of which Northeastern Pennsylvania was, at that time, composed are as follows:

Luzerne County (established in 1786)
Of the 31 districts in the County, 23 accepted the Bill, 3 rejected it, 5 not returned.

Wayne County (established in 1798)
Of the 16 districts in the County, 13 accepted the Bill, 1 rejected it, 1 not represented, and 1 not returned.

Bradford County (established in 1810)
Of the 29 districts in the County, 23 accepted the Bill, 4 not represented, and 2 not returned.

Susquehanna County (established in 1810)
Of the 22 districts in the County, 21 accepted the Bill, and 1 not returned.

Columbia County (established in 1813)
Of the 15 districts in the County, 15 were not returned.

Pike County (established in 1814)
Of the 9 districts in the County, 6 accepted the Bill, and 3 were not represented.

Of the 987 school districts in the State at that time, 502 accepted the Bill, 264 rejected it, 57 not represented, 164 not returned.

Wickersham (pp. 179-180) remarks as follows about the relationship between the schools that were established in the Commonwealth in 1834 and the Free School Act of 1834:

At the time of the adoption of the common school system, in 1834, there must have been at least 4,000 schoolhouses in the State built up by the volunteer contributions of the people in their respective neighborhoods. Thoroughly republican in principle, these schools of the people grew apace with republican sentiment, and it only required the legislation of after years to perfect the form and systematize the working of what had already in substance been voluntarily adopted by thousands of communities throughout the State.

By 1848, every district of the State was supposed to be a part of the free school system, but the 1848 law provided no penalty for failure to accept the benefits of free public schools except, of course, the loss of state appropriations. Any school district, therefore, that chose to remain outside the system could do so. In 1866 there were 23 school districts in the State that still refused to come under the provisions of the Free School Law of 1834. In 1868, an act was passed granting to non-accepting school districts that would come under the law within two years all the appropriations that they would have received since 1860 if they had entered the free school system at that time. On June 2, 1871, a second such act was passed, providing that the privilege of the 1868 act "be and the same is hereby extended to the townships of Washington and Overfield, in the county of Wyoming; also to the townships of Little Mahanoy, in the county of Northumberland: Provided, they accept of the terms of said act on or before the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three."

Overfield Township, Wyoming County, was the last township in the State to accept the provisions of the Free School Act of 1834, and become a part of a statewide, tax-supported, free public school system. In his report of 1874, forty years after the Free School Act was passed, Wickersham, in announcing that the system was now in operation in every school district in the Commonwealth, stated: "This ends the work in this direction. For the first time in our history, the door of a public school-house stands open to receive every child of proper age within the limits of the state" (p. 121).

VI. 1836-1857

On June 13, 1836, was passed "An Act to Consolidate and Amend the Several Acts Relative to a General System of Education by Common Schools." This law contained a few new provisions (e.g., Philadelphia was authorized to establish a Central High School), but its primary importance is that it strengthened the optional features of the Act of 1834. In 1886, Wickersham (p. 342) stated that "the real foundation of our present system of common schools is the law of 1836."

Important legislation pertaining to teachers and teacher training was passed in the period 1836-1857. In 1840, a law was passed authorizing school directors to examine and grant certificates of competency to teachers applying for schools. In 1848, a law was passed that provided that teachers must have certificates signed by a majority of the members of the district board of directors before whom they had been examined, stating the branches they were qualified to teach. These certificates were to be renewed annually. In 1854, a school bill was read in place in the Senate by Dr. Jonas R. McClintock of Allegheny County, Chairman of the Committee on Education. The bill was passed. The most important feature of this law was the provision for the selection of a county superintendent (by a meeting of all the directors of the County, for a term of three years). The primary duties of the County Superintendent, as outlined in the 1854 law, are:

- to visit as often as possible the several schools in his county and to note carefully the character of the work done
- to make certain that in every district there shall be taught orthography, reading, writing, English grammar, geography, and arithmetic, as well as such other branches as the board of directors or controllers may require
- to examine and certificate teachers, the certificate to state the subjects that the candidate is found capable of teaching.

Within a short period of time, the various county superintendents began to examine teachers and award to them teaching certificates. The three notices that are given below were published in the Weekly Advance, one of the early newspapers published in Carbondale, PA:

Mr. RICHARDSON, County Superintendent, gives notice that he will meet the School Directors and others for examination of Teachers, at

The full and punctual attendance of Teachers is requested.

[Weekly Advance, Saturday, October 30, 1858, Volume II, No. 22, p. 2, col. 3]

Examination of Teachers.

The examination of Teachers for our Public Schools took place, agreeably to notice, Thursday. The examinations of our County Superintendent, Mr. Richardson, are very thorough, and test not only the scholarship of the candidates, but also their ability to teach. The Teachers on this occasion stood the test creditably, and received certificates numbered considerably higher than the average.

[Weekly Advance, April 7, 1860, Volume III, No. 45, p. 2, col. 3]

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Public examinations will be held for the districts named below as follows:

Blakely--Nov. 26 at Olyphant.
Carbondale city, Tp., and Fell--Nov. 27, at Carbondale.
Greenfield and Scott--Nov. 28, at Hickory Grove
Benton--Nov. 29, at Benton Centre.
Abington and Waverly--Nov. 30, at Waverly.
Newton and Ransom--Dec. 1, at Milwaukie.
Madison and Jefferson--Dec. 3, at Moscow.
Covington and Cherry Brook--Dec. 4, at Daleville.

The examination will commence at precisely 10 o'clock, A.M., and continue through the day.

Teachers and Directors should come prepared to spend the day, and make no calculations on leaving till school is out.

All teachers expecting to receive certificates will bear in mind that the public examination is the most convenient place to get them. Those who purposely avoid the public examination need not expect to have their old certificates renewed.

ABEL MARCY,
County Superintendent.
Wyoming, Nov. 8, 1860.

[Weekly Advance, November 24, 1860, Volume IV, No. 26, p. 2, col. 6]

Following the passage of the 1854 school law, teachers everywhere began to take specific steps to better themselves as professionals. In 1854, the Superintendents of Allegheny, Berks, Centre, Indiana, Lancaster, Mifflin, Perry, and Somerset Counties established, and to a greater or less extent directed, temporary schools for teachers. Soon thereafter, the Superintendents of Cumberland, Juniata, Susquehanna, and other counties, did likewise. In addition to these special schools for teachers, Normal departments were established in connection with many existing academies and seminaries. Among the schools in Northeastern Pennsylvania that opened Normal departments--several of which opened Normal departments before the passage of the 1854 law (e.g., Dundaff Academy, Franklin Academy, see above)--are the following:

1. SUSQUEHANNA COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A very complete account of the Susquehanna Collegiate Institute is given in Heverly (pp. 196-201) and we reprint here several paragraphs of that information:

This school owes its origin to the action of the Presbytery of Susquehanna, which through its committee on general Christian education, Rev. S. F. Colt, Rev. F. D. Drake, Hiram Stevens and J. D. Humphrey, petitioned the Court of Common Pleas of Bradford County, Sept. 1, 1849, to incorporate a Christian literary institution. The charter was granted May 13, 1850. The design of its founders is set forth in Article 3 of its charter. It reads as follows: "to afford thorough instruction in the various branches of learning, useful and ornamental, English and classical, and in the religion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; and to prepare suitable teachers for parochial and common schools."

In 1852, by request of the trustees the name was changed to the Susquehanna Collegiate Institute. In the same year the location was determined, and ten acres of land purchased in the borough of Towanda for its use. Forthwith money was raised, and July 4, 1853, the corner stone was laid. The building was completed in 1854. It is a handsome four-story brick, and stands on high ground, from which a magnificent view of the borough and surrounding country can be had.

Sept. 6, 1854, the school was opened with the following faculty: Rev. Sam'l F. Colt, A.M., Principal; Rev. James McWilliams, A.M., Chas. R. Coburn, Miss Margaret Kennedy, Preceptress, and Miss Fanny Biles. Mr. Coburn was elected Superintendent of the Common Schools of Bradford county, afterward of the Common Schools of the State. Mr. McWilliams succeeded Mr. Colt as principal, but accepting a pastoral call, Rev. David Craft, A.B., completed the year as principal and acted in the same capacity in the following year. Messrs. O. H. & W. H. Dean, graduates of Lafayette College, were then elected principals and so remained for three years. John D. Hewett, A.B., acted as principal the following year, at the end of which period Mr. Colt was elected to his second term and remained until the fall of '70, when George W. Ryan and Edwin E. Quinlan were engaged for a period of ten years. At the end of three years Mr. Ryan became principal of the public schools of Towanda, and five years later Superintendent of the common schools of the county. Mr. Quinlan remained principal, and is still at the head of the school, this being his sixteenth year.

In 1879 the school celebrated its quarter-century of existence. From the historical sketch read by Hon. E. L. Hillis, A.M., at these exercises, we learn that the number of students at that date had been 1829; of these about 1200 had engaged in teaching, 33 in the practice of medicine, 27 in law, and 10 in the ministry. The average attendance per term had been 110, and the whole number of instructors 72. From 1879 to 1885, 796 different students were in attendance, making the total number up to the commencement of the school year 1885-86, 2625. The average attendance per term from 1879 to 1885 was 124, making the average attendance from the beginning not far from 117. The average attendance per year from 1879 to 1885 has been 238. The number of students from the beginning who have taught is not less than 1600. The largest attendance any one year was 1882-83, the enrollment being 263, and the largest attendance any one term in the fall of '82, when 190 students were in attendance.

The instruction is given in three departments—Elementary English, Common English, and Academic... The Institute building is heated with steam, is well supplied with chemical and philosophical apparatus, with maps, charts, globes, anatomical models, skeletons, and a very fine refracting telescope. An observatory, and a new physical laboratory, and a room for library, are expected to be added soon...

Eighty-seven different teachers have been employed since the school opened. The venerable Rev. S. F. Colt, the first Principal, and one of the most active of its founders, Mr. A. Wickham, and Rev. C. C. Cross life-long friends of the school, so far as we can recall, are the only ones left of the fathers of the school. Its sturdy and active sons are to be found in every honorable vocation, and in almost every State and Territory in the Union. How wide-spread and how potent its influence eternally only can tell. We quote in conclusion from the Rev. David Craft, himself a former teacher of the school, and well acquainted with its work and influence: 'Its foster sons may be found in the halls of Congress, in the State Legislature, on the bench, in the Christian ministry, and in all the professions and vocations of life. The great work it has done in elevating the standard of education in the public schools of the county, through the common school teachers it has sent out and the influence of its own instructors, never has nor never will be fully appreciated. Probably no other agency in the county during the last quarter-century has done so much to advance the standard of education, directly and indirectly, in the common schools of the county. It was largely through the teachers of the Institute that the Bradford County Teachers' Association, which has been an instrument of good in the county for more than a quarter of a century, was organized...'

2. CARBON ACADEMY AND NORMAL SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

The following account of the Carbon Academy and Normal School Association is given by Wickersham (p. 460):

The Carbon Academy and Normal School Association was organized at Weissport, in 1853. A house was purchased and fitted up for a school, but at the end of three years the property was sold for debt. R. F. Hoffer, subsequently and for many years superintendent of the public schools of the county, became the purchaser and reopened the school. Beginning with 10 pupils, the school soon largely increased, but unfortunately, in 1862, the building was destroyed by a flood of the Lehigh river. In 1867, A. S. Christine, an unassuming gentleman but a teacher of rare skill, took charge of the school, which continued to flourish until his death a year or two later, when it closed.

3. WAYNE COUNTY NORMAL SCHOOL

The following information about the Wayne County Normal School is given in Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (p. 79):

A Wayne county normal school was established at Prompton in 1855 with L. H. Gibson as principal. The Universalist church was leased in 1859 and used for the normal until it was abandoned in 1883 and the building sold to the Methodists for a church. Among the principals were C. L. R. Wheeler, the late S. A. Terrel, the late D. G. Allen and F. P. Kimble, Esq.

The notice that is reprinted below was published in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. VI, No. 42, October 26, 1855, p. 3, col. 2):

4. SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY NORMAL SCHOOL

The reader will recall that a normal school was opened in the Susquehanna Academy (see above) in the fall of 1857, under the charge of Professor J. F. Stoddard. From Blackman (pp. 528-529) we learn the following about the faculty of this school: "J. F. Stoddard was succeeded by H. Broadhead, B.A., and S. S. Hartwell, B.A. In the fall of 1863, under the care of F. D. Hunt, it [the school] assumed distinctively the features of a graded school, which it still retains. Rev. J. R. Stone had charge of the classical department. Messrs. C. M. Dixon, M. M. Chamberlin, Jessie Bissell, and A. Perry and Mrs. A. M. Richards, were among the earliest teachers of other departments. Succeeding principals have been W. W. Watson, J. C. Hammond, E. B. Hawley, J. G. Cope, Wm. C. Tilden, and A. H. Berlin."

The notice for the Susquehanna Normal School that is given below was published in the Weekly Advance, July 31, 1858, Vol. II, No. 9, p. 3, col. 3):

SUSQUEHANNA COUNTY NORMAL SCHOOL

J. F. Stoddard, A. M.,

PRINCIPAL.

THE undersigned take pleasure in announcing that the "Susquehanna County Normal School" will again open in the ACADEMY BUILDINGS, in Montrose, on Monday the 30th day of August, 1858, to continue Eleven Weeks, under the charge of Prof. STODDARD, and competent assistants; aided, also, for 10 weeks by F. F. Tewksbury, Co. Supt., whose knowledge of the conditions and wants of the teachers of the County, renders him eminently qualified to contribute much to the interest of the school. (We deem it proper, however, to state that Mr. Tewksbury is not peculiarly interested in the school.)

Prof. STODDARD's character as an efficient Educator and popular Author is too extensively known to require comment; and the marked success and universal satisfaction that have attended his labors among us in the past, are sufficient guaranty for the future.

During the present summer he will visit the Normal Schools of Canada, to possess himself of whatever improvements in the Art of Teaching they may present.

LECTURES.

Prof. STODDARD will lecture on the Science and Art of Teaching and on Moral Development. Mr. TEWKSBURY will lecture on Physiology and Hygiene. The following gentlemen will also lecture before the school: J. L. RICHARDSON, Co. Supt. Luzerne Co., N. A. CALKINS, Editor of the "Student and Schoolmate," N.Y. Hon. WM. JESSUP, R. B. LITTLE, B. S. BENTLEY, Esqrs., Rev. B. S. EMORY, and others. There will be a Primary Department connected with the School, under the charge of Miss ELLEN C. PARK.

EXPENSES.

TUITION—Normal Department, per quarter of eleven weeks.....	$6 00
" Primary Department... do .....	3 50
" In English branches, and Latin and Greek... do .....	9 00
Board per week.....	2 00

It is desirable that tuition bills be paid in advance, and no deduction will be made except in cases of protracted sickness. Students can board themselves, as heretofore. Cooking stoves and furniture can be rented of Mr. Sayre, at reasonable rates.

For information in regard to rooms, board, &c., apply to W. B. DEANS, Esq., Montrose, Pa., or to the Secretary. Students should not fail to be present at the OPENING of the School.

5. WAYNE COUNTY NORMAL SCHOOL

The following information about the Wayne County Normal School (see photograph this page) is given in Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (p. 80):

J. E. Hawker established a county normal at Waymart while he was superintendent. All the records were destroyed by fire in 1878. The present commodious building was erected in 1897. J. F. Dooley has been principal of the Waymart Normal Institute since 1881. Some of his predecessors were W. H. Lee, D. H. Brown, C. Sturdevant, Mr. Burwell, H. W. Larrabee, C. P. Perham and G. Blake-ly.

Additional information about this school is given in Matthews (p. 546):

Professor J. E. Howker established a county normal school in Waymart, and it was continued during the time he held the superintendency of the public schools of the county. The average attendance is now one hundred and ninety, sixty of whom are from outside the borough. For the higher grade a regular normal course has been adopted, consisting of twenty-two studies, and many of the most successful teachers in the county are graduates from this school.

On May 20, 1857, "An Act to Provide for the Due Training of Teachers for the Common Schools of the State" was passed by the legislature. The act was drawn up by Thomas H. Burrows. Among the provisions of this act are these:

- the State was divided into twelve districts, in each of which was to be established a Normal School, which was to be established and managed by private companies or corporations of stockholders who were to make annual reports to the School Department
- each Normal School was to be established on not less than ten acres of land and was to have a hall large enough to seat one thousand persons, rooms for libraries and science cabinets, at least six professors of liberal education (each to have charge of a department, with necessary tutors and assistants), and a Practice or Model School with accommodations for 100 pupils

Waymart Normal Institute, Waymart, PA. Photographic copy print by DWP from the photograph of this school that is given on page 30 in Picturesque Wayne, Volume II, 1905. This volume is in the collection of Mrs. Alice (Curtis) Lund, Seelyville, PA, and Melbourne, FL. The caption on this photograph in that volume is as follows: "WAYMART NORMAL INSTITUTE, WAYMART, PA."

- the course of study and qualifications of students for admission to be fixed by the several principals; the course of study to include the theory and practice of teaching
- one student was to be admitted annually from each common school district in the Normal School district at a cost of not more than $5 per quarter to be paid by the local board of directors; the students were to be selected by the directors after a public examination (a boy and a girl should be sent in alternate years, the boys must be 16, the girls 14, and each student must agree to teach 3 years in the common schools)
- practical teachers were to be admitted for a month or longer at a cost of $2 per month
- examinations for graduation were to be conducted by a board of Principals and certificates issued by this board were to become permanent licenses in all parts of the State for the subjects named in them, after two terms of successful experience
- no inducement in money from the State, either present or prospective, was to be held out for the establishment of Normal Schools; the prestige of their connection with the State and the school system were expected to bring them into existence as rapidly as they could be supported.

The Normal Schools that were, following the passage of the 1857 Normal School Law, officially recognized by the Commonwealth are as follows:

Millersville Normal School (2nd district, Lancaster County, recognized in 1859), Edinboro Normal School (12th district, Erie County, recognized in 1861), Mansfield Normal School (5th district, Tioga County, recognized in 1862), Kutztown Normal School (3rd district, Berks County, recognized in 1866), Bloomsburg Normal School (6th district, Columbia County, recognized in 1869), West Chester Normal School (1st district, Chester County, recognized in 1871), Shippensburg Normal School (7th district, Cumberland County, recognized in 1873), California Normal School (10th district, Washington County, recognized in 1874), Indiana Normal School (9th district, Indiana County, recognized in 1875), Lock Haven Normal School (8th district, Clinton County, recognized in 1877), Clarion Normal School (13th district, Clarion County, recognized in 1886), Slippery Rock Normal School (11th district, Butler County, recognized in 1889), East Stroudsburg Normal School (4th district, Monroe County, recognized in 1893).

Two of those Normal schools were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania: Bloomsburg Normal School (see engraving this page), and East Bloomsburg Normal School. A very complete account of the former is given in Battle (pp. 166-172) and in Wickersham (pp. 630-631). We reprint herebelow the account of the Bloomsburg Normal School that is given in Wickersham:

BLOOMSBURG NORMAL SCHOOL

On an eminence overlooking the borough of Bloomsburg, Columbia county, and commanding a magnificent view of some of the finest scenery in the State, stand the buildings of the Normal School of the Sixth District. As a Normal School the institution dates from February 19, 1869.

A body of citizens, under the leadership of Rev. D. J. Waller, established an Academy in Bloomsburg, in the year 1839. This institution was at times very flourishing, but as the common schools grew strong it seems to have grown weak. In 1856, some of the same persons who had established the Academy, with others, obtained a charter for an institution they called the "Bloomsburg Literary Institute;" but nothing was done under it for some years. In April, 1866, a stranger came to Bloomsburg and opened as an experiment, a small select school. He was a man of uncommon energy, skilled in school management, and soon his rooms were crowded with pupils. This stranger was Henry Carver. As a result of the interest in education created by Prof. Carver's school, a permanent institution of learning was projected, the charter of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute was resurrected and found available, a site was purchased, a building was erected and a school opened under the name they found ready to their hand in the charter they had appropriated. The organization under which the work was done consisted of Rev. D. J. Waller, President, L. B. Rupert, William Robinson and William Neal of the original founders of the Academy, together with William Snyder, J. K. Grove, Elias Mendenhall, E. C. Burton, J. G. Freeze and Robert F. Clark.

In the Autumn of 1867, the State Superintendent, having an official call to the northeastern part of the State, passed Bloomsburg on the railroad in the evening. From a window of the car he saw the newly-erected structure ablaze with light from the students' lamps, which seemed to shine from every part of it, and the thought occurred to him that the location would be a good one for a State Normal School. He sought an early opportunity to deliver an address in Bloomsburg, advocating the conversion of the institution of learning the citizens had established into a State Normal School. The meeting was held in the large hall of the school building, which was filled to overflowing. The result was the purchase of additional ground, and the erection of a large boarding-house during the following summer. The cornerstone was laid by Governor Geary in the presence of an immense assemblage of people, June 25, 1868. Accepted by the State authorities, the school commenced its Normal work in April, 1869. In September of that year there were 150 students in the Normal Department and 80 in the Model School.

Prof. Carver acted as Principal until the Fall of 1871. His resignation was unexpected, and for a time the school seemed almost rudderless, and could hardly be said to have a permanent head until the election of Dr. T. L. Griswold, in 1873. These were dark days for the school, and the bravest among its friends, oppressed by the weight of its debt which they were compelled to bear, wearied by the cares its management involved, and discouraged by the decreasing number of its students, almost despaired of success. The school was just fairly on its feet under Dr. Griswold, when, ten days after the opening of the school, the fourth of September, 1875, a terrible fire left the main building, which had probably cost $40,000, in ashes. Plucking up courage from the depth of this despair, a new building was erected the following summer on the site of the old one, but larger, handsomer, and much better suited to the purpose. D. J. Waller, Jr. was elected Principal in 1877, and has continued to discharge the duties of the place to the present time. He was born in Bloomsburg, is the son of the D. J. Waller who assisted in founding the institution, is a graduate of Lafayette College, and discharges the difficult duties of the place with ability and tact. The school is now verily a city set on a hill, giving light to the whole country for 50 to 100 miles around it. In addition to the persons already named as active in founding the school, among its firmest friends in every trial have been William Elwell, Samuel Knorr, John A. Funston, Daniel A. Beckley, and Charles G. Barkley.

From the very beginning, the Normal Schools were confronted with significant financial responsibilities. In 1861, four years after the passage of the Normal School Act, the Legislature of Pennsylvania came to the rescue of Millersville Normal School with a grant of $5,000. By 1865, Millersville Normal School, Edinboro Normal School and Mansfield Normal School had each received $15,000 from the Commonwealth. In 1866, a clause was placed in the general appropriations act allowing 50 cents a week to each student preparing to teach and $50 to all graduates pledging themselves to teach two full years in the common schools of the State.

Beginning in 1869, the State of Pennsylvania granted money to some schools that trained teachers, even though those schools were not officially recognized as Normal Schools by the State. In that year, the school at California was granted $15,000 to assist in its building program. In 1872, the schools at California, Bloomsburg and Mansfield were each appropriated $25,000. In 1872, a gift of $15,000 was also made to the school at Lock Haven to assist in the erection of a building. Given the fact that the Normal Schools that were officially recognized by the State were constantly requesting financial aid from the State, the State, in 1911, adopted a School Code that provided for the purchase by the State of any or all of the existing State Normal Schools. In 1926, the State Normal Schools were re-organized as State Teachers Colleges.

Not only did teachers—and prospective teachers—avail themselves of the professional training offered in the Normal Schools of the Commonwealth, they also organized teachers' associations for the mutual benefit and encouragement of teachers themselves as well as for awakening in the minds of the people generally a deeper interest in respect to the improvement of common schools and a higher respect for the teacher's profession. In 1847, an association of teachers in Allegheny County met in the University building. In 1852, this Association, the Allegheny County Association of Teachers and Friends of Education, issued a call for a convention which, met at Harrisburg, and formed, on December 28, 1852, the State Teachers' Association.

For the first five years of its existence, the State Teachers' Association met semi-annually. Thereafter, meetings were held annually—no meeting was held in 1862, due to the threatened invasion of the Commonwealth by the Confederate Army; no meeting was held in 1879 when the National Education Association met in Philadelphia. In 1858, the State Teachers' Association met in Scranton. The complete address that was delivered on August 11, 1858, by the President of the Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association in 1858, Professor John F. Stoddard, A.M., was published, be it known, in the Weekly Advance (Volume II, No. 15, September 11, 1858, p. 1, col. 3-7, p. 2, col. 1), one of the important newspapers published in Carbondale, Pennsylvania, in the nineteenth century. In 1875, the annual meeting of the State Teachers' Association was held at Wilkes-Barre.

Among the presidents of the State Teachers' Association during the nineteenth century from Northeastern Pennsylvania are John F. Stoddard (at the time of his presidency he was President of the Northern University of Pennsylvania, Bethany, Wayne County) and Charles R. Coburn (at the time of his presidency he was County Superintendent, Bradford County).

In addition to availing themselves of the professional training available in the State Normal Schools, and forming teachers' associations, teachers also organized teachers' institutes.

As early as November, 1853, a Teachers' Institute was held at Bethany, Wayne County. A complete account of that Institute, held November 1-3, 1853, is given in Matthews (p. 277). All of the teachers of Wayne County and of the adjacent counties, together with all others who might be interested in the proceedings, were invited to attend. From an announcement that was published in the Honesdale Democrat, under the heading of "Education," of October 5, 1853, we learn the following about the program of this Institute:

Lectures will be delivered on various literary and scientific subjects, among which we may mention the following:

Dr. John B. McMunn, of Middletown, N.Y., on English Grammar.

Charles W. Sanders, A.M., of New York, on Reading and Elocution.

Mr. Edward Brooks, on Botany and Vocal Music.

D. Jerome Jones, A.B., on History.

Prof. Justin R. Loomis, formerly of Waterville College, on Geology and Philosophy...

There will also be lectures on Mathematics, Natural Philosophy and the Art of Teaching. Prof. J. F. Stoddard will devote his attention to the interests of the Association, and will lecture on such subjects as circumstances may require. During the Session there will be a discussion on the defects of the present System of Education and the best means of improving it. The establishment of a County Teachers' Association will also come up for consideration.

P. G. GOODRICH, Secretary.
N. B. ELDRED, Chairman

Bethany, Oct. 5th, 1853.

A second County Teachers' Institute was held in Wayne County during the final week of October, 1854, by County Superintendent John F. Stoddard, assisted by William H. Ham, G. A. Fuller, and Miles L. Tracy. Prior to that time, the following announcement was published in local newspapers (reprinted in Matthews, pp. 277-278):

In view of advancing the cause of education, the teachers, school directors and friends of education of Wayne and the surrounding counties are cordially invited to attend a Teachers' Institute to be held at the court-house in the village of Honesdale, commencing on Monday at ten o'clock A.M., October 23d, and to continue until Friday afternoon of that week.

The object of the institute is to bring the teachers together for mutual improvement and to create a regularly organized Teachers' Association which shall enkindle more of a spirit of brotherhood among the teachers themselves and tend to their advancement in science, literature and the art of teaching. Efforts will be made during the meeting to give such instruction in the branches of study usually taught in our schools as is calculated to render teachers worthy of a certificate, and to prepare them to enter the school-room with the prospect of doing their patrons more efficient service as instructors.

A general demand is made for qualified teachers. Several applications have already been made by directors of the county for teachers whose services are worth from twenty-five to thirty dollars per month. Many of the school directors have assured me that they will be present during the latter part of the week for the purpose of engaging teachers for their winter schools... and that they will permit all teachers whose schools are in session during the week of the institute to dismiss them to attend it, without loss of time.

The recently enacted school law, which imposes many duties upon teachers, directors, etc., will receive such attention as will prove advantageous to patrons and taught.

Bloomsburg Normal School, Bloomsburg, Columbia County. This engraving appears on a post card in the collection of Mrs. Lois (Norton) Curtis, Waymart, PA. The post card was posted in Bloomsburg on May 6, 1908 (a one-cent stamp is attached thereto) by Irene Curtis. The recipient: Mr. Vance Griswold, Waymart, Pa., RFD No. 1. The message: "Hello! Vance: How are You? Irene Curtis."

The gentlemen who will lecture to or address the institute, so far as we are able to announce at present, are as follows:

Rev. E. O. Ward, F. B. Penniman, Dr. C. Cutter is expected to be present, E. Brooks, C. S. Minor, Esq.

Lectures will be given on reading, arithmetic, geography, grammar, the art of teaching, etc. Topics pertaining to school government, school-houses, boarding round, etc., may come up for discussion, in which it is hoped all members of the Institute will participate.

Teachers will be subject to no expense, the people of Honesdale having generously tendered their hospitality to the teachers of the county, pleased to assist in elevating the standard of education. Ladies will be accommodated with board in private families in preference to gentlemen; still we hope to be able to accommodate all, as the provision already made appears ample.

Wm. H. HAM, Committee
G. A. FULLER, of
M. L. TRACY, Arrangements

It is hoped that every individual designing to teach either in the winter or summer will not fail to attend this institute...

Your Obedient Servant,

J. F. STODDARD, County Supt."

Eighty-two teachers attended this Institute. A complete list of their names, together with the location of each individual, is given in Matthews, p. 278.

In 1855, three teachers' institutes were held in Wayne County, one at Pleasant Mount (March 7th), one at Salem (March 12th), one at Waymart (September 11th). In addition, a meeting of the Wayne County Teachers' Association was held in 1861 in the Academy at Prompton (Oct. 29-31). Sixty teachers attended. The officers who were elected that year are as follows: President, Rev. E. O. Ward; Vice-President, Rev. D. Brundage; Secretary, W. H. Schoonover; Treasurer, James B. Torrey; Executive Committee, Charles L. Wheeler, C. W. Torrey, J. E. Hawker, Thomas Hawkey, Stephen Brundage, Ellen Tomlinson, H. Moriah Schoon, Harriet Stearns, Harriet E. Burns. In 1862, The Wayne County Teachers' Association met at the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hawley. In 1866, an Institute was held in the Presbyterian Church, Waymart, PA. In 1867, 1868, and 1869, Institutes were held at Waymart, Hawley, and Honesdale, respectively. A complete list of the teachers of Wayne County who attended the 1874 Teachers' Institute (November 16-20) is given, be it known, in Matthews, p. 279.

In Bradford County, on January 5, 1855, a number of teachers and other friends of education met at the Susquehanna Collegiate Institute--the call for the meeting having been issued by Emanuel Guyer, County Superintendent--and formed the Bradford County Teachers' Association. Rev. James McWilliam was elected president and P. D. Morrow was elected secretary at that time.

Teachers' Institutes were held throughout Northeastern Pennsylvania in this period. Reprinted below are several notices of Institutes and Association meetings that were held in the period 1857-1860 in Luzerne and Wyoming Counties. All of these notices were published in the Weekly Advance, published in Carbondale, Pennsylvania.

TEACHER'S INSTITUTE

According to previous notice a large number of the teachers of Luzerne County met at Dunmore on the 12th inst., and organised by choosing J. L. Richardson, (County superintendent), to the Chair, and James F. Collins, secretary.

The following teachers were appointed a committee on resolutions: H. Box, J. Reagan, C. A. Pearsons, Misses Fannie Rogers and C. H. Chamberlain.

The president announced the following subjects for discussion during the session of the Institute.

School Discipline, Geography by Chanting, Arithmetic, Orthography, Reading, and Physiology.

During the first day the question as to the best method of teaching Arithmetic, Geography and Spelling elicited much interesting discussion; and in the evening an address was delivered by Dr. Davis, of Scranton, on school discipline.

On the second day the subject of Arithmetic was resumed, and discussed to considerable length, when Prof. Durgin of Carbondale delivered a good, practical lecture on Reading. In the afternoon Dr. Brundage delivered a highly interesting lecture on Physiology, urging the importance of introducing that study more extensively into our Public Schools;--after which the usual resolutions were passed, and the Institute adjourned.

Much credit is due to the citizens of Dunmore for their untiring efforts to render the teachers' visit interesting and agreeable; and we feel assured that if the School Directors of every town in the County should manifest equal zeal in the cause of Education, old Luzerne would not be 'a whit behind the chiefest' in point of Public Schools.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE AND DRILLS.

A Teachers' Drill will be held at the McKendrie church in Union township, commencing on Tuesday the 27th inst. and continuing two days. One will also be held in Dallas on the 5th and 6th of May. One at Moscow the 16th and 20th of May. Another at Beaumont the 24th and 25th of May.

A teachers' Institute will be held at Factoryville, Wyoming Co., the 10th, 11th and 12th of May. Prof. Stoddard will be present and aid in the exercises. Teachers of Luzerne are respectfully invited to attend.

One will also be held at Carbondale the 14th and 15th of May. Prof. Stoddard will be present and give lectures during the day and evening sessions. His known ability and experience in Normal instruction will enable him to interest and benefit all.

Teachers, School Directors and the friends of education generally are earnestly requested to attend the above appointments.

J. L. RICHARDSON,
County Superintendent.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

J. L. RICHARDSON, Esq., County Supt. of Luzerne County, will hold an Institute for Teachers in Northern Luzerne at the HICKORY GROVE SCHOOL HOUSE in Scott township, on Thursday and Friday, November 11th and 12th. The general attendance of Teachers is desired.

The School Directors of Scott, Greenfield, Fell and Carbondale, are requested to meet at the same time and place to employ teachers for the ensuing season.

By Order of the School Board.
Scott tp, November 6th.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE AT PROVIDENCE.

Mr. Editor:--I am requested by Mr. Richardson to bring before the public the action of the County Teachers' Association relative to the Institute to be held at Providence, in order that teachers and directors, who were not present at the last session of the Association, and who may wish to attend this Institute, may know of it in season to avoid making engagements that will interfere with it.

The plan of organizing and conducting it, so far as was decided by the Association is as follows:

It will commence on Wednesday, the 28th of December, and continue three days.

There will be nine hours of regular work each day--three in the morning, three in the afternoon, and three in the evening.

The subjects to be considered during these nine hours, together with the "faculty" or teachers appointed to conduct the exercises in each, respectively, are as follows:

Orthography--W. H. Jeffords.
Reading--Prof. E. A. Lawrence.
Writing--Abel Marcy.
Geography--E. W. Williams.
Mental Arithmetic--E. W. Matthews.
Written Arithmetic--Prof. W. La Mont.
English Grammar--Prof. H. D. Walker.
School Discipline--Prof. Y. C. Smith.
Oral Instruction--Prof. R. Nelson.
The question for discussion is, "Ought Corporal Punishment to be banished from our Schools?"

Leading Disputants--Abel Marcy, J. L. Richardson.

All minor questions pertaining to the Institute were referred to a committee consisting of Messrs. Rogers, Beardsley, Lawrence and Richardson. They were especially instructed to ascertain whether each member of the "faculty" would accept his appointment, or, if any one should decline, to appoint another in his place, and to publish the order of exercises as soon as they should have matured them.

VII. 1857-1864

Nearly 400,000 Pennsylvania men served in the Civil War. Of these it is estimated that 50,000 were killed in battle or died in military hospitals, and that 50,000 returned to their homes either greatly disabled or badly shattered in health.

The plight of the children of the dead and wounded soldiers and the provision for their welfare and education that was, at that time, made by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania are described by Wickersham, in his Chapter XXVI, as follows:

Many of the dead soldiers left wives and children in destitute circumstances, and multitudes of those who escaped with their lives were henceforth to be rather a burden than a help to their families. The War had not continued long before hundreds of the orphaned or worse than orphaned children of soldiers were reduced to want and beggary, or were compelled to find food and shelter in some almshouse or charitable home for the poor and friendless. It was then that the great, patriotic heart of Pennsylvania was moved, and the plan formed by which to June, 1884, 12,707 children of dead and disabled soldiers had been collected into schools, maintained, educated, and cared for to the age of 16 years, and then placed in circumstances giving an opportunity for a fair start in life at an expense of $7,632,354.70 with a prospective increase of the amount to 9 million before the work will be complete.

The Soldiers' Orphan Schools in which the children of the Civil War soldiers killed or disabled in battle were housed and educated were brought into existence largely through the efforts and support of Governor Andrew C. Curtin who, in his annual message of 1864, stated:

I commend to the prompt attention of the Legislature the subject of the relief of the poor orphans of our soldiers who have given, or shall give, their lives to the country during this crisis. In my opinion their maintenance and education should be provided by the State. Failing other natural friends of ability to provide for them, they should be honorably received and fostered as children of the Commonwealth. The fifty thousand dollars heretofore given by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, referred to in my last annual message, is still unappropriated, and I rec-commend that this sum, with such other means as the Legislature may think fit, be applied to this end, in such manner as may be thought most expedient and effective. In anticipation of the adoption of a more perfect system, I recommend that provision be made for securing the admission of such children into existing educational establishments, to be there clothed, nurtured and instructed at the public expense. I make this recommendation earnestly, feeling assured that in doing so I represent the wishes of the patriotic, the benevolent and the good of the State.

Governor Curtin then asked James P. Wickersham, then principal of the State Normal School at Millersville, to prepare a bill to be laid before the Legislature. This bill, although it never became law, was the very foundation upon which the whole system of Soldiers' Orphan Schools was established. On April 29, 1864, the bill was taken up by the House of Representatives. There was strong opposition to the bill. Those opposed felt it was the responsibility of the school boards in the districts of the State to provide for the welfare and education of the war orphans. It became clear that sufficient time to properly consider and perfect the bill would not be available before the close of the session, and so those in favor of the bill dropped the bill and, in its stead, prepared the following—written by Thomas Cochran—as a substitute:

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., That the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be and is hereby authorized to accept the sum of fifty thousand dollars donated by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, for the education and maintenance of destitute orphan children of deceased soldiers and sailors, and appropriate the same in such manner as may deem best calculated to accomplish the object designed by said donation, the accounts of said disbursements to be settled in the usual manner, by the Auditor General and the Governor, and make report of the same to the next Legislature.

The Governor was thus empowered to use the $50,000 that was given to the Commonwealth by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to establish Soldiers' Orphan Schools. Having consulted with James P. Wickersham, Governor Curtin appointed Thomas H. Burrowes as Superintendent of Orphan Schools. Burrowes accepted the appointment.

The initial plan was to have the orphans admitted to existing schools, e.g., the Northern Home for Friendless Children in Philadelphia, the Soldiers' Orphan Home in Pittsburgh, the Allegheny Home for Friendless Children, the Children's Home of Lancaster, the Church Home for Children in Philadelphia, St. Paul's Orphan Asylum in Philadelphia. Two difficulties, however, immediately presented themselves: (1) the space available in existing institutions was not adequate to accommodate all of the children, (2) placing children over the age of 10 years was extremely difficult. That being the case, over thirty Soldiers' Orphan Schools were established by the Commonwealth.<sup>11</sup> Three of those schools were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania: at Orangeville, at Harford (see engraving this page) and at Wilkes-Barre.

The description of each of those schools that is given below is from the monumental work of James Laughery Paul (see engraving this page), Pennsylvania's Soldiers' Orphan Schools (Harrisburg: Lane S. Hart, 18, 20 & 22 South Third Street, 1877).

ORANGEVILLE SCHOOL.

UST below the far-famed Wyoming Valley, the mountain which forms its western boundary is suddenly parted, and, through the opening gorge, flows into the Susquehanna the Nanticoke Creek. Thence south-south-west runs the mountain thirty miles further, broken only by Shickshinny Creek, and forms the western wall of the North Susquehanna Valley. Here its path is crossed by Fishing Creek, and its termination is so abrupt as to have suggested its name, "Knob Mountain."

Quietly nestled in a recess at the base of this knob, and shielded by it from both northern and western blasts, is the village in which, January 2, 1865, was started one of the first of the soldiers' orphan schools of Pennsylvania.

Five years before had the citizens of Orangeville completed the beautiful structure that crowns the hill, which, from below the knob, overlooks the village, and during this time had their school been in successful operation; first, as an academy one year under Professor J. A. Shank; then, four years as a normal school under Professor H. D. Walker. During the year 1865, its name and purpose remained unchanged, and the orphans who were received into it became members of its preparatory and model classes. In 1866, its name was changed, and for the next two years it was known as the Orangeville Soldiers' Orphan School.

Its history commenced January 2, 1865, and closed May 31, 1868.

The year 1865 was one of trial and labor to the Principal, — a large proportion of the orphans admitted coming from homes of great destitution. Mothers who were able to support their children were unwilling to send them to the orphan schools, which were, at that early period of their history, falsely regarded by them as charitable institutions. To clothe and otherwise prepare these children so that they might be presentable in the school-room, and to reform their habits, unfold their minds, and cultivate their hearts was no play-day task.

During this year, also, there was no home into which the orphans could be gathered. Boarding-houses had to be extemporized. A hotel was hired and filled. The citizens opened their doors, and received the homeless ones into their families. Not less than a half score of soldiers' widows hired rooms in the village, and were permitted to board their own children, and in some instances the children of others. But this irregularity was not long permitted to continue. In September of said year, Superintendent Burrowes, while on a visit to the school, announced that, at the earliest possible day, a home must be provided sufficiently large to accommodate all the orphans. After his return to Lancaster, he wrote more definitely, insisting that the necessary buildings should be erected at once, and made ready for occupancy as soon as April, 1866.

Accordingly, in October, the foundations were laid of what was subsequently known as the "Orphans' Home;" and in April following, the buildings were finished, furnished, and occupied. Of these buildings—planned, built, and furnished by Professor Walker—Dr. Burrowes and his Inspector, Colonel W. L. Bear, made a careful and minute examination in May; at the close of which, the Superintendent, in the presence of the Inspector and others, said: "I have visited the orphan schools of Pennsylvania, and of many other States, but I have never been in a 'home' which, in my opinion, combines so many comforts and advantages as this."

The year from April, 1866, to April, 1867, was one of renewed activity and marked success. Prominent among the objects of aim in the education of the orphan wards of the State was the formation of proper habits; such as cleanliness, order, industry, obedience, and truthfulness. It was the constant effort of Professor Walker to inspire his pupils with noble thoughts and purposes, and to make them feel that, while striving to do right and to be good, God was by their side to aid them and make them happy; and that by doing wrong, they would degrade themselves, sin against God, and could never be truly prosperous or happy.

The organization of the school was as perfect as, in the nature of the case and the limited period of its existence, was possible. A complete course of study was arranged, and a succession of classes formed, beginning with the elements of knowledge, and rising to the highest point reached by the foremost pupils.

The school year was divided into sessions, and the amount of study to be accomplished in each, definitely fixed. Each orphan, on entering the school, was carefully examined, and placed in the class whose studies he was fitted to pursue. The curriculum of study embraced all the branches needed to prepare the student for the pursuits of business, or the duties of the teacher. The teaching was thorough, systematic, and practical; and pupils were promoted from class to class on the ground of scholarship, and not of age or time.

In November, 1866, Dr. Burrowes again visited the school in company with his Inspectors, Messrs. Bear and Row; and, after a two days' examination of the school and home, of the sleeping-rooms and beds, the working departments and the clothing, and of the persons and sanitary condition of the orphans, pronounced the school as being in all respects, and without any disparity of others, "the best soldiers' orphan school in the State;" and this result of their visit was reported by the local press, and in the Pennsylvania School Journal. Before the time for another inspection, Dr. Burrowes retired from the Superintendency, and was succeeded by Colonel George F. McFarland.

During the years 1867 and 1868, the Orangeville School was visited almost from week to week by teachers, physicians, lawyers, and ministers of the gospel; and their testimony as to its superior sanitary condition, the perfection of its arrangements, both in the literary and working departments, and the good order and high scholarship of its members, was unequivocal and uniform.

Such is a brief sketch of the Orangeville Soldiers' Orphan School. Its history closed with the removal of the orphans, May 31, 1868; and among the unfoldings of the "final judgment" will be a complete revelation of its influences and results.

The teachers and employees who served during its existence were as follows, viz:

HARFORD SCHOOL.

THIS institution is located at Harford, Susquehanna county, six miles from Montrose Station, on the Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western Railroad. Its location is an elevated one, being on a spur of the Blue Ridge. The water and air are pure, and the climate cool and healthy.

The "Harford University" was formerly located here. This was a select classical school, established in 1817, and for many years conducted by Professor Lyman Richardson. These buildings and an adjoining farm of one hundred and twenty-five acres were, in the autumn of 1865, purchased by Professor Chas. W. Deans, on the recommendation of the then Superintendent of Soldiers' Orphans, Hon. Thos. H. Burrows, for a soldiers' orphan school. The old buildings were repaired and remodelled and additional ones erected.

The school was opened on the 7th of November, 1865, Mr. Deans being Principal, which position he retained until March, 1868, when Professor Henry S. Sweet took charge, and has remained in control ever since, with the exception of the year 1873, during which Dr. H. N. Pennepacker had supervision of the institution.

Eighteen children were in attendance at the opening of the school, but enough were admitted to raise the number to one hundred before the year closed. Additions were frequent, and the school constantly increased until the year 1871, when the maximum number was reached, there being then one hundred and seventy-four in attendance. Since that time the school has slowly decreased. There are at present one hundred and sixty-three on the roll.

During the first year the school was fully organized. Competent persons were procured to superintend the various industrial departments. Lessons were given to the girls in the various domestic duties, as well as in the use of the needle and sewing-machine; and the boys were taught how to do "chores" and to work on the farm.

Habits of industry were thus formed, and that degree of skill acquired, which has enabled many of the orphans, on leaving school at sixteen years of age, to secure good positions.

The system of making work-details being observed, no child has been robbed of his or her opportunities for study. A full and experienced corps of teachers have been employed, and the school properly graded according to the proficiency of the pupils. All the common and higher English branches have been thoroughly taught, and occasionally lessons in the ancient languages have been imparted. Especial attention has been given to those desiring to become teachers, and many are offered schools immediately after leaving the orphan school, and have proved themselves competent. Five, accepting the gratuity of the State, have received a normal school training; and permission has been granted by the State Superintendent to several others who will soon accept of the privilege so generously provided. Quite a number have remained at the school after becoming sixteen, being supported by friends or by their own labor, while others have continued their studies at other institutions than the normal schools. Vocal music has not been neglected, there being daily practice, and weekly instruction in the art of reading music. Lessons are also given, to those who desire it, in instrumental music.

Drill in military tactics has, for a number of years, been required daily when the weather was favorable—company movements being understood by the boys.

Religious observances and instruction have formed an interesting feature of the school since its origin. The pupils have, at all periods of its history, been required to repair to the main school-room at eight o'clock in the morning and at seven in the evening for devotional exercises, which have often been interspersed with short lectures on manners and morals. Religious services have been conducted at the school alternately by ministers of the various religious denominations residing in the vicinity. On Sundays, all the pupils have regularly attended Sunday-school, which is conducted by the Principal, assisted by the teachers and various employees.

From 1871 to 1874 the boarding department was conducted separately by Mr. Chas. S. Halstead. This was transferred, at the latter date, to Mr. A. J. Seamans, who still boards the school.

The sanitary condition of the school has always been excellent. During the year 1871, however, typhoid fever prevailing in the vicinity, the orphans did not escape the epidemic. Five cases proved fatal. Besides these there has been one sudden death, one from erysipelas, one from diphtheria, and two from dropsy. No serious accident has ever befallen any of the pupils. The school has passed through the ordinary diseases of childhood without any fatal results. A physician has at all times been employed. A hospital is connected with the institution under the charge of an excellent nurse, but it has been vacant the greater part of the time.

We give herewith a list of persons officially connected with the school since its organization.

The Home for Friendless Children, for the Borough of Wilkesbarre and the County of Luzerne.

THIS institution is located in the city of Wilkesbarre. It was organized in 1862. The number of destitute children, at this time, was greatly increased by the exigencies of the civil war, then raging, which called many fathers from their homes, to engage in the defence of their country. Moved by a sympathy, which was quickened by patriotism, a number of worthy ladies of Wilkesbarre, of whom Miss Mary Bowman, a noble Christian lady, was the leading spirit, met in March, 1862, to devise a plan of relief. This meeting was not fruitless. It was there determined that a Home should be opened for needy children. By the kindness of a benevolent gentleman, the free use of a small house on South Street was granted the ladies to be used for this purpose. "With a fund of twenty-five dollars, and six little waifs," a beginning was made, amid many doubtings and misgivings, yet with prayers and faith. It soon became apparent that a larger and more commodious building was needed. During the years of 1863 and 1864, the energies of the ladies were successfully put forth for the accomplishment of this object. A building lot was secured on Franklin Street. It contains one and a half acres of land, lacking three rods square. One part of it, 100 by 198 feet, together with an alley of ten feet leading from Franklin Street to the back end of the lot, was given by the owners of the land to the institution, besides a liberal contribution in money. The remainder of the lot cost $2,332.00.

Upon this site a substantial building, three stories high, and 50 by 100 feet, was erected in 1865. It is supplied with water from the city works,—the water being taken to the second story, and warmed by two furnaces. Its kitchen, pantry, and dining-rooms are conveniently arranged and well furnished. Its sewing-room, clothes-rooms, dormitories, and school-rooms are well adapted to the purposes for which they are used. The building affords accommodations for about eighty children, besides the necessary number of attendants.

By the act of incorporation, the affairs of the institution are conducted by a board of trustees, consisting of sixteen gentlemen, and a board of managers of twenty-four ladies.

The Home is supported by donations from benevolent individuals. The State, however, has at different times made appropriations for its aid, amounting in all to $13,000. Five thousand dollars were granted it by the Legislature of 1871, on condition that "the Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas for the counties adjoining Luzerne County, shall be authorized to commit and send to said Home for Friendless Children those friendless children who may come within the jurisdiction of said courts, or be subject to their order and disposition." This grant was accepted upon the condition named, and the benefits of the institution were thus extended to friendless children of Columbia, Carbon, Monroe, Schuylkill, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Wayne, and Wyoming counties.

The lady managers have been for a number of years laboring to raise an endowment sufficient to support the institution. This fund now, 1875, amounts to $16,656.75.

In August, 1865, Dr. Burrows, the State Superintendent of Soldiers' Orphans, addressed a letter to the managers of the Home, requesting them to take fifty or sixty orphans, under his care, into their institution. These were to be young children, who were to be transferred to schools where better educational advantages could be had as they arrived at the age of ten years. The sum to be paid for the education, maintenance, and clothing was fixed at $100 per annum for each child. Already there was in the institution quite a number of soldiers' orphans, as the patriotic managers had, from the first, shown great readiness to receive destitute children whose fathers had fallen in the defence of their country. For the support of these orphans, the managers were, hitherto, wholly dependent upon the contributions of the benevolent. By accepting Dr. Burrows' proposition, they would receive $100 yearly from the State, not only for those sent, but also for the soldiers' orphans already in the Home. Under these circumstances, the managers complied with the request of the Superintendent, though the amount they were to receive, according to their report of May, 1866, was "wholly inadequate to pay the necessary expenses." The first soldiers' orphans were received on account of the State in February, 1866. From time to time, soldiers' orphans of the more juvenile class continued to be sent to the institution, by the Superintendent of Soldiers' Orphans, while, in the meantime, numbers were transferred to institutions of a higher grade as they arrived at the suitable age for promotion. The Home continued to assist in the good work till 1873, when, in September of this year, all the soldiers' orphans in the institution were, by order of the State Superintendent, transferred to schools for the more advanced pupils. The whole number of soldiers' orphans received in the Home, and supported by the State, is ninety-two. The largest number at any one time in the Home was eighty-one.

It is but an act of justice to here record the names of several noble men who greatly assisted the ladies in the difficult work of establishing the Home, and sustaining it by their open-handed liberality. Judge William S. Ross, Mr. W. C. Gildersleeve, Mr. George M. Hollenback, and V. L. Maxwell, Esq., each gave $1,000. Judge I. N. Conyngham, A. T. McClintock, Esq., and several others whose names are not at command, donated $500 each.

The Board of Trustees, in 1873, was as follows:

Mr. Nathaniel Rutter,	Mr. J. P. Williamson,	Mr. A. Ricketts,
" J. C. Phelps,	" C. M. Conyngham,	Dr. E. R. Mayer,
" J. W. Hollenback,	" E. J. Flick,	Mr. L. D. Shoemaker,
" W. L. Conyngham,	" A. T. McClintock,	" W. W. Loomis,
" W. W. Lathrope,	" C. E. Wright,	" Joseph Lippincott.

VIII. 1864-1895

A school law was passed in 1867. Among its provisions are these:

- boards of school directors were given the right of eminent domain in the selection of sites for school buildings
- teachers' institutes were made obligatory in all counties; a careful attendance record was to be kept and the county was to pay for each 3 days' attendance the total not to exceed $200 [in 1880 the state ordered that teachers should receive pay for attending institutes]
- provisions were made whereby uniformity of textbooks could be secured within each county
- any city or borough with a population of 10,000 or more could elect a superintendent of schools; the schools of such communities were to be no longer under the authority of the County Superintendent nor were they to contribute anything to the salary of the latter [in 1881 it was legislated that a city or borough of 5,000 could elect a superintendent of schools; an 1885 law said a township of 5,000 could elect a superintendent of schools]
- no teacher should receive a certificate "who has not a fair knowledge of orthography, reading, writing, geography, English Grammar, mental arithmetic, history of the United States, and the theory of teaching"
- "That no person shall hereafter be eligible to the office of county, city or borough superintendent in any county in the Commonwealth who does not possess a diploma from a college legally empowered to grant literary degrees, a diploma, or state certificate issued according to law by the authorities of a State Normal School, a professional certificate from a county, city or borough superintendent of good standing, issued at least one year prior to the election or a certificate of competency from the state superintendent of schools."

IX. 1834-1895

At the end of Section IV of this essay, we reached the year 1834 in our chronological discussion of the elementary and secondary schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania. We will now continue that chronological survey, examining, first, the elementary schools, and, second, the secondary schools, that were established in this area of the Commonwealth in the period 1834-1895.

Shortly after the adoption of the public school system in 1834, the schools, in a few favored localities, were graded. One of those favored localities was the borough of Scranton. From the History of the City of Scranton; Providence, Dunmore, Waverly, and Rumpresville, compiled and published by Andrew B. Galatian in 1867, we learn the following (pp. 78-80):

The First Graded School in Scranton, Lackawanna County. Photographic copy print by DWP from the engraving that is given on p. 79 of History of the City of Scranton, compiled and published by Andrew B. Galatian, 1867. On page 80 of Galatian is the following information about this school: "The graded school building, to which the other schools in the city are subordinate, is located on a beautiful eminence on the corner of Washington avenue and Vine street, commanding a view of the whole city, including Hyde Park and Providence. The site is admirably selected, both on account of its healthfulness and beautiful scenery it affords."

The graded school system was inaugurated December, 1856, in the borough of Scranton [see engraving, this page], and the success which has attended it is attested by the following statements. The first report to the State Department for the first three years of the borough as a separate school District shows the following facts, viz:

Year ending June 1st, 1857: 5 schools, 5 teachers, 284 male pupils, 296 female pupils, average attendance 352.

Year ending June 1st, 1858: 8 schools, 11 teachers, 603 male pupils, 497 female pupils, average attendance 884.

Year ending June 1st, 1859: 9 schools, 14 teachers, 520 male pupils, 494 female pupils, average attendance 752.

The school board at this time consisted of Messrs. J. W. Brock, H. L. Marvin, John Grier, P. J. Conyne, and others, who by a faithful and energetic performance of their duties paved the future success of the system, as shown by the following latest statement made officially in June, 1866, to the County Superintendent, viz:

Whole number of schools, 16; Number yet required, 3; Average number of months taught, 10; Number of District Institutes held in all the schools, 10; Number of Male Teachers employed, 1; Number of Female Teachers employed, 21; Average salaries paid to Male Teachers per month, $125.00; Average salaries paid to Female Teachers per month, $30.00;

Whole number of Male scholars, 1,373; Whole number of Female scholars, 1,413; Average attendance of Male scholars, 833; Average attendance by Female scholars, 845; Number of mills on the dollar levied for school purposes, 13; Number of mills on the dollar levied for building purposes, 21; Amount of tax levied for school purposes, $12,838.41; Amount of tax levied for building purposes, $1,975.20.

The school board consists at the present time of the following named gentlemen, viz: E. C. Fuller, James Ruthven, R. A. Henry, Frederick Kreilick, John Nape, Julius Welner, and others. Its officers are as follows: President, James Ruthven; Secretary, E. C. Fuller; Treasurer, R. A. Henry...

The old borough of Hyde Park is included in Wards 4th, 5th, and 6th of the present city of Scranton. The city charter has left intact the school organization, and the said three wards are a district under the common law of this State. The graded school of this district has had for the present school year a corps of nine teachers. J. P. Hand, a graduate of La Fayette College, of this State, has been the principal for the last two years.

The schools are conducted in two brick houses, in one of which seven teachers are employed, and in the other two teachers. The average number of children sent to the graded school the present year will be five hundred or within a small fraction of it.

Three hundred and twenty dollars a month is paid for tuition.

The school is in a prosperous condition, and one or two additional teachers are needed yearly.

Providence Borough graded school was instituted October, 1858, under the direction of James S. Kennedy, D. R. Randall, Wm. Silkman, J. R. Wint, Pulaski Carter, Dr. B. A. Bouton, with Prof. E. W. Rogers Principal. Has a fine suit of buildings situated on Prospect Hill, a view from which overlooks the entire valley. Has five graded departments and six teachers, 450 scholars. It is now under the supervision of Prof. T. R. Johnson, giving instruction in all the common and higher English branches.

The Board of Directors are: H. Roberts, J. S. Kennedy, G. W. Miller, J. R. Fordham, P. Carter, D. E. Evans.

On May 8, 1861, the Honesdale (Wayne County) graded school was established, and C. B. Shaw chosen as principal.

The following information about the public elementary schools in Bradford County in the period 1854-1877 is given in Craft, p. 123:

1854: 342 schools, 468 teachers, 13,628 pupils, total expenditures $18,321; 1855: 328 schools, 433 teachers, 14,651 pupils, total expenditures, $17,582; 1857: 334 schools, 430 teachers, 13,473 pupils, total expenditures, $27,626; 1866: 363 schools, 514 teachers, 14,171 pupils, total expenditures, $61,642; 1877: 400 schools, 684 teachers, 15,328 pupils, total expenditures, $82,061.

In 1865-1866, there were in Wilkes-Barre, 11 schools, taught by 14 female and 3 male teachers (males were paid $50/month in salary and females were paid $35/month); 187 pupils attended. In 1879, there were, in the same city, 30 schools, taught by 25 female and 7 male teachers (males were paid $74.50/month in salary and females were paid $45.60/month); 1,677 pupils attended.

In Susquehanna County (see Blackman, p. 533) there were, at the end of the school year, June 6, 1870, 272 3/4 schools, taught by 71 male teachers and 345 female teachers (males were paid $42.49/month and females were paid $28.54/month); the average number of months taught was 5.89; 5,294 male and 6,898 female students attended these schools.

In Wayne County (see Goodrich, p. 395) in 1878 there were 213 schools; 82 male teachers and 183 female teachers; 8,939 scholars attended these schools.

In Monroe County (see Matthews, p. 1016) in 1884 there were 135 public elementary schools; 139 teachers taught therein; 2,601 male students and 2,224 female students attended these schools.

When Goodrich was published in 1880, there was a graded school in Seelyville, Wayne County—see photograph of street scene in Seelyville, this page. The graded school at Seelyville, like the one at White Mills, Wayne County—we learn from Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County, p. 80—was an independent school.

In Nicholson, similarly, an independent school was established. In 1880 (p. 524) is the following account of that school:

This institution was the outgrowth of a select school instituted by E. G. Stone in 1859 and taught by him for several years. An independent district was formed by order of the court in 1865 out of the old common school district No. 3. The school directors leased a building which had been erected by Mr. Stone, opposite the M.E. church on State street. In 1870 they bought a building being erected for a sash and blind factory by Bacon & Steinbeck, and, moving it back, converted it into a convenient and spacious school-house.

The first principal was Miss Mary Terry; the present one is Prof. E. S. P. Hine, a native of Gibson, Susquehanna county, PA., and a teacher of wide experience and superior attainments. He is assisted by Miss Maggie Dugan in the grammar department, and Misses Hattie Weaver and Addie Knapp in the primary room; Misses Dugan and Weaver being residents of the borough, Miss Knapp from the Soldiers' Orphan School, Hartford, Pa. The first directors were I. S. Little, Lemuel Harding, William Driggs, O. L. Hallsted, George Pratt and Nathan P. Wilcox. The directors for 1879 were D. C. Graham (president), S. L. Tiffany (secretary), F. D. Pratt (treasurer), Solomon Taylor, Henry A. Smith and H. P. Wilkins.

The regular attendance is about one hundred and forty-five. The higher English branches are taught. The school is popular at home and abroad, and the people of Nicholson have reason to feel proud of it.

The question of whether or not to continue independent school districts is one that was actively discussed in a great many localities during the second half of the nineteenth century. In the spring of 1886, we learn from Matthews, p. 588, it was the question of the day in Clinton Township, <sup>12</sup> Wayne County:

In the spring of the present year the question of discontinuing the independent school district began to be agitated,—W. C. Norton, of the "Ridge Farm," and his brother-in-law, Mr. E. H. Ledyard, being actively engaged in favor of its being discontinued, while Mr. Harrison, on whose land the school-house still stands, William Rude, L. F. Norton, W. W. Davidson, —son of J. K. Davidson, Esq.,—Mr. A. R. Squires, and a few others, opposed. After considerable argument and examining of witnesses, his Honor decided that it must "go," and the future historian will not have to incorporate in his legends the existence of an Independent School district in Clinton township. The spring term of court decided that,—and now the directors have entered into contract with parties to erect an additional school-house on lands of Mr. Rude, near the Central Baptist church.

The officers of the Independent school at the time of its dissolution were: Perry Saunders, president; Charles E. Howell, secretary; and Chauncey Davenport, treasurer.

The township board of school directors consists of Henry Greiner, president; C. H. Wilmarth, secretary; John Dolph, treasurer; H. B. Curtis, James R. Pethick, and Moses Cole.

Independent or not, graded or ungraded, elementary schools were established in virtually every neighborhood and community in Northeastern Pennsylvania by the final decade of the nineteenth century. All of these schools had several things in common: they were held in buildings that were of substantially better quality than the school buildings that were erected in the period before 1834, they were attended by an increasingly larger percentage of the school age children in each community each year, and they were taught by teachers who were better trained—thanks to the State Normal Schools, teachers' institutes and associations—than teachers had ever been to perform the important role they chose to play in their respective neighborhoods and communities.

Photographic copy print by DWP from the photograph that is given on page 5 of Picturesque Wayne, Volume IV, 1909, published by Herald Press Association, Honesdale, Penn'a; volume in the collection of Mrs. Alice (Curtis) Lund, Seelyville, PA, and Melbourne, FL. Is the school at the left in this photograph the graded school that existed in Seelyville when Goodrich was published in 1880?

Before we examine the public and private secondary schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1834-1895, let us direct our attention, for the moment, to one or two of the private schools that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1834-1895.

Private elementary schools did not, by any means, cease to exist subsequent to the passage of the Free School Law in 1834. In Fell Township, Lackawanna County, for example, James Russell established a school on his property--see "Russell School" on the map of Fell Township that is given on this page--for the education of his children and other children of the neighborhood<sup>43</sup>. In the city of Carbondale, similarly, Eli E. Hendrick established, around 1880, a private school on his estate (see photograph this page) for the education of his two daughters, Mary Emma Hendrick (later, Mrs. A. P. Trautwein), and Lillian Belle Hendrick (later, Mrs. William T. Colville)--see photographs of Mary Emma Hendrick and Lillian Belle Hendrick in Volume I, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, p. 17--and their friends, Jane Butler, May Baker Manville, and Frances Raynor.

The Hendrick school was taught by William T. Colville (see photograph this page), a graduate, like Eli E. Hendrick himself, of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. In 1956, Mrs. Rebecca Colville, daughter-in-law of Lillian Belle Hendrick and William T. Colville, wrote to Kenyon College, requesting information about William T. Colville. On April 23, 1956, William E. Frenaye of The Alumni Council of Kenyon College wrote to Mrs. Rebecca Colville a letter--which Mrs. Colville graciously showed to the author and allowed him to make a copy of on January 11, 1980--containing the following information about William T. Colville:

Mr. Colville received his Kenyon A. B. degree on June 25, 1874 and received an A. M. degree in 1879. He was instructor in German and French from 1878-1880, and evidently was away for a year and returned in 1881 as Professor of Modern Languages, in which capacity he served until 1886 when he became Librarian until 1889. He is listed again as Professor of Modern Languages from 1889-1891.

The education of Mary Emma Hendrick and Lillian Belle Hendrick and their friends completed, the Hendrick school was closed. At that time, two wings were added to the building and it was converted into a private residence. The building, located at 50 Spring Street, Carbondale, Pa., is still used as a private residence.

Hendrick School House, Carbondale, Lackawanna County. Photographic copy print by DWP of one-half of a stereographic slide in the collection of Mrs. Rebecca Colville, Carbondale, PA. This school, built on the grounds of the Hendrick estate in Carbondale, was established by Eli E. Hendrick for the education of his two daughters, Mary Emma and Lillian Belle, and their friends. This school building, to which additions have been made, is presently located at 50 Spring Street, Carbondale, PA.

William T. Colville. Photographic copy print by DWP of a photograph in the collection of Mrs. Rebecca Colville, Carbondale, PA. William T. Colville, the teacher of the Hendrick School, received his A.B. from Kenyon College on June 25, 1874, and his A.M. from that same college in 1879. He ultimately married Lillian Belle Hendrick, one of his students in the Hendrick School.

Fell Township, Lackawanna County. This map of Fell Township (bounded by Greenfield Township, Susquehanna County, Wayne County, and Carbondale) appears on p. 67 of D. G. Beers' Atlas of Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, published in 1873.

Five schools are to be seen on this map: Crystal Lake School, Mt. Hope School, Russell School, Coal Brook School, and the school in the lower right hand corner of the map, marked "School." A sixth school in Fell Township, that did not exist at the time when this map was drawn, was later established a short distance from the Mt. Hope School. The location of this school, affectionately referred to by local residents as "Squirrel Academy," has been marked by the author on this map by an (X) labeled "SQ."

In 1880 (p. 477) the following information about the early schools of Fell Township is given: "The pioneer school-house was built (of logs) about 1820, on the creek, near Jonathan Vail's, and was known as the 'Carr school-house,' as it was near Carr's residence. The first frame school-house was built in 1831, on Vail's land, now belonging to the John Russel estate. The pioneer school teacher was Biah Hudson, whose descendants now live along the turnpike about a mile and a quarter from Carbondale. John Nelson taught in the old log school-house in 1825; some of his pupils still living are Samuel Reynolds, Henry Wedeman, George Reynolds, Eli Farris, Silas Farris and Deacon Finch."

In Murphy (pp. 889-890), published in 1928, the following information about the schools of Fell Township is given: "The schools of Fell Township have had a rapid growth. In 1901 there were 13 schools and 13 teachers. There were at that time seven buildings. The school enrollment at the opening of that year was 592. John E. Roache, of Carbondale, was the principal, and he served one year. John V. De Laney served as supervising principal from September, 1901, until some time during the remaining part of that year...

The buildings now comprise: The High School of 12 rooms, the Lincoln School of six rooms, the Washington School of eight rooms, the Roosevelt School of six rooms, the Franklin School of two rooms, the Jefferson School of two rooms, the Penn School of two rooms, and the Riverside, the Falls, and the Crystal Lake schools of one room each. The teaching force at present are all graduates from normal schools or from colleges, with the exception of four, and they now hold state standard certificates."

Let us now direct our attention to the public and private secondary schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania of the period 1834-1895.

First, a review of some of the important legislation regarding high schools. On June 10, 1836, a law was passed permitting the establishment of a Central High School in Philadelphia. In 1849, as part of the general school bill of that year, the city of Pittsburgh was given permission to establish a public high school. In 1850, a school law was passed that authorized the district board of Easton to establish a high school and to make regulations regarding its control. In 1887, a law was passed that legalized the establishment of other high schools in the districts in which there were central high schools; the directors "in cities and boroughs divided into wards for school purposes" were permitted to establish high schools. In 1893, the 1887 law was revised to permit the establishment of high schools in districts having a population of at least 5,000 but which were not divided into wards. In 1895, a law was passed that provided for the establishment of high schools in every district of the State; school directors were also given permission to form joint high schools.

In general, the attitude toward public high schools was very conservative. In the cities, where the idea of general education at public expense had become definitely accepted, the high school came as a natural development. In 1860, however, there were only six public high schools in the State of Pennsylvania. In 1869, there were 17 high schools in the State--the same number as in the state of Michigan for that year (in 1869, the population of Pennsylvania was 2,906,215; in that same year, the population of Michigan was 749,113).

Millville High School, Columbia County: established in 1851; became the Greenwood Seminary in 1861 (see Battle, p. 107).

Waverly High School, Lackawanna County: organized in 1878 under the management of Prof. S. M. Ward and Miss P. D. Relph (see 1880, p. 459).

Hawley High School, Wayne County: established in 1879; cost of the building, $17,000; five early principals were L. A. Freeman, S. D. Barnes, F. H. Bottsford, Kimber Cleaver, and Mark Creasy; two of the early teachers in Hawley High School were Misses Lizzie and Delphine Daniels (see Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County, p. 80).

Dallas High School, Luzerne County, founded in 1879. The following account of this high school is given in 1880 (p. 246):

The Dallas High School was founded in 1879, by the following liberal minded gentlemen: Leonard Machell, William J. Honeywell, James Garrahan, Esq., J. G. Laing, M.D., William Snyder, William P. Kirkendall, Joseph Atherholt, Andrew Raub, Joseph Shaver, Capt. Jacob Rice, Ira D. Shaver, Chester White, Theodore F. Ryman, C. A. Spencer, M.D., G. W. Kirkendall, J. J. Ryman.

In 1878 the beautiful and well arranged high school building was erected at a cost of about $3,500, including site. It is situated on an eminence with a commanding view, with grounds beautiful and spacious, nicely shaded with maples, and offering a fine opportunity to students for healthful exercise.

The founders have kindly given the use of the building to the school directors of Dallas borough for the advancement of the school interest in the borough. This school furnishes instruction in all those branches of education which legitimately belong to an institution of the kind. In selecting the subjects for study, two objects have been kept in view: the thorough and symmetrical discipline of the mental powers and the acquisition of knowledge.

The following departments of study are provided: common English, higher English, ancient languages, modern languages, commercial department.

The first principal of the school was Prof. John T. Fuller, a graduate of Lafayette College and a young man of high culture, sterling character and moral worth. He died on the 21st of January, 1880, deeply mourned by patrons and students and all with whom he mingled. He was assisted by Miss Lettie Kitchen, of Dallas.

The present principal is Prof. W.F. Taylor, a graduate of Lafayette College and a teacher of large experience and signal success in his profession. He is assisted by Miss Lydia A. Seward, of New Columbus. The high school of Dallas has attained a degree of success and importance highly satisfactory to its founders and the public, and is receiving a liberal patronage at home and from abroad. The efforts of the directors are being put forth to make this school second to none of its class, and the utmost care is observed by the faculty in promoting the moral, intellectual and physical welfare of students.

Winwood High School, Wayne County: established in 1898. In Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (p. 116) is the following information about Winwood High School: "The people of Preston decided by ballot in 1898 to establish a township high school at Winwood, a station on the O & W Railroad. The building was erected by James Clark. H. L. Fisher was principal for the first two years. The position is now filled by Howard Wilcox, of Honesdale."

Damascus Township High School, Wayne County: established in 1899 (see photograph, this page). This high school was formerly the Union Academy (see below, this Section).

By the end of the nineteenth century, public high schools were established in a great many communities in the Commonwealth. In 1890, there were 180 high schools in the State; in 1920, there were 1017.

As more and more public high schools were established in Pennsylvania, the number of private secondary schools (academies and female seminaries) declined. Prior to the ascendancy of the public high schools during the final two decades of the nineteenth century, however, as we shall presently demonstrate in our discussion of the academies and female seminaries of Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1834-1895, it was the private secondary schools that played the major role in secondary education in the eleven counties of Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Damascus Township High School (formerly Union Academy), Damascus, Wayne County. Photographic copy print by DWP from the photograph that appears on page 13 of Picturesque Wayne, Volume IV, 1909, published by Herald Press Association, Honesdale, Penn'a; that volume is presently in the collection of Mrs. Alice (Curtis) Lund, of Seelyville, PA, and Melbourne, FL. In that volume, this photograph is captioned: "Damascus Township High School."

In 1838, a law was passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania that very much stimulated the growth and development of academies and female seminaries in the Commonwealth. Under that law, academies and female seminaries that met the following conditions were awarded moneys for ten years:

To each University and college now incorporated, or which may be incorporated by the Legislature, and maintaining constantly at least one hundred students, one thousand dollars. To each Academy and Female Seminary now incorporated, or which may be incorporated by the Legislature, maintaining one or more teachers capable of giving instruction in the Greek and Roman classics, mathematics and English or English and German literature, and in which at least fifteen pupils shall constantly be taught in either or all of the branches aforesaid, three hundred dollars. To each of said Academies and Female Seminaries, where at least twenty-five pupils are taught, as aforesaid, four hundred dollars; and to each of said Academies and Female Seminaries having at least two teachers, and in which forty or more pupils are constantly taught, as aforesaid, five hundred dollars.

The academies and female seminaries of Northeastern Pennsylvania that were opened and/or incorporated by the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania in the period 1834-1895 (for information on those that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania before 1834, see Section IV, above) are as follows:

1. TOWANDA ACADEMY, Towanda, Bradford County.

A two-story brick building, erected in 1835, which, in 1886, stood at the corner of Fourth and State Streets, and was occupied as a residence by General H. J. Madill. The school was opened June 16, 1836. One of the noted teachers therein was the distinguished historian, Emily C. Blackman, author of History of Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania (Philadelphia: Claxton, Remsen & Haffelfinger, 624, 626, and 628 Market Street, 1873). In Craft (p. 123), published in 1878, the trustees of Towanda Academy are listed, as follows: James P. Bull, J. D. Montanye, Isaac Myer, Hiram Mix, Burton Kingsbury, Enos Tompkins, David Cash, N. B. Storm, and George A. Mix.

2. BERWICK ACADEMY, Berwick, Columbia County.

The building was erected in 1837. This Academy received appropriations from the State under the Act of 1838. In Battle (p. 107), this Academy is referred to as the first secondary school in Columbia County. It was incorporated on June 25, 1839. From Wickersham (p. 460), we learn that this school flourished for a number of years, but finally merged with the public school system. In 1872, the building was torn down.

3. CATAWISSA ACADEMY, Catawissa, Columbia County.

Founded in 1838; chartered by the State on February 9, 1866; ceased operating in 1872. In 1886, the Academy building was occupied by a public school.

4. TROY ACADEMY, Troy, Bradford County.

This Academy received appropriations from the State in 1838. The first teacher (see Craft, p. 124) of this Academy was Rev. Freeman Lane.

5. MCKEAN FEMALE SEMINARY, McKean, Bradford County.

This Seminary received appropriations from the State in 1838.

6. HONESDALE FEMALE ACADEMY, Honesdale, Wayne County.

This Academy received appropriations from the State in 1838. It closed shortly after the Act of 1838 was repealed.

7. MONTROSE FEMALE SEMINARY, Montrose, Susquehanna County.

This Seminary was opened, in 1839, in the Susquehanna Academy building. It received appropriations from the State, under the Act of 1838. The first teacher of this Seminary was Miss Elizabeth Wood. From Blackman (p. 528) we learn the following about the Montrose Female Seminary:

It was incorporated through the exertions of Col. Asa Dimock. This institution, it was intended, should be entitled to $300 annually for ten years from the State. Its first trustees were A. H. Read, J. C. Biddle, D. Dimock, Jr., Geo. Fuller, and Daniel Searle.

In 1840-41, the preceptress was Mrs. Elizabeth H. Stone (afterwards Mrs. Niven). A piano was purchased, and Miss Theodosia A. Catlin taught a large class in music, though there were then but three pianos in the place.

In 1841-2, Miss Mariana A. Read, of Homer, New York, was preceptress here.

8. WILKES-BARRE FEMALE SEMINARY, Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County.

Established in 1839; closed shortly thereafter.

9. BLOOMSBURG ACADEMY, Bloomsburg, Columbia County.

10. STROUDSBURG FRENCH SEMINARY, Stroudsburg, Monroe County.

The building in which the Stroudsburg French Seminary was taught is the former Stroudsburg Academy building (see Section IV, above), a two-story stone building erected in 1816 on Green Street, near the corner of Main and Elizabeth Streets. Neither the Stroudsburg Academy (see Section IV, above) nor the Stroudsburg French Seminary, is to be confused with the Academy that was erected in 1839 in Stroudsburg on Academy Hill (see No. 11, below).

In Matthews (p. 1154), is the following information about the Stroudsburg French Seminary:

The act of the State Legislature incorporating the "Stroudsburg French Seminary" was passed on the 4th of March, 1839, the following persons being named as trustees: John Huston, Joseph Kerr, Samuel Stokes, William P. Vail, Morris D. Robeson, Robert Boys and Depeu S. Miller. The building was used for educational purposes until 1882, when it became unfit for occupation, and was sold at public sale, the purchaser agreeing to remove it within sixty days.

11. STROUDSBURG ACADEMY, Stroudsburg, Monroe County.

The following information about the Stroudsburg Academy is given in Matthews (pp. 1154-1155):

Under the provisions of the act authorizing the building of county academies, the edifice now commonly spoken of as the "old academy" was erected, an act of Legislature dated March 27, 1839, having been passed granting a State appropriation of two thousand dollars, for the purpose. A dispute as to the part of the borough in which the building should be located was turned to good advantage. Some of the citizens were in favor of a site on the hill north of the borough, while others favored the level tract at the base of the elevation. A vote for trustees was taken, each voter paying the sum of five dollars. The interest in the matter was so great as to induce many citizens of means to pay the price of the vote of their poorer neighbors, the funds thus raised being devoted to the furnishing of the building. The site on the hill was finally chosen and the locality has since been known as Academy Hill...

Among the early teachers at the academy were Messrs. Miller, Samuel Rees, James Carr, Lewis D. Vail, David S. Lee and Stephen Holmes. An additional room was built in connection with the academy, which was used as a secondary school. A system of grading had been introduced some years before, which was materially improved on the accession of Mr. B. Morey to the principalship in 1871.

A new school building, occupying a commanding situation on an eminence overlooking the borough, was begun in the fall of 1883, and completed the following year, the people voting by an overwhelming majority to increase the school indebtedness in order to complete the building. The total cost of site, building, furniture and heating apparatus slightly exceeded sixteen thousand dollars. It contains eight rooms, four on each floor, and is so arranged that two of the upper rooms may be thrown into one for special occasions. Seven of these apartments are now occupied; the number of pupils at present in attendance is three hundred and ninety-four. In the High School, besides the common branches, are taught algebra, geometry, natural philosophy, ancient history, Latin and physical geography.

The teachers are John E. Shull, principal; William H. Ramsey, J. A. Clements, Miss Ella Shafer, Miss Sallie Detrick, Miss Jennie Drake, Miss Lillie Bittenbender. The present board of school directors are Rev. F. Knighton, D. D., president; N. C. Miller, M. D., secretary; Robert Gruver, treasurer; Garrett Ramsey, B. S. Jacoby, A. B. Shafer.

12. WYSOX ACADEMY, Wysox, Bradford County.

The Wysox Academy was established on April 8, 1840. The trustees of this Academy (see Craft, p. 124) were as follows: Harry Morgan, William Myer, Joseph M. Piollet, Joseph M. Bishop, Harry N. Spalding, Victor E. Piollet, Daniel Coolbaugh, and David H. Owen.

13. GIBSON ACADEMY, Gibson, Susquehanna County.

The following account of the Gibson Academy is given in Blackman (p. 206):

The Gibson Academy, still standing on Kennedy Hill, was built mainly through the influence of Joseph Washburn, Esq., President of the Board of Trustees. It was ready for occupancy in 1841, but no academic school was held in it for any time worthy of notice. Select schools, at different periods, were taught here, first by Miss R. S. Ingalls, and Mr. Maxon, from Harford, then by J. J. Frazier, and afterwards, a Mr. Blatchley, from Wayne County, taught one year. The next select schools were held in Gibson Hollow.

In 1859 A. Larrabee, since county superintendent, taught here for a time. The Misses Stevens, from Vermont, succeeded him for three years; M. L. Hawley and assistants three years; a Miss Bush, and possibly other teachers since.

14. DINGMAN'S FERRY ACADEMY, Dingman's Ferry, Pike County.

The land upon which this Academy was built was acquired in 1813 from Judge Dingman; the Academy was still in existence in 1840.

The following information about the schools of Delaware Township, Pike County, and about Dingman's Ferry Academy is from Matthews (pp. 913-914):

The first school-house [in Delaware Township] was a log school-house near Shoemaker's, and Mason Dimmick taught the first school remembered. Three bridges have been, at various times, erected at Dingman's Ferry, but the wind, ice and floods have destroyed them and made it necessary to resume the ferry-boat. Judge Dingman chose an academy, rather than the county-seat, though this was not the origin of Dingman's Choice, as has been shown. When the matter of location and site had been concluded upon, Judge Dingman gave one and one-half acres, by deed bearing date July 15, 1813, to John Nyce, John Westbrook, John Lattimore, Matthew Ridgeway and Daniel Jayne, trustees of the Delaware Academy. The deed states "that for good causes and considerations, and the sum of five shillings to him in hand paid, hath given all that messuage, etc., beginning at a cedar standing near the main road." This cedar, which has remained an enduring monument for more than seventy years, still stands erect, the winds wailing a requiem over the pioneers of the Mink-sink, who sleep the silent sleep of death in the Delaware Cemetery, near by. The instrument was signed in the presence of Daniel Dimmick and Samuel Anderson. One of the corners of the plot is the State road, which once passed below the site of the Reformed Church. When the State withdrew its aid from academies this property was turned over to the school directors, and is now used for public school purposes.

15. MADISON ACADEMY, Waverly, Lackawanna County.

Madison Academy (see photograph this page) had its beginning in 1836, when W. H. Nicholson, Esq. opened a select school in Waverly on the Main Street. W. H. Nicholson was succeeded as principal of this Academy, in 1844, by Gilbert S. Bailey, with Miss Sarah Bunnell, preceptress. This Academy was incorporated in 1840; the school was opened upon the completion of the building in 1844, at a cost of $3,000. The first board of trustees of Madison Academy (see 1880, p. 457) consisted of Rev. John Miller, president; Leonard Batchelor, secretary; Dr. Andrew Bedford, Thomas Smith, Lemuel Stone, William Thompson, and Nicholas Reynolds.

Gilbert S. Bailey, we learn from 1880 (p. 459), served as principal of this Academy for one year. He was succeeded by Professors L. G. Dimmock, Harvey D. Walker, Granger, Carter, Carr, Rose, and Rev. Mr. Stewart.

Madison Academy, Waverly, Lackawanna County. Photographic copy print by DWP from the photograph that appears on page 75 of Mildred Mumford's This Is Waverly. The caption on this photograph in that volume is as follows: "Madison Academy--A Private School--1844-1878--used for Public School 1878-1897 (Foreground). Waverly Public School, 1897-1926 (Background)."

In This is Waverly, written by Mildred Mumford and published by The Waverly Woman's Club in 1954, Mildred Mumford says the following (on p. 74) of the school that was established in Waverly in 1836 by H. W. Nicholson, which was incorporated in 1840 as the Madison Academy: "Abington had the first institution of higher learning in Northeastern Pennsylvania and, for some time the only one--a fact crying out for commemoration. In 1836 it was started as a very small select school in the house where the Clayton Brights live on Main Street." Madison Academy was not, be it known, the first institution of higher learning in Northeastern Pennsylvania. Among the institutions of higher learning that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania before Madison Academy are the following: Wilkes-Barre Academy, Kingston Academy, Athens Academy, Beechwoods Academy, Delaware Academy, Plymouth Academy, Stroudsburg Academy, Susquehanna Academy, Milford Academy, Dundaff Academy, Le Raysville Academy, Franklin Academy, Honesdale Academy, and Towanda Academy.

The following information about Madison Academy is from Mumford (pp. 74, 76):

Some prominent men of Pennsylvania were graduated at the Academy: Garret M. Harding, president judge of Luzerne County; Honorable C. L. Buckalew, Hon. Henry W. Palmer; Frank Lee Benedict, the author; George E. Bedford, son of Dr. Bedford; George B. Smith, grandfather of Mrs. Major Lee White, Sr., of Allentown; Andrew W. Smith, attorney; Aaron Augustus Chase, attorney, whose home in Fleetville "The Maples" is owned today by Joseph Carpenter.

Also among the graduates of the Academy were John Farnham and Miss Mary Atherton. They fell in love while students at Madison Academy and were later married. This couple were the distinguished grandparents of Waverly's, Mrs. J. Curtis Platt and J. Farnham Mears, Scranton.

School teachers for three decades were prepared for their work within the storied walls of Madison Academy.

Subjects taught at the Academy were: ancient languages, higher mathematics, arithmetic, belles lettres, natural science, physiology and chemistry, German, French and Italian, instrumental music and painting. The examining board in 1850 was composed of Sheldon T. Scranton, Scranton; William K. Mott, Providence; Hon. William Jessup, Montrose; Colonel Hendrick B. Wright and Warren J. Woodward, Wilkes-Barre. The school at that time had one hundred sixty-five pupils.

The attendance at the Academy declined as other schools of the type were formed throughout the state and the Academy did not continue as a private school after 1878. It served as a borough school building for about nineteen years, when it was declared unsafe. After the new school building was built on the same grounds, the old Academy was torn down.

16. WYOMING SEMINARY, Kingston, Luzerne County.

The following account of Wyoming Seminary (see engraving this page) is from 1880 (pp. 313-314):

WYOMING SEMINARY.

This well known and justly popular institution of learning, located in the classic valley of Wyoming, has a history well worthy of note.

The friends of education in the old Oneida M. E. conference, after establishing on a broad and permanent basis a seminary at Cazenovia, N. Y., in the northern portion of their territory, determinedly entertained the project, over thirty years ago, of providing for the increasing educational demands of the southern portion of the work. With a commendable foresight they devised measures for the erection of an institution of learning in northeastern Pennsylvania. At the session of the Oneida Conference held in Wilkes-Barre August 9th, 1843, the matter was fully discussed, and the necessary preliminary steps taken by the appointment of David Holmes, Jr., Lucian S. Bennett, Thomas Myers, Madison F. Myers, Lord Butler, Sharp D. Lewis and Silas Comfort as "trustees of a contemplated seminary of learning, to be located either in Wilkes-Barre or Kingston," according to the amount of subscription obtained in each place within a given time. Kingston, providing the largest subscription, was the chosen locality. At the first meeting of the board of trustees David Holmes was elected president, Silas Comfort secretary, and Madison F. Myers treasurer. The first building, a brick structure of three stories, 37 by 70, was erected and opened for students in 1844. The size of the chapel was 24 by 29; reception room, 13 by 29, with some twenty rooms in all for students; cost of the building, about $5,000. Such was the beginning of this educational enterprise—one building, two teachers and fifty scholars. The trustees secured as their first principal Rev. Reuben Nelson, A.M., then a young man, but who afterward abundantly demonstrated his fitness to inaugurate and carry forward such an enterprise to a successful consummation. Under such leadership, seconded by the energetic co-operation of a noble-minded and self-denying board of trustees and a corps of efficient teachers, the institution attained a popularity and influence second to none of its class in the land.

In half a dozen years after the erection of the first edifice, such was the patronage obtained that an additional building was demanded. In the spirit of an unselfish liberality, the late William Swetland volunteered to erect the projected additional building at his own expense. The second building was named by the trustees Swetland Hall, in memory of the respected donor. At the same time Hon. Ziba Bennett contributed $1,000 as a foundation for a library. This was thereafter called, in honor of the giver, the Bennett Library.

In the early spring of 1853 additional facilities were deemed essential, and the building of a wing or wings to the main building was contemplated, with a view to afford accommodation to a larger number of students. On the 15th of March, 1853, the seminary buildings were burned down. While the brick and stone and ashes were yet warm the trustees, with undaunted heroism, in their meeting on the day of the fire resolved that a committee of three be appointed to draw plans and specifications for the rebuilding of the seminary. This showed the stuff these men were made of. Again did the tried friend of the cause, William Swetland, come to the rescue, and he nobly undertook, at his own expense, the work of rebuilding and enlarging Swetland Hall. Through the liberality of P. Pettebone, George Swetland, A. Y. Smith, and Isaac C. Schoemaker, a third building was erected about the same time, to which the name Union Hall was given. Thus, through fire and disaster, larger and better buildings were erected, and the three blocks, "Wyoming Seminary" in the center, with "Swetland Hall" on the left, and "Union Hall" on the right, stood a noble monument of the energy and liberality of the men of Wyoming valley.

In a few years afterwards the ladies' boarding hall was destroyed by fire. Then a fierce tornado swept over the place and unroofed the building. Then a flood did more or less damage to the seminary property. Yet with heroic spirit the board of trustees measured up to every exigency, so that repeated difficulties have been overcome, financial embarrassments removed, and the whole machinery kept moving without intermission and without a jar.

The civil war seemed for a brief period to interfere with the wonted success of the institution. Yet even with this temporary drawback the trustees projected other plans for the success of the school. A commercial department was added in 1863. Professor W. S. Smyth, afterward principal of Cazenovia Seminary, was secured to take charge of the commercial college, and under his efficient supervision it proved a decided success. Professor L. L. Sprague has been the head of this department for seven years, and under his management it has developed into an institution equal to the best schools of the kind in the country.

At the close of the war it was found that the enlargement of the seminary was absolutely required. The three buildings had already been united by the addition of wings, yet this did not meet the demand for room. In the year 1866, the centennial of American Methodism, it was determined to erect a memorial building, to be named "Centenary Hall." This was commenced in 1867 and completed in 1868, at a cost of about $25,000. The buildings are all under one roof, three and four stories high, with 350 feet frontage. The edifice, as a whole, is an ornament to the valley, and an honor to the country and the church. There are ample accommodations for 175 boarding students and 250 day scholars.

At the general conference of the M.E. church held in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1872, Rev. Dr. Nelson, after serving as principal for a period of nearly thirty years, during which time he developed his skill as an educator and financier, was elected senior book agent at New York, and resigned his position as principal. He was succeeded by Rev. D. Copeland, A. M., Ph. D., president of the Female College of Hillsboro, Ohio, a gentleman whose literary tastes and attainments, acknowledged abilities and extended experience as an educator, render him pre-eminently fitted for the important and responsible position of principal of an institution of this grade. Never was the institution more successful. The course of study is most thorough and elevated. The curriculum will compare favorably with that of the highest institutions of its class. Notwithstanding the depressing influence of monetary panics, and the business derangement arising from the recent general suspension in the anthracite regions, this time honored and deservedly popular institution receives its full share of patronage, and under its present efficient management is destined to exert a still more potent influence in the education of the youth of our land.

The system of instruction adopted is thorough, and designed to prepare the students for the active duties of life, or for a course of professional or collegiate study. There are nine departments of study provided, and eight courses of study are arranged in order to meet the various wants of students: The common English course, course in literature and science, classical course, college preparatory course, musical course vocal and instrumental, and commercial course. As an evidence of the high grade of scholarship of young men prepared here for college, today they stand among the first at the best colleges in the country. Many leading men now distinguished in church and State have been educated in this seminary, including Hon. W. W. Ketcham, Governor H. M. Hoyt, Hon. H. W. Palmer and Hon. H. B. Payne, Rev. L. C. Floyd and Rev. P. Krohn, and the fine pulpit orator Rev. W. P. Abbott, now of New York.

The faculty of the institution is as follows:
Rev. David Copeland, Ph. D., D. D., principal, intellectual and moral science.
Ellen R. Martin, A. M., lady principal, belles lettres.
Rev. Levi L. Sprague, principal of commercial college and lecturer on commercial law.
Rufus B. Howland, B. C. E., mathematics and natural science.
Rev. Cyrus C. Lovejoy, A. M., ancient languages.
Hugo V. Stadler, instrumental and vocal music.
Willis L. Dean, plain and ornamental penmanship, book-keeping and telegraphy.
Sarah M. Soule, English branches.
Rev. Henry Wheeler, lecturer on commercial ethics.
R. H. Tubbs, M. D., and P. B. Cook, M. D., lecturers on health.
Rufus B. Howland, librarian.
Competent teachers in art and modern languages will also be provided.

The following information about Wyoming Seminary is from Wilkes-Barre City Directory 1894, published June 1, 1894 by The Wilkes-Barre City Directory Co. (p. 713):

17. THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIA, Bethany, Wayne County.

This University (see engraving this page) was chartered in 1848 by the State. It was conducted in the court-house in Bethany which, in the period 1841-1848 had housed the Beechwoods Academy. When the building that had housed that Academy until 1841 was sold in 1855, the proceeds of that sale were appropriated to the University of Northern Pennsylvania. In 1976, the Beechwoods Academy building was owned by the Paul Carpenters. The University of Northern Pennsylvania building (formerly the court-house at Bethany) burned to the ground on April 18, 1857.

The following information about the University of Northern Pennsylvania is from Matthews (p. 499):

After the removal of the county-seat to Honesdale, in 1841, the court-house was used as an academy until 1848, when the Legislature chartered the University of North Pennsylvania. An immediate enlargement of the building followed. It was ready for occupancy on the 2d of December, 1850, at which time an advertisement of the trustees announced that the main building would accommodate from one hundred and fifty to two hundred students. It comprised two large study-rooms, three recitation-rooms and a handsome recess for library and apparatus. The sleeping-rooms accommodated eight students each, and the entire building was heated by Culver's patent hot-air furnaces. Four teachers were employed, and there were eighty pupils the first term. E. Curtis, a graduate of the State Normal School at Albany, N.Y., was the first principal of the new building, and J. F. Stoddard, professor of mathematics and natural and moral sciences at Liberty Normal School, was announced to deliver a course of lectures during the term. The trustees of the university at this time were as follows: Hon. N. B. Eldred, chairman; P. G. Goodrich, secretary; Dr. Otis Avery, Hon. Pope Bushnell, Hon. James Manning, Hon. Paul S. Preston, Rev. E. O. Ward, Dr. Uriah Wright, John M. McIntosh, Earl Wheeler, Esq., Phineas Arnold, Dr. Harrison Gregory, Arroy Prescott, Orin Hall, Ira Vadakin, Osborn Olmstead, Henry Jennings, Richard Webb, Rev. Henry Curtis, D. W. Church, William R. Stone, R. F. Lord, Rev. W. Richardson, John Sloan, R. L. Seely and D. S. West.

The next year Professor Stoddard was elected principal, and the institution was patronized by over two hundred students, giving a great impetus to the cause of education in the entire vicinity. Then, for a time, the university was managed by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The institution got into debt, and on November 28, 1856, all the real estate was sold by the sheriff to E. W. Hamlin, who bought for Professor Stoddard. The latter put the buildings into excellent repair, and reopened it as a private school in the following spring. On April 18, 1857, the building was burned to the ground, entailing a loss of six thousand dollars, only one-half of which was recovered by insurance. Professor Stoddard reopened his school in the Baptist Church edifice, but soon after abandoned the enterprise and generously gave the fire-proof building to the borough, to be used as a public school.

The notice for the University of Northern Pennsylvania that is reprinted below was published in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal of September 29, 1854 (Volume V, No. 49, p. 2, col. 6):

CONFERENCE SEMINARY AT BETHANY

THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIA, now under the patronage of the Wyoming Annual Conference, and to be conducted upon the plan of a Conference Seminary, commences its next term on the 1st of November next. The location of the Institution, for healthfulness, good morals, grand and beautiful scenery, is conceded to be most eligible. Though under the care of the Conference, the general objects of the School will not be changed. While a wholesome religious influence will be exerted over all, no spirit of exclusiveness or sectarianism will be manifested towards any. The Institution will be under the direction of the following Board of Instruction:

REV. NELSON ROUNDS, D. D., Principal and Professor of Mental and Moral Science and Hebrew.

R. MURRAY, A. M., Graduate of Cambridge University, England, Professor of the Latin, Greek and French languages, and Instructor in English Literature.

The Professor of Mathematics and Natural Sciences to be elected.

MR. RICHARD HOOLMAN, Assistant in Mathematics.

MR. R. D. LANCASTER, Teacher of German.

MISS SARAH CORTRIGHT, Graduate of Lima Seminary, Preceptress, and Teacher of the Higher English Branches.

MISS ALANSA M. ROUNDS, Teacher of Music upon the Piano and Melodeon.

MISS JERUSAHA SHAW, Teacher in Drawing, Mono-chromatic, Pelis-work, Painting in Oil and Water Colors and Embroidery.

The Common English Branches will be carefully attended to by the different Professors, or by a Teacher for that Department.

University of Northern Pennsylvania, Bethany, Wayne County. Photographic copy print by DWP from the engraving that is given on page 79 of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County, wherein this engraving is captioned: "University of Northern Pennsylvania at Bethany."

TERMS OF TUITION.

Lower Eng. Branches, pr. gr. of 11 weeks, embracing Orthography, Reading, Writing and Arithmetic, commenced,	$ 3 00
Higher English Branches,	4 50
Latin, Greek and Hebrew Languages, (with the above)	6 50
Modern Languages, each, (extra)	3 00
Drawing and Painting	3 00
Oil Painting, with use of Patterns, (extra)	6 00
Mono-chromatic and Pelis-work,	5 00
Embroidery,	2 50
Music on the Piano or Melodeon, with Instruction, (extra)	10 00
Vocal Music,	1 00
Lectures on Natural Sciences, per course (extra)	1 00

Tuition Bills to be paid invariable in advance for the Quarter.

In addition to the present extensive facilities of the University, the Committee on Rooms and Repairs will occupy the ensuing vacation in making internal and external improvements, and will arrange for a School of two hundred the coming term. Besides the Boarding Hall, a large number can be accommodated in private families; and others who wish to engage rooms in the village and board themselves can be accommodated in that respect. Those designing to attend the Institution would do well to apply early to the Principal for accommodations.

Board for the ensuing Fall and Winter, in the Hall, will be $2 per week, with Fuel and Rooms furnished. The students will supply their own towels, toilet soap and brooms. For Washing, one shilling per week will be charged extra. Board to be paid invariable in advance, viz: One-half at the commencement, and the other half at the middle of the quarter.

Text-Books and Stationery will be kept on cash sale at the University at reasonable prices.

The first quarter will close January 17th, 1855.

There will then be a vacation of one week. The second quarter will commence January 24th, and close April 10th.

The Biblical Department, * and also the Teachers' Class, organized for the benefit of those designing to teach Common Schools, will be under the supervision of the Principal.

All the Teachers above named, come into the Institution experienced already in the business of Instruction. Dr. Rounds has held a prominent place in the Cazenovia Seminary for three years. Prof. Murray has been successfully engaged for a series of years in teaching the Classics; and Miss Cortwright has for some time been Preceptress of an Institution in Xenia, Ohio.

While, therefore, the Trustees are making every effort to build up the Seminary, and make it an ornament to the country and a blessing to the rising generation, they hope for, and solicit a liberal patronage.

In behalf of the Board of Trustees,

OTIS AVERY,
ABEL BARKER, Committee.
D. C. OLMSTED,

Bethany, Wayne Co. Pa., Sept. 17, 1854.

* The design of the Biblical Department is to furnish GRATIS, to those who desire it, systematic and competent aid in the critical study of the Scriptures.

18. ROME ACADEMY, Rome, Bradford County.

Established March 24, 1848. In Craft (p. 124) the trustees of this Academy are listed as: John W. Woodburn, Lemuel S. Maynard, William W. Woodburn, William E. Maynard, Samuel C. Mann, Joseph Allen, and W. W. Kinney.

19. UNION ACADEMY, Damascus, Wayne County.

A very complete account of Union Academy (later Damascus Township High School, see above) is given in Matthews (pp. 464-465), and we reprint herebelow that account:

THE DAMASCUS ACADEMY, which for more than a quarter of a century has been the leading educational institution of this portion of the Delaware Valley, has been attended by many vicissitudes, and, during that period, has stood high on the hill of success and progress, and again so low in public esteem as to nearly succumb to financial embarrassment and failure. Neglect and indifference, which never keep dates and records, the warp and woof of historians' work, make some of the earlier information meagre, though enough is obtainable to trace the progress of a well-defined effort, among a few leading spirits, to secure good educational advantages in this portion of the Delaware Valley. The subject of building an academy was first discussed by some of the leading citizens some thirty-seven years ago, and resulted in rather an unsatisfactory meeting to consider the matter, called at the Presbyterian Church on the evening of August 18, 1848. The propositions then laid before the citizens were not received with favor, though the seed was sown afterward, when a second meeting was held in the Baptist Church, at which proper measures were taken to forward the project and a committee was appointed to select a site. When the location was decided upon, a third meeting, also at the Baptist Church, appointed a committee to buy a piece of land containing one acre from Charles Drake for two hundred dollars. It was the site that had been previously selected, and was a portion of the old Damascus Manor. This meeting also selected a board of trustees, consisting of Moses Thomas, Moses Tyler, John Mitchell, Webster Sutliff, James C. Curtis, E. S. Page and Walter S. Vail, and another committee was empowered to solicit subscriptions of stock at five dollars a share, and secure a charter. Subsequently it was reported that a sufficient amount has been subscribed, and Moses Tyler was elected president of the board, with Charles Irvine as secretary and treasurer. The latter drafted the charter, which was obtained in 1849, and incorporated as the Union Academy of Damascus. The necessary arrangements for the erection of the building were soon made. Joseph Tyler laid the foundation, and Cogswell Gordon, the architect, with the assistance of Joseph M. Brigham and Abraham Tyler, succeeded in completing the structure during the summer of 1849. The total cost of the building was one thousand and fifty dollars, which was considered really more than the improvement was worth.

At a meeting of the trustees, held March 9, 1850, it was decided that the first term should begin on the first Monday of the succeeding May; that the fall and winter terms should commence on the 20th of September, and continue, with one week's vacation through the holidays, until the 20th of March, 1851. Rev. A. M. Calkin was empowered as the first principal, and during the first term the attendance was so large that it became necessary for him to obtain a lady assistant. He also took the academy for the second term, in September, 1851, but was released at his own request, and James L. Appley was employed in his stead, commencing work in the spring of 1851, and continuing until the following July, when Mr. Calkin returned. He remained this time until the close of the scholastic year in 1856, when he was succeeded by Wheeler Mitchell, who taught for five months, and gave place to W. A. Newton, of Narrowsburg. The latter rented the academy for one year, during which time he succeeded in getting the rental reduced from forty to twenty-five dollars, and was re-elected in March, 1859, for a second year. After his departure the academy remained closed for a time. It had been a financial failure, and no one seemed willing to guarantee the amount necessary to secure a principal. However, in October, 1861, Misses McClogan and Vaughan opened the school, only to give it up after a few months, and be succeeded by C. J. Lain, who also remained but a short time. In February, 1862, John Cairns came, remaining until April, 1865, when R. K. Scudder was secured for one year. L. D. Tyler took the principalship in 1866, and had a large patronage; but he remained but a short time, and was succeeded by Miss Bush, whose stay was likewise transient. During the latter part of the year 1870 the academy was closed, and an attempt was made to buy up the stock and convert the school into a private property, but it was unsuccessful, and shortly afterward J. A. McLaury opened the school with fair prospects of success. He remained for six years, doing excellent work, and building up the reputation of the school, and was succeeded by L. W. Tyler (2d), who taught one term and gave place to W. W. Fletcher in 1877. He was assisted by W. J. Turner. The next principal was Rev. R. J. Kellogg, who was also pastor in the town at the time, and after he went to serve other charges, Frank Tuthill taught for some months.

S. D. Barnes, the next principal, remained for two years and his first term had not closed before the necessity for a new building was manifest. When he took the school there were but eleven pupils, but the number increased steadily, and soon the stockholders decided upon better facilities. On June 19, 1879, a new board of trustees was elected, consisting of C. E. Beach, J. M. Page, L. Bonesteel, Marcus Appley, J. T. Tyler, W. J. Bush and W. W. Tyler, and upon organization Charles E. Beach was elected president, and Leroy Bonesteel secretary. This was the first decisive movement toward a new building, although some of the more energetic stockholders had been planning and estimating the cost of the contemplated improvement and soliciting subscriptions to a new fund. To this latter there were generous responses from Hon. J. Howard Beach, Mrs. D. M. McCollough, J. M. Page and others. A proposition to cut down the trees with which the academy tract was covered, and sell the lumber, excited violent opposition, but was finally carried, and a part of the lumber was made use of in the new building, while the rest was rafted to Philadelphia, and sold at a good profit. The work of rebuilding was commenced in July, 1880, and was completed in the following January. The building has a frontage of seventy-two feet, and is twenty-four feet deep. It is two stories high, with a Gothic roof, and is surmounted by a well-proportioned cupola sixty-five feet high. There are two airy study-rooms, each twenty-seven by thirty-three feet, and a number of recitation-rooms and other conveniences for the systematic conduct of a large school. The first term of the new academy began December 3, 1879, and at its close Mr. Barnes resigned. He was succeeded by T. N. Glover, who remained two years and then gave place to Isaac R. King, who closed his engagement in June, 1885. Since that time no one has been selected.

Two principals who served this Academy following Isaac R. King, we learn from Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (p. 79), are H. L. Fisher and S. W. Bortree. In 1899, Union Academy became Damascus Township High School.

20. WILKES-BARRE FEMALE INSTITUTE, Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County.

The following account of the Wilkes-Barre Female Institute is given in 1880 (pp. 203-204):

THE WILKES-BARRE FEMALE INSTITUTE

This educational institution, under the auspices of the Presbytery of Luzerne, was chartered April 10th, 1854. The following trustees were appointed: George M. Hollenback, Alexander Gray, Harrison Wright, Arrio Pardee, Samuel Wadhams, John Brown, John Urquhart, Henry M. Fuller, Elisha B. Harvey, William R. Glen, John Faser, Andrew T. McClintock and Rev. J. Dorrance, ex officio. At a meeting held April 15, 1854 George M. Hollenback was chosen president; John Faser, treasurer, and Edward M. Covell, secretary, and a building committee was appointed. May 8th, 1854, Rev. John Dorrance reported that the Presbyterian church of Wilkes-Barre had raised $10,000 for the establishment of the institute, and soon afterward a contract was awarded to D. A. Fell & Co. for the erection of a suitable building on River street above Smith, which was finished and the school opened in it September 13th, 1854. April 30th, 1874, this building was sold, and in May, 1876, a lot was purchased on South street, at the corner of Barnum place, on which it is intended to erect a large and convenient building for the use of the school. Since October, 1876, the Judge Conyngnam homestead, on River street, has been occupied by this institute.

The first principal of the school was Rev. Joseph E. Nassau, who accepted the position June 24th, 1854, and resigned in January, 1855. He was succeeded by Rev. C. J. Collins, who resigned November 28th following. Rev. S. Hutchins was appointed in March, 1856, and resigned in July, 1857. September 5th following R. S. Howes, A. M., was chosen to the position. He was succeeded by W. S. Parsons, Esq., under whose management the school opened in September, 1864, and who served until June, 1872. From this time until October, 1876, the school was abandoned. At the date last mentioned it was reopened in its present quarters, with Dr. J. F. Rothrock as principal. Dr. Rothrock was succeeded by Mrs. F. C. Hosmer and Miss E. H. Rockwell, two ladies of large and successful experience as educators in Massachusetts and Princeton, N.J., who opened the school September 12th, 1877. The course of study is arranged for six years—two in the preparatory department and four in the academic. The grade of pupils is determined by examination. No pupils are received who are under eleven years of age. Opportunity is given for the study of the French, German, Latin and Greek languages. Ancient and modern history, in connection with progress in literature, art, science and civilization, receive particular attention. The business management of the institute is vested in the board of trustees, of whom Andrew T. McClintock is president and Douglas Smith secretary and treasurer.

21. TOWANDA FEMALE SEMINARY, Towanda, Bradford County.

Established in 1854 by the Misses Hanson. From Heverly (p. 196), we learn that the Misses Hanson "were ladies of refinement, and in their school gave especial attention to the accomplishments. They were able teachers and continued the school for four or five years. The house now occupied by Chas. A. Allen, on Second Street, was used as their seminary building."

22. DELAWARE WATER GAP ACADEMY, Delaware Water Gap, Monroe County.

From Matthews (p. 1017), we learn the following information about this Academy:

In 1854, Rev. Mr. Howell, a Presbyterian minister, came to the Delaware Water Gap and succeeded in building a church there. He then conceived the idea of erecting an academy at that place, and with characteristic energy, at once went to work, and in 1855 opened a school in the finest school building in the county. In 1862 he sold the building to Samuel Alsop (the author of several mathematical works), who conducted a school there for a short time—less than a year—and then converted the building into a hotel.

23. ORANGEVILLE MALE AND FEMALE ACADEMY, Orangeville, Columbia County.

Incorporated, March 11, 1858; on January 2, 1865, the Academy was transformed into the Orangeville Soldiers' Orphan School (see Section VII, above). From Paul (p. 256), we learn the following about this Academy:

Five years before [1860] had the citizens of Orangeville completed the beautiful structure that crowns the hill, which, from below the knob, overlooks the village, and during this time had their school been in successful operation; first, as an academy one year under Professor J. A. Shank; then, four years as a normal school under Professor R. D. Walker. During the year 1865, its name and purpose remained unchanged, and the orphans who were received into it became members of its preparatory and model classes. In 1866, its name was changed, and for the next two years it was known as the Orangeville Soldiers' Orphan School.

24. LUZERNE INSTITUTE, Wyoming, Luzerne County.

The notice that is given below for the Luzerne Institute was published in the Weekly Advance of July 31, 1858 (Vol. II, No. 9, p. 2, col. 7):

LUZERNE INSTITUTE,

WYOMING, Luzerne Co., Pa.,

Has a healthy and quiet location, is very easily accessible by railroad and otherwise, and furnishes to both sexes the best facilities for study; under faithful and accomplished teachers.

In the Elementary, Higher English, Classical, or Ornamental Branches, thorough instruction and training is given.

THE NORMAL DEPARTMENT

furnishes, this Fall, special advantages to those preparing to teach.

The next Term begins Aug. 24th. Address the Principal,

E. A. LAWRENCE, A. M.

Wyoming, July 15, '58

9-3w*

25. COLUMBUS MALE AND FEMALE ACADEMY, Columbus, Luzerne County.

In 1880 (p. 298) is the following information about this Academy:

The Columbus Male and Female Academy was built in 1858, with funds raised by subscription for stock of the concern. One hundred and fifty-two shares at $10 each were subscribed for by seventy-four persons. The necessary buildings were erected, and the school opened with fair prospects, but as an academic school it has not been a success.

26. WYALUSING ACADEMY, Wyalusing, Bradford County.

From Craft (p. 124), we learn the following information about this Academy:

Wyalusing academy was incorporated under the name of the Wyalusing Educational Union, Sept. 17, 1859, with Henry Gaylord, Augustus Lewis, E. R. Vaughan, J. R. Welles, Washington Taylor, J. Depue, and Benjamin Ackley trustees. The board was organized with Henry Gaylord president, and Andrew Fee secretary. A commodious building was erected, which was opened in the winter of 1861, with Miss L. A. Chamberlain principal, who was succeeded the following autumn by Mr. La Monte. The building is now used for both public and private schools.

27. PLEASANT MOUNT ACADEMY, Pleasant Mount, Wayne County.

This Academy (see photograph this page) was transformed into the township high school in 1900.

In Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (p. 80) is the following information about this Academy:

Pleasant Mount Academy was established by E. M. Atwater in 1869, and continued by him for twelve years when he sold it to a stock company. F. E. Spencer has been president and J. D. Brennan secretary of the board of trustees since the company was organized. The principals have been L. G. Dimmick, Edwin Francis, Leroy Baker, Frank Tut-hill, H. B. Larrabee, G. W. Phillips, J. H. Kennedy, J. E. Tiffany, Wm. Miller, M.D., Mrs. Helen Miller, M.D., W. G. Trim, N. J. Spencer, J. H. Kennedy. The first class was graduated in 1878, and the alumni numbers over one hundred. Mr. Brennan is president of the Wayne County Directors Association.

28. KEYSTONE ACADEMY, La Plume Borough, Lackawanna County.

The following information about Keystone Academy (see engraving this page) is from Murphy's History of Lackawanna County (pp. 217-218):

The [cotton] factory building [in La Plume Borough], for a number of years, was occupied by James Frear as a country store. One evening in the early part of the year 1868, two men met in Mr. Frear's store. Their conversation drifted to the subject of higher education, the one to introduce the subject being Charles B. Reynolds, a great grandson of Captain Robert Reynolds and Stephen Capwell; the other man was Mr. Frear himself. They decided to call a meeting to be held in the basement of the Baptist Church. This meeting was held and also several adjourned meetings, and a subscription of $10,000 was pledged, a board of directors appointed, and Keystone Academy came into being. The institution was chartered by the Luzerne County Court in the latter part of the same year. The Board of Trustees organized by electing Rev. T. J. Cole, president; A. C. Sisson, treasurer, and James Frear, secretary. John H. Harris, who had graduated from the then University of Lewisburg in July, 1869, was elected principal of the school. The Board selected the present academy site. After a strenuous effort they succeeded in getting through a deep tangled wildwood which covered and surrounded the hill and reached the top. There Rev. T. J. Cole knelt upon a rock and offered prayer. Later a discussion as to the direction of the town from the hill across and to determine the latter, James Frear climbed a tree and pointed the direction of the church spire. The grounds, 21 acres in extent, were purchased from the estate of George Capwell, who was the grandfather of Christy Mathewson, the renowned baseball player and graduate of Keystone Academy.

The school opened September 21, 1869, in the basement of the Baptist Church with sixteen pupils in the forenoon and seventeen in the afternoon. Their names were: Esther Bailey, Lucy Bailey, Mary Brown, Edith Brundage, Elizabeth Chambers, Emma Colvin, Emory Colvin, Eugene Frear, James Frear, Lucetta Gardner, Miles Gardner, Edith Howe, Kate Howe, Mary E. Mace, William H. Moxley, Ada Reynolds and George Sisson.

The corner stone of the main building was laid in September, 1870. The chapel was dedicated January 2, 1872. The Main building was dedicated Oct. 19, 1874.

John H. Harris, we learn from 1880 (p. 540), served as principal of Keystone Academy from 1869 to 1879. During those 10 years 700 men and women attended this Academy. In 1879, there were 150 students in attendance at the Academy. John H. Harris resigned in 1879, and was replaced by William C. Tilden, A.M. In July, 1880, Mr. Harris resumed the principalship. Some of the lady principals of Keystone Academy were: Mrs. Battie Bower, Mrs. Mary E. Harris, Miss Louisa A. Northup, Miss Sarah Tingley. Some of the teachers of Keystone Academy during its early years are as follows: Rev. John Ballan (ancient languages), F. E. Bower, A.M., C. C. Bower, W. E. Capwell, A. B. Fitch, D. W. Brown, James E. Frear, A.B. From 1869 to 1880 (and perhaps after that time), Mrs. Harriet Bailey was in charge of the boarding department.

From Wickersham (p. 492) we learn that special classes for teachers were regularly formed at the Academy.

29. MONROE ACADEMY, Factoryville, Wyoming County.

In 1880 (p. 522) is the following information about Monroe Academy:

September 16th, 1872, a school was opened in the largest rooms of the Presbyterian parsonage; it has been kept up under the name of Monroe Academy. It was designed to teach the higher branches and the classics, and also as a normal school. Not less than fifty successful teachers studied here. During the second year Odd Fellows' Hall was occupied. In the summer of 1874 the building known as the Monroe Academy, but chartered as the Bowman's Creek Presbyterian Church, was erected. The first principal was the Rev. C. K. Canfield. Rev. S. McElroy now fills this position. The total cost of the building was $4,625, chiefly contributed by the citizens of Monroe.

30. THE SCHOOL OF THE LACKAWANNA, Scranton, Lackawanna County.

The following information about this school (see engraving this page) is given in 1880 (p. 414):

In September, 1873, Rev. Thomas M. Cann, A.M., established a young ladies' institute. A male department was added. A suitable building having been erected in February, 1875, the two departments were put into operation under the name of the Young Ladies' Institute and Boys' Classical Academy. In March, 1876, an advisory board of trustees, of which Hon. Alfred Hand was made president, was called in, and the school reorganized under the name of The School of the Lackawanna. The institution has earnestly worked in the cause of higher education and Christian culture. Many of its male graduates are to be found in colleges or in business, and two classes of young ladies have received the medal of the institution upon their graduation. The curriculum embraces not only the ordinary

In the Scranton City Directory 1884 (published by Lant & Silvernail, Valatie, Columbia Co., N. Y.), the engraving that is reproduced here of The School of the Lackawanna is given (p. 107). Given above that engraving is the street address of this school in Scranton: 243 Jefferson Avenue. The faculty for 1884 is listed on that same page, as follows: Rev. Thos. M. Cann, A.M., Principal; Prof. Asa H. Wilcox, A.B., Mathematics and Classics; Prof. A. Gross, Piano and Organ; Mrs. S. S. Cann, History, Literature and Modern Languages; Miss E. E. Ingalls, English; Miss L. H. Cann, English; Miss Sterns, Painting, Drawing and China Decoration; M. S. Cann, Natural Science and Mathematics. In 1884, the school opened on the second Monday in September, under the direction of 8 experienced teachers.

In the Lackawanna County Directory 1888-89 (Published by Lant & Silvernail, Valatie, Columbia County, N.Y.) the faculty of The School of the Lackawanna for 1888-89 is listed, as follows:

Rev. Thomas M. Cann, A. M., Mental and Moral Science; Walter H. Buell, A.M., Mathematics and Classics; W. A. Cornish, A.B., Natural Science, German and Mathematics; Mrs. S. S. Cann, French and History; Miss Elizabeth E. Ingalls, English and Mathematics; Miss Ida K. Mcaphie, Primary and Kindergarten Departments; Mrs. E. O. Hunter, Elocution; Miss M. Beardsley, Painting and Drawing; Prof. A. Gross, Piano and Organ.

Printed beneath the engraving of The School of the Lackawanna that appears in Taylor's Lackawanna County Directory 1899 (Published by Taylor's Directory Co., Scranton, Pa.)—a different engraving than the one that is reproduced here—is the following statement about The School of the Lackawanna:

Higher, Intermediate and Preparatory Department. Prepares for any college in the country. A thorough English and Business Course. Special courses preparatory to Law and Medicine. A well equipped Physical Laboratory. Representatives of Yale, Princeton, Delaware, Wellesley, Bryn Mawr and New York Teachers' College upon the faculty. A few pupils admitted to the family of the principal, where they receive personal care and training. The school re-opens Monday, September 12, under the direction of eight experienced teachers. For Catalogues, address, REV. THOMAS M. CANN, LL.D., WALTER H. BUELL, A.M., Principals.

31. ST. CECILIA'S ACADEMY, Scranton, Lackawanna County.

In The Lackawanna County Business Directory 1879-1880 (Published by Webb & Co., New York), the address of this Academy is given as Wyoming Avenue, near Linden, Scranton, Pa.

Note: For information on those private secondary schools that were established in Carbondale in the nineteenth century, see the Carbondale section of the present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Many of the above-listed academies and female seminaries were brought into existence following the passage of the 1838 Pennsylvania law that provided appropriations to academies and female seminaries that met certain conditions—those conditions are set forth herein immediately preceding this list of academies and female seminaries that were established in Northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1834-1895. When that law was amended in 1843 and 1844, many of the above-listed academies and female seminaries encountered serious financial problems. Regarding the effect of the 1843 and 1844 laws on the private secondary schools of the State, Wickersham (p. 388) states:

In 1843, sorely pressed for money to carry to completion the gigantic system of public improvements she had organized, the State reduced the appropriation to her Colleges, Academies and Female Seminaries to one-half the amount provided by the Act of 1838, and the next year withdrew the appropriation absolutely. This was a sad blow to the new institutions. Many of them, prematurely established and never strong, soon began to decline, and within a few years a large number of them had ceased to exist. The experiment in building up a system of higher education again failed, not this time so much on account of the want of sufficient number of pupils properly prepared, as on account of the injudicious application of the State's bounty, and its withdrawal just at the time it was most needed.

Regarding private secondary education in the nineteenth century in Pennsylvania, Wickersham makes the following statement (p. 390):

The scheme of education by means of academies or public schools, creditable as it was, did not prove successful. It was ill adapted to the conditions of society in the new state and entirely inadequate to the great end in view. Individual institutions forming a part of it flourished, and a few continue to flourish, but as a whole it was a building without a proper foundation—higher schools without lower ones to stand upon—and the long tried experiment resulted in disappointment. Some academies were later acquired by local school boards and operated as high schools; others grew to be institutions of collegiate grade; others were discontinued.

Note: We will not discuss in this the first part of this two-part history of the schools of Northeastern Pennsylvania the history of those schools that are presently flourishing, or which flourished in the twentieth century, that were established in the period 1681-1895 (e.g., The International Correspondence Schools, St. Thomas' College). Rather, the complete history of such schools will be presented in Part II of this history.

X. 1895

By 1884, nineteen states and territories had passed compulsory attendance laws. Pennsylvania was not one of those nineteen states. The first attempt on the part of the Legislature of Pennsylvania to pass a compulsory attendance law, albeit an unsuccessful attempt, was in 1874. In 1891 and 1893 compulsory attendance bills were passed by the Legislature but vetoed by the Governor. Finally, on May 16, 1895, a compulsory attendance bill was passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor of Pennsylvania.

This law provided that every parent, guardian or person having in charge any child between the ages of eight and thirteen must see that that child attends school for at least sixteen weeks each year, unless the child is excused by the school board. The provisions of the act would not apply to any person if "there be no public school in session within two miles of the nearest traveled road." Neither should they apply to any child "that has been or is being otherwise instructed... for a like period of time." The statement of any teacher or principal was sufficient evidence that this requirement was being met.

Carbondale Schools

The first school established in Carbondale, we learn from Murphy (p. 430), is the one that was taught in the house of Christopher E. Wilbur, a wheelwright and maker of spinning wheels from Dutchess County, NY, who arrived in Carbondale in 1810 and established a farm that later became the property of Horace Stiles. Near his home, Wilbur erected a grist mill in 1812. In addition, in Wilbur's house, Elder John Miller of Abington (see photo on p. 3 of Volume I, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, November 21, 1979) conducted the first religious services held in Carbondale.

In 1831, two additional schools were established in Carbondale. In Carbondale 1901 and in Murphy (p. 433), it is stated that those two schools were situated "on" the sites of the present Presbyterian and Methodist Churches. In 1880 (p. 443) it is stated that those two schools were erected "between" the sites of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches." Each school contained one room. The teachers, according to Carbondale 1901 and Murphy were Messrs. Erhart and B. G. Roots. 1880 reports the names of the two teachers in question as "B. G. Root and Evarts" (p. 443).

A great deal of information about the building that was built on the site of the Presbyterian Church is given in Eleanor Jones' Centennial History [of the] First Presbyterian Church of Carbondale, Penna. The building in question was not only a school, it was also a church. On page 19, Eleanor Jones quotes an old Presbyterian church record:

Not having a suitable place for worship, measures were taken to raise funds for the purpose of erecting a building that would be suitable both for a place of worship and also for a day school. With the aid of one hundred dollars given by the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company to the society and by subscription from the society, an amount was very soon raised sufficient to pay the expense of such a building.

Eleanor Jones says the following about this school/place of worship (p. 19):

So on this very church plot was erected that simple little building—with a steeple, we are told. This little single room school house, serving as a place of worship, a day school and a general gathering place for public meetings, has played a rare part in the history of our city. Built for worship before any other provision had been made, how many prayers for blessing God's work in the new community were uttered within its walls!

How truly did the pioneers seek to provide a means of education for the children and so was started in this simple room our share in the great American fight against illiteracy.

The building itself was "quite near and facing the Church Street side of the present (1929) church plot" (Jones, p. 20). A Sabbath School was also conducted in the school building (Jones, p. 20). In 1834, we learn from Jones (p. 20), a meeting was held in the school house and a committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the building of a Presbyterian Church. Once the new church was planned and subscribed for, "the school house was moved from its position quite near Church Street to the rear of the present lot, probably facing what is now Terrace Street and continued to serve as a school house" (p. 20).

Regarding the bell house that was erected in 1836 on the Presbyterian lot, Eleanor Jones states:

In 1836 a bell was purchased and placed in a bell house or tower directly behind the Meeting House. This bell played an active part in early Carbondale's day. Its ringing announced an important event, for it called the children to school as faithfully as it called all to worship. Its ringing summoned the pioneers to work, it tolled solemnly when death occurred and brought out the bucket brigade in the emergency of fire (pp. 21-22).

The history of this school building from 1850 on is similarly given by Eleanor Jones:

In 1850 the trustees moved that "The house now occupied as a school house (but in fact belonging to the society) be moved off the lot owned by the society as soon as possible." The date of this motion was March 20, 1850, and evidently the school house was not moved just then for in December of the same year when the great fire swept Main Street and the westerly side of Church Street, destroying about sixty buildings, among those destroyed was the one called Temperance Hall, corner of Main Street and Salem Avenue<sup>14</sup> where had been established an Academic School (according to Carbondale's Historical Souvenir) known as "Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute." And so after the fire this school was carried on in the little Presbyterian school house.

And in the records of 1857 is found: "Hiram Stark offered to move the school house to the back end of lot for $20.00."

The poor little school house was moved again, and again but sometime later than 1857 moved off the church plot and eventually it arrived at No. 100 Spring Street where for many years it has served as an attractive home and is today owned by F. G. Weed and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Weed. A worn doorstep indeed (pp. 25-26)!

The following information about the first teachers in these two schools, B. G. Roots and Mr. Erhart, is given by G. R. Love, whose remarks on this subject are quoted in Carbondale 1901:

"All I can say of B. G. Roots is that if he were living in the beginning of the twentieth century he would be arraigned for cruelty to children, convicted and punished. Our next schoolmaster, Mr. Erhart, was, however, a man of education, culture and ability."

In the summer of 1833, according to 1880 (p. 444), Miss Sophia Noble opened a private school over the tailor shop of Race and Bogardus. She also taught a school in the same place in 1834. Murphy (p. 434) says that Miss Sophia Noble's private school was opened in 1835, and that it was a private school for girls.

A recent "discovery" by Donald W. Powell in the Carbondale Public Library of some issues of the newspaper NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN<sup>15</sup> establishes for certain the fact that Miss Noble's private school was not, as Murphy (p. 434) suggests, established in 1835. This we know because of the fact that the issue of NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN that was published on Friday, June 13, 1834 (Volume III, No. 12, p. 4, col. 5) contains the following advertisement:

FEMALE SEMINARY

The subscriber thankful for the patronage already received would inform the public that she intends continuing her school as heretofore, in the Village of Carbondale, for the ensuing summer. She professes to understand, and will instruct in the following branches:

Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, English Grammar, Rhetoric, Geography, Drawing Maps, Natural Philosophy and History.

SOPHIA NOBLE.

Carbondale, March 21 1834

1834-1835

On April 1, 1834, the Free School Act of Pennsylvania was passed.

Reprinted below are two articles that were published in the NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN shortly after the passage of that Act. The first was published on Saturday, November 28, 1834 (Vol. III, No. 36, p. 3, cols. 2-3):

THE SCHOOL LAW

No one can, perhaps, feel more pleased, who has so little personal interest, in the acceptance of the school law in this country, than we do. We have wished such a law, for many years, as we have been placed under circumstances, as a teacher, to feel the necessity of Legislation on the subject.

There may be some objections to the law, it is true, but taken together, it is probably as good a system, as could have been formed, and may, by amendments, be so far improved, as to be equal to any system adopted by either of the States. One particular objection that we have to the system is, we wish it were a bona-fide law, without giving any portion of the citizens of the State the power of rejection, and that some provision had been made to compel parents, under certain penalties, to send their children to school.

Some may, perhaps think we are arbitrary in this particular—but we assure such, on mature reflection, they will think otherwise. It is the interest of every patriot—philanthropist—and, indeed, the whole community, that the rising generation should be so far educated as to stop the progress of poverty, wretchedness and crime, which is daily spreading itself over our widely extended country, by cultivating more enlightened, liberal, moral and religious principles—and in fine, to regenerate the whole system, by such immediate measures, as to change the current of licentiousness, and guide our youths into the paths of virtue and peace.

It is well known that there are many parents, who from ignorance or carelessness, are reckless of their children's future prospects—and a law, without some compulsory clause, would be enacted in vain—and the most blighting curse would fall on the children of such parents, were not the laws more obligatory than to leave it to their caprice to accede to or reject its provisions.

It is well known by every man who reflects on the subject, that the general rule of right is, that all should accede to laws enacted for the general good—that every individual must yield a part of his rights, in order to be secure in those of more consequence—hence, were the school law general, without any wherefores, and a penalty against all who would not accede to its provisions—the next generation would feel the benefit and force of such a Law. But at the present day, so aboriginal are the people of some sections of our State, that they cannot bear restraint—any compulsory measures that infringe on their natural privileges, as barbarians, are looked upon with a jealous eye—and every effort made for their immediate repeal—thus, has already been the fate of the school law in some sections—it has been rejected—and measures taken for its repeal—and in the very sections, too, where the influence of the Law is the most needed, and would prove the most salutary, if carried into operation.

The adoption of the Law in Susquehanna, Wayne and Luzerne is a source of great satisfaction to us, and speaks loudly for the intelligence and patriotism of the people. These counties have long solicited legislative aid in this particular, and the people would, indeed, show a want of consistency, had they rejected the law, even with all its deformities, without attempting to reduce its provisions to a practical test.

The second article/editorial that was published in the NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN regarding the Free School Act of 1834 was published in the Saturday, February 7, 1835 issue (Vol. III, No. 46, p. 3, col. 2). That article/editorial is as follows:

THE SCHOOL LAW

A great variety of opinions appear to exist on the subject of the new School Law, which we had great reason to believe would go into full operation in every division where the law was sanctioned by the people. Easton, in Northampton county, has thoroughly established the system, had a number of teachers examined, and every prospect of success bids fair to crown their vigorous efforts. In Gettysburg, schools have commenced under the provisions of the new law, and it is said that the number of children attending is at least one fourth greater than it would have been under the old system. Various other places have adopted the system, and every indication augurs well for the beneficial influence of a General System of Education, under which the children of the poor are placed on an equality with the rich, and a fair emulation for competition established, which must eventually break down all aristocratic distinctions and establish Republican equality in every grade of society.

We observe, by a resolution offered by Mr. Fornance, of the House of Representatives, a proposition is made to postpone the operations of the late not until the 1st of March, 1840, which if carried into effect, would be similar in policy, to the suspension of our internal improvements for that time. For the ensuing five years, there would be a great many thousands of poor children arrive at the age of maturity and manhood, uncultivated and in a state of ignorance and degradation appalling at the feelings of every philanthropist and well might Pennsylvania become the objects of burlesque and ridicule, and appropriately be styled "stupid and unwise" in her policy, and wanting in a great degree that energy and patriotism which marks the character of an independent and sovereign people.

There are but few who disapprove of a general system of Education, although there may be some objections to the present system, which may be easily amended, and which errors may be pointed out, after a fair experiment. The rich object, to the law, on the grounds, that they are able to school their own children, and making Education too common, will lessen the advantages that the influence of wealth may furnish their darlings, over the "ragged rabble" that surround them. But we hold that neither power nor wealth should be hereditary—and therefore support the doctrines of equality and competition, and that every man should contribute for the public benefit according to his ability, which should be determined by an impartial tribunal.

Before we leave this subject, we would, with due deference, enquire what has been done in relation to common schools in this village? Have the school men made the necessary provisions according to the act which constituted them public agents? Have the districts been set off—have proper teachers been employed that the whole community might receive the advantages intended by the law? Are half the children of this village provided for—are not the applications of helpless widows, for the admission of their fatherless children into our school, treated with cold hearted denial? We forbear further remarks, and would be glad to lay any communication from the School men, before the public, showing their proceedings, which they may choose to make.

The question of the merits of Cobb's Series of School Books is one that was taken up in the pages of the NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN in 1835. In the issue of that newspaper published on Saturday, January 31, 1835 (Vol. III, No. 45, p. 3, col. 5) is the following:

Cobb's Series of SCHOOL BOOKS

We publish to-day a number of articles in relation to the above named popular school books. To their superior merits, the recommendations of our ablest teachers, and most distinguished literary men, bear ample testimony. They are not like many of the ephemeral productions of the day, destined to have a short lived existence, and then pass into oblivion with the mass of elementary books, which inundate the land, but will continue to be used for years in many, if not all, the most respectable Schools and Academies in this section of country.

The following communication is from the Rev. Samuel Marks:—

Mr. Chamberlain,
Dear Sir:

It gives me pleasure to say to you, that I am well acquainted with Lyman Cobb's Dictionary, Spelling book, Sequel and Juvenile Reader No. 1, No. 2, and 3, and that I can in perfect confidence recommend him for the correctness of his orthography—the propriety of his classification, and the purity of taste displayed in the arrangement of all the matter. For the Spelling book, when compared with Mr. Webster, no intelligent preceptor, would for a moment, hesitate to express a reference.

Yours respectfully,
Carbondale, Jan. 28th, 1835.

From the Rev. Thos. L. Conkling.

I have known Cobb's Spelling book for some time, and think it the best now in use. His other books, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, of the Juvenile reader must happily supply that which was wanting between the spelling book and the English reader--The Sequel and Dictionary complete the set of reading books, and are well designed for common schools. As a whole, I am clearly of the opinion, that the school books published by Lyman Cobb, are far superior for all purposes of common Education to any books, or set of books now used in our common schools. To be generally used, they want but to be generally known.

Carbondale, Jan. 30, 1835.

In the issue of the NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN that was published on Saturday, February 7, 1835 (Vol. III, No. 46, p. 3, col. 5), the question of the merits of Cobb's School Books is again taken up:

COBB'S SCHOOL BOOKS.

We publish to-day several other articles in relation to the above valuable school books. They have, as we understand, been recently introduced into the following places, viz:--Carbondale, Honesdale, Bethany, Dundaff, Abington, Mount Pleasant and Lanesville. The universal approbation they receive from teachers, school committees and other literary men, be unequivocal testimony to their superior merits.

The following communication is from the School Committee of this village.

COBB'S SCHOOL BOOKS.

The undersigned committee having examined Cobb's Spelling Book and the Elementary Spelling Book of Mr. Webster, have no hesitancy in giving Mr. Cobb's a decided preference.

Mr. Cobb's Reading Books comprising the Juvenile Reader, No's 1, 2 and 3 and the Sequel are very valuable School books and are well worthy of adoption by all our primary schools. These, together with his Spelling Books and Exposition, we have requested our teacher to introduce into our village school as soon as practicable.

SAMUEL HOGDON,
JUDSON W. BURNHAM,
DAVID P. MAPES,
JESSE CLARK, JR.
HENRY VAN BERGEN,

School Committee
Carbondale Jan. 31st, 1835

From Mr. Roots, the principal teacher of this village.

Having examined Cobb's School books containing a complete Spelling and reading course of Elementary instruction, I highly approve of them, and, in pursuance of a request from the school committee, have introduced a part of them into the school under my charge.

B. G. ROOTS
Carbondale, January 31, 1834.

1836

A Catholic school was taught in the Catholic chapel in 1836 by John Walsh (Murphy, p. 434; 1880, p. 444). D. Tripp, from Oxford Academy, taught in this Catholic school in 1837 (1880, p. 444). During the pastorate of Father Fitzsimmons, a Catholic private school for girls was opened in the basement of the Catholic Church; the teacher was Miss Brown (Murphy, p. 434).

In 1837 a school was opened in a building that stood on the lot where in 1880, the English Baptist Church stood, and where, in 1901, St. Rose Hall stood. This was a school for advanced pupils, the first graded school in Carbondale (1880, p. 443), and was taught by S. S. Benedict. In Carbondale 1901 a list of the students who attended this school in 1837 is given. That list is as follows:

In 1880 (p. 443) is the following information about S. S. Benedict, the teacher of this school:

After quitting the profession of teacher he assumed that of editor, in which business he has been ever since successfully engaged. Successively he filled the offices of justice of the peace, member of the Legislature, select council, notary public and school director, the latter from 1848 to 1854 and from 1860 to 1880. The services he rendered to the cause of education during those years can hardly be overestimated.

In 1880 (p. 443), similarly, is a listing of some of the outstanding students of S. S. Benedict:

Thomas Dickson, president of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company; J. N. Wilson, M.D.; John S. Law, president of the Miners' Bank, Wilkes-Barre; David G. Smith, machinist and patentee; Edward Jones, coal operator; O. H. Jadwin, wholesale druggist, New York; S. E. Raynor, teller in the Miners' and Mechanics' Bank; Edward and Alexander Hodgdon; Henry L. Marvin; John S. Farnham, Charles and George McAlpine and Richard Antony.

The school directors of Carbondale in 1837 were Amzi Wilson, J. W. Burnham and Bonaparte Baker (1880, p. 443).

In the fall of 1837 there were, according to an item in the NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN of November 11, 1837, 350 students attending the public schools of Carbondale.

In 1838 another public school was established in Carbondale. John Walsh was the teacher. "Mr. Walsh enjoyed the reputation of being an excellent teacher, being specially strong as a mathematician" (1880, p. 443). In 1838, in addition, a select school for young ladies was established in Carbondale by Mrs. J. Hudson of Long Island, New York.

1839

James J. Hetherby, a music teacher, organized a band in Carbondale in 1839. Hetherby's Band was in demand during the Harrison & Tyler campaign (Murphy, p. 433), and, in 1841, made a tour of Luzerne and Wyoming Counties (Murphy, p. 444).

1840

In 1840 two additional private schools were opened in Carbondale: one by Miss Tuck for girls, and one by John S. Ward for boys. "Besides these, schools have been taught by Andrew Leichter, Mrs. Hamilton, J. L. McKim, J. S. Miller and John L. Richardson" (1880, p. 444).

In 1840 another public school was opened in Carbondale. It was taught by Mr. Jefferson. His students were the same ones who attended S. S. Benedict's school in 1837 (see list above) minus the following: Orville Baker, W. R. Baker, E. B. Burnham, H. B. Burnham, Charles Curtis, James Curtis, Thomas Dickson, Perry Farrer, Ammorvan Goff, Christopher Grattan, Levi C. Hathaway, Alexander Hodgdon, James Hodgdon, Sylvannus Jessup, George Johnson, Edward Jones, William Mathews, Henry R. Starkweather, Julian Wilson.

A private school, a select school for young ladies, was opened by Miss Tuck in 1845.

1846

G. W. Benedict of Providence: "About 1846, in addition to the several good public schools, Carbondale citizens established an academic school known as the 'Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute.' This institution was located in Temperance hall, corner of Church street and Salem avenue, and was patronized by most of the well-to-do families of the town. Its first principal was Henry J. Newell, with Miss Fannie Smith, assistant" (1901).

In 1848, P. C. Gritman, immediately after having been admitted to the bar, arrived in Carbondale, and served as principal of the Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute in that year. His students in 1848 (see 1901) were the following:

George Henry Archbald, James Archbald, Louise Archbald, Margaret Archbald, Mary Archbald, Thomas Archbald, Augusta Benedict, Eugene Benedict, George Benedict, Adaline Bogardus, Lizzie Bronson, Sallie Bronson, William Bronson, Franklin Decker, Fannie Durfee, Lewis Ensign, Martha Ensign, Sarah Ann Ensign, John Gillespie, Margaret Gillespie, Mary Jane Gillespie, Wellwood Gillespie, Amelia Harris, Emma Harris, Fannie Johnson, James Henry Johnson, Gibson Jones, Meredith Jones, Ellen Kenner, Belle Linnen, Mary Linnen, Janet Locke<sup>16</sup>, Elsie Love, John Love, Virginia Love, Ed Mills, Fred Mills, Lizzie Mills, Mary Nash, Mary Jane Pierce, Rexford Pierce, Sarah Pierce, Lydia Poor, Debby Russell, Charles Taylor, Janet Taylor, Sarah Taylor, William Thompson, Bruce Wilson, Henry Wilson, Jerome Wilson, Teressa Wilson, Hattie Wurts, Helen Wurts, Theodore Wurts.

Two later principals of this school were Dr. Marsh and C. D. Virgil (Murphy, p. 434).

The Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute was destroyed in the Carbondale fire of 1850. This school was then held in the school on the site of the Presbyterian Church (see above) that was established in 1837 (Jones, p. 25). Later this school was held in Pierson's Hall, which in 1901 is situated by G. W. Benedict as being "at the head of Church Street," and which is situated by Murphy in one instance on Church Street (p. 221), and in another instance (p. 434) on Terrace Street.

The announcement that is given below for the Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute was published in The Advance, Volume I, Number 1, May 21, 1857, p. 3:

CARBONDALE ACADEMY.

D. W. C. Durgin, A.B., Principal

Preceptress, MISS LAMORA FOX.

The Summer Term of this Institution will commence June 1st, and continue ten weeks.

The Principal is a Graduate of Union College, and from long experience in Teaching is prepared to impart a thorough knowledge of the various English branches, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Ancient and Modern Languages, and all the Useful and Ornamental branches usually taught in first class Academies.

TUITION.

In Common English, viz: Reading, Spelling, Mental Arithmetic, and Elementary Geography, $3 00 per Term. In Higher English, viz: Arithmetic, Geography, History, Philosophy, Elocution, Rhetoric, Logic, Chemistry, Physiology, Book Keeping, Penmanship and English Grammar, $5 00 per Term.

In Higher Mathematics, viz: Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry, Surveying, Mechanics, Conic Sections, and Astronomy, $6 00 per Term.

In Ancient and Modern Languages, viz: French, Italian, German, Latin, Greek and Hebrew, $7 00 per Term.

The Government of the Institution will be mild but decided. While no pains will be spared to secure the intellectual advancement of the Student, his moral culture will be considered of paramount importance. For further information consult the Principal, at the residence of Lewis Pughe, Esq.

Such other assistance will be procured as the interest of the school may demand.

Carbondale, May 21, 1857.

The following notice regarding the Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Insitute was published in The Advance, Volume I, Number 2, May 28, 1857, page 2, column 4:

CARBONDALE ACADEMY

This Institution continues in a prosperous and promising condition. The Spring term closed on Friday last, with the usual examination. A number of the friends of education were present to witness the exercises and mark the progress of the pupils. We were sorry to notice that some of the scholars were not present to honorably complete the studies of the term, as every diligent student and dutiful child should be anxious to do. But most were present and passed a very creditable examination on the various branches pursued during the term.

The Principal, Mr. Durgin, a graduate of one of our oldest and best colleges, is a thorough scholar and efficient teacher. He is deservedly popular with the pupils, and parents. He has been assisted in the Institution, during the past term, by Miss Fox, a young lady every way qualified to perform the duties of Preceptress. The Summer term will open on Monday next.

The following announcement for the Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute was published in the Weekly Advance of August 27, 1857 (Vol. I, No. 15, p. 2, col. 3):

CARBONDALE ACADEMY--This excellent and flourishing Institution will reopen for the Fall Term on Tuesday next, September 1st. The Principal desires that all students who possibly can should be present on the first day of the Term. Particular attention will be given to those who are preparing for teachers; and no pains will be spared to give all the patrons of the school a thorough and systematic course of instruction.

We hope our citizens will sustain so talented and efficient a teacher as D. W. C. Durgin--and send in their children on the first day of the term.

Mr. D. will be assisted by Miss Lamora P. Fox, as Preceptress.

One of the students who graduated from the high school in 1847 was Henry W. Palmer, who later became attorney general of Pennsylvania, a member of congress, and a leader at the Luzerne Bar (Murphy, p. 434).

1849

"Mr. Kelly has taught from 1849 to the present (1880), excepting a term of service, during the Rebellion, in the United States navy" (1880, p. 444).

In 1880 (p. 444) the teachers of Carbondale from 1840 to 1850 are listed, namely:

A. M. Jeffords, John R. Fordham, Phillips Wilson, Miss Adams, Miss E. Harvey, Miss M. Smith, Miss Eliza Grosvenor, Jeremiah O'Mara, Miss Russel, Miss Dart, Miss Mary Vannan, Miss Harriet Jackson, P. C. Gritman, H. C. Ensign, Miss E. Hubbard, George Perkins, Martin Canavan, Miss Flynt, Miss Meachm, Miss Sarah M. Shafer, Miss Mary Farrer, Alonzo Richardson and John Kelly.

In 1880 (p. 444) the prominent school officers in the period 1840-1850 are listed, namely:

The following announcement for Phelp's Institute was published in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal of October 7, 1853 (Vol. V, No. 10, p. 4, col. 5):

PHELPS' INSTITUTE!

Year - One commences on the Third Monday in April,
the other on the Third Monday in October.

T U I T I O N .

In Reading and Spelling; Mental Arithmetic and the Elementary Principles of Geography, $3 00 per term of Eleven Weeks.

In Higher English, viz:- Arithmetic, English Grammar, Ancient or Modern Geography, (with daily exercises in drawing Maps,) Ancient or Modern History; Natural, Intellectual and Moral Philosophy; Practical Elocution; Rhetoric; Logic; Physiology; Book-keeping; Penmanship, Parker's Exercises in Composition and Dec-lamation, $5 00 per Term of Eleven Weeks.

In French; Algebra; Geometry; Surveying, (with use of Compass and Chain;) Trigonometry; Conic Sections; Astronomy, (including the calculation of Eclipses;) Mathematical Geography, (with the use of Globes;) Geology; Botany, (with daily exercises in analyzing plants;) Chemistry, (with experiments throughout the last six weeks of each session;) Mineralogy, (Pupils have free access to a large and well selected Cabinet;) Navigation;

Worsted Work, 2 00
BOARD and Lodging (including Washing, Fuel Lights) in the family of the Principal, per Term of Eleven Weeks. 30 00

The Regulations and Discipline of the Institution are intended to be such as to promote the intellectual and moral advancement of its members. A course of study has been instituted, which it is believed, is well adapted to accomplish the object in view, viz: a thorough business, or, practical education. Nor are accomplishments undervalued. It is the aim of the teachers to combine the ease and grace of the finished gentleman and accomplished lady, with the strength of a well disciplined mind.

The Number of Pupils is so limited that each may receive due attention. A weekly report will be made of the progress of each pupil, which will be transmitted to parents at the close of each term, or more frequently if deemed necessary.

The Moral character of the School is considered of paramount importance. Teachers will spare no pains to exclude the profane, and otherwise immoral persons.
Students are required to attend church regularly, at that place of worship which their parents designate.

The Government of the School will be mild-but effectual. Moral Suasion will be first resorted to in all cases! It is believed that reason is a far better, if not a more religious weapon in the school room, than the rod is, or ever was.

The School is always open for inspection, and Parents, guardians, and friends of education in general, are invited to visit frequently. There is a public Rhetorical exercise every Wednesday afternoon.

N.B. The time of the Principal being necessarily devoted to the management of his School, and the advancement of his pupils-the financial affairs of the Institution have been committed to the charge of A.
RUTHVEN, Esq.-from whom pupils, on entering the school, must obtain Certificates of the amount of their Tuition Fees. Until such certificate shall have been obtained, and given to the Principal, no pupil will be considered as a member of this Institution.

The following account of the public examination that took place in Phelps' Institute in late September, 1853, is given in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal of September 30, 1853 (Volume V,
No. 9, p. 2, col. 4):

PHELPS' INSTITUTE-PUBLIC EXAMINATION

The exercises of the past three days in this Institute have been of deep interest, and have deservedly elicited the commendation of all who have had the pleasure of being present. Throughout the three days, classes in the various departments of Academic instruction were successfully and thoroughly examined-not only those pursuing what are termed higher English branches and Mathematics-but likewise classes in the common English branches, embracing all the fundamental principles in Orthography, together with Reading and defining words, also the elementary sounds of letters, etc., and the rapidity with which questions were given and answered, as well as the familiarity manifested by the Students, pertaining to the several subjects, was proof conclusive that the method of instruction in this School is of the most laborious and thorough kind.

It was exceedingly gratifying, and, at times, almost amusing to witness that spirit of emulation, which the wise and judicious teacher alone can call up among the members of the various classes! To commend any particular class, may perhaps appear invidious, where all did well; but we cannot withhold our commendation from some three or four classes, whose proficiency and attainments in sciences so difficult, must have been a source of pride to both their teachers and parents. We refer particularly to the classes respectively in Algebra and Botany, and likewise to the very interesting classes in French. The classes in Geometry and Surveying were equally deserving of commendation. That new and very instructive exercise-termed the "Commercial Class," which originated we believe with Mr. Phelps, the Principal, and which has of late been introduced into many similar institutions-is so practical in its benefits, that it needs only to be witnessed to be appreciated.

At the close of the exercise, the prizes were awarded to the various classes. The following very just and concise report of the committee on Penmanship, will be sufficient on this part:

Alonzo Phelps, Esq..

Dear Sir:-In compliance with your request, we have carefully examined the writing books of your pupils, and it affords us much pleasure to notice the great improvement so many of them have made; but in the opinion of your committee, the penmanship of Master JOHN E. BALL, exhibits the greatest improvement.
Respectfully yours,

A. RUTHVEN,
GEO. PERKINS, Committee.

In short, the Review was alike highly creditable to both Teachers and Pupils; and we cannot, on this occasion forbear to remark in reference to this Institute, that, in view of its present flourishing condition and the benefits it is conferring, as well as the happy influence it is exerting upon the minds of the juvenile portion of this community-this Examination must have been a source of gratification, not only to its present patrons, but to the friends of thorough practical education throughout the community generally.

September 24, 1853.

The Phelps Institute was, apparently, at one time situated in Waymart, Pennsylvania. In Matthews (p.
546), in a discussion of Waymart, Wayne County, we find the following statement: "Later we find an advertisement of the Phelps Institute, Alonzo Phelps, A.M., principal; Mrs. S. H. Phelps, assistant. The school with six scholars (limited to ten) was held in the private residence of Thomas Clark."

By means of the following announcement that was published in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal of April 7, 1854 (Volume V, No. 29, p. 4, col.
4), J. H. Estabrook informed "his friends and the 'rest of mankind'" that he was offering for sale a general assortment of books, stationery, and school books:

April 15, 1853.

From the following notice that was published in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Volume V, Number 44, p. 3, col. 3) we learn the names of the textbooks that were used in the Carbondale schools in 1854, as well as the names of the teachers in charge of each of the nine schools in the City during that year:

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Of Carbondale City District.

ACCORDING to the provisions of the New School Law, the Directors have decided that the following Books shall be used in the public schools during the present school year:.

Ticknor's and Sanders Spelling Books,
Sander's 1st, 2d, 3d and 4th Reading Books,
Hale's History of the United States,
Ticknor's Columbian Calculator,
Kirkham's Grammar,
Smith's Geography and Atlas,
Pelton's Outline Maps.

The Fall term of all the Schools in the District will commence on Monday, September 4th, under the charge of the following Teachers:

School No. 1. Miss Frances S. Johnson,
" " 2. Alonzo Richardson,
" " 3. Cornelius Jadwin,
" " 4. Paulinus A. Lewis,
" " 5. Moses Caldwell,
" " 6. John Kelly,
" " 7. Patrick White,
" " 8. John Jos. Purtill,
" " 9. Mrs. Moffitt.

By order of the Board,
A. MILES, President.
Lewis Fughe, Secretary.

1857

From the following notice that was published in the Weekly Advance (Volume I, Number 4, p. 2, col. 3) we learn, among other things, that the schools of Carbondale were in a flourishing condition in 1857:

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.--The first term of the School year commenced on Monday the 1st inst. with the following corps of Teachers:

No. of School.	Name of Teacher.
One.....	Miss L. S. Russ,
Two.....	Miss Jennie H. Locke,
Three.....	Mr. C. C. Jadwin,
Four.....	Mr. Alonzo Richardson,
Five.....	Mr. Daniel Davies,
Six.....	" Patrick White,
Seven.....	" Thomas Loftus,
Eight.....	" John Kelly,
Nine.....	Mrs. Mary Moffit.

We learn from the Directors that the Schools are in a flourishing condition, and the present term is Free.
Every parent, therefore, who has children old enough should send them to School at once. Neglect in this particular is a crime against the children and society.
Education, in this country especially, is far more valuable than wealth of gold or lands.

In the November 13, 1858 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume II, No. 24, p. 3, col. 1) it was announced that Miss Ruth E. Terrel (sister of the Wayne County School Superintendent) and Miss Letitia Farrer proposed to open a new Select School in Carbondale, namely:

It will be seen by advertisement, that Misses Terrel and Farrer propose to open a new Select School in town. We are glad to be able to say, from what we can learn, that it affords a prospect of a very good school. We are informed that their past experience in teaching has been highly successful.

In the same issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume II,
No. 24, p. 2, col. 7) it was announced that the school of Misses Terrel and Farrer would begin on November 29, 1858. "For particulars," the reader is advised, "enquire of Dr. C. Burr."

In the December 11, 1858 issue of the Weekly Advance
(Volume II, No. 28, p. 3, col. 2) is the following notice about the school of Misses Terrel and Farrer, which opened on November 29, 1858, in Baker's Hall in Carbondale:

NEW SCHOOL

Carbondale, Dec. 4, 1858

Beginning in 1858, perhaps earlier, the question of whether or not a graded school should be established in Carbondale was discussed in the Carbondale press.
In the December 4, 1858 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume II, Number 27, page 2, col. 4) is the following:

SCHOOLS.

It is not likely that anything can be said in favor of Schools not already known and appreciated in an intelligent community like this. It is always an unthankful business and generally an unprofitable one to tell people of that which they already know.

These considerations are enough to deter us from saying much, if anything in regard to schools.

Still we will venture the inquiry, Ought there not to be a school of a higher grade, a "Graded School" if you please, established and sustained here? We deem it no negative answer to this question that we have already numerous schools, public and private, and some very good ones. They do not reach far enough. They do not furnish means of instruction adequate to the wants of the community.

We need a thoroughly organized and well furnished Classical and Mathematical School. It should afford advantages equal to the very best to be found elsewhere. We believe the early establishment of such an one practicable, and eminently desirable. It would not only be a source of high satisfaction, and evident usefulness, but very plainly a matter of economy. One half of the money that will in the next few years be paid out abroad from our community, for the advantages it would afford, would establish it. We should like to see public attention turned strongly toward the subject at once. We can but ask our neighbors and friends to think of it. Shall we have a public meeting to see what can be done?

By May of 1860 it was a sure prospect that a graded school would be established in Carbondale.
The May 5, 1860 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume III, No. 49, page 2, col. 3) contains the following notice:

GRADED SCHOOL.

The friends of Education and improvement in our town will be glad to learn that we have now a sure prospect of having a Graded School.

A site has been secured, and conveyed to the Board by Deed, and a plan of Building adopted. As soon as the requisite specifications can be prepared, proposals will be invited from Builders.

The site of the New Building will be the lot formerly owned by Charles Berry, on High Street, and immediately in the rear of one already owned by the Board. The size determined upon is 48 ft. front by 35 ft. deep, two stories high, with basement.

From the June 16, 1860 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume IV, No. 3, page 2, col. 3) we learn the following: "The contract for building a Graded School House has been awarded by the Board of School Directors to THOMAS ORCHARD, of this city, he being the lowest and best bidder. The work will be commenced in a few days, in the expectation of completing it the present season."

From the November 17, 1860 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume IV, No. 25, page 2, col. 1) we learn the following: "The School Directors of our city have elected Mr. A. J. WELLS as Principal of our Graded School. It is intended to have the School open about January first. Mr. Wells is recommended as a thoroughly qualified and successful teacher, and the Board believe that under his supervision the School will commence with high promise of usefulness, and that no reasonable expectations will be disappointed."

The following notice about the Graded School of Carbondale and the other schools as well was published in the January 5, 1861 issue of the Weekly Advance (Vol. IV, No. 32, p. 2, col. 4):

GRADED SCHOOL.

The opening of the Graded School—expected to have taken place on Monday next—will be postponed to Wednesday, January 9th.

The resignation of Patrick White, as Teacher of School No. 7, has occasioned some change among the other Teachers. John Kelly, Esq., has been elected to fill the vacancy in No. 7, and Mr. L. E. Judd to fill the vacancy the removal of Mr. Kelly occasions in No. 5—known as the Welsh Hill School. The other Teachers remain as advertised previously. All the Public Schools except the Graded School are expected to open on Monday next—the Graded School, as before stated, on Wednesday. Tuition will be free in all for the coming term.

The January 12, 1861 issue of the Weekly Advance (Vol. IV, No. 33, p. 2, col. 6) contains the following: "The Public Schools of this city, with the exception of the Graded School, commenced their sessions on Monday of this week. The Graded School will open on Monday last."

The September 3, 1859 issue of the Carbondale Advance (Volume III, No. 14, p. 3, col. 1) contains the following announcement: "The next term of Miss Watrous' Select School commences on Monday next, the 6th inst."

The December 17, 1859 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume III, No. 29, p. 2, col. 6) contains the following announcement:

LITERARY INSTITUTE.

THE WINTER TERM of the above named School will commence January 2d, 1860. Term—Eleven weeks. NORMAN OTTMAN, Principal. Carbondale, Dec. 17, 1859.

The following information about the schools of Carbondale in the decade 1850-1860 is given in 1880 (p. 444):

From 1850 to 1860 the number of schools increased to seven, the principal teachers of which were Bernard McTighe, Henry B. Jadwin, jr., P. J. White, Paulinus A. Lewis, C. C. Jadwin, John Joseph Purcell, Alfred Dart, jr., Martin J. Byrne and L. E. Judd. The first two were elected directors in 1858. Mr. McTighe served until 1874, and Mr. Jadwin until 1869. Another director worthy of notice was Honorable Lewis Fughe, now a prominent merchant of Scranton.

The Carbondale English and Classical Institute advertised in the Weekly Advance in 1860-1861—perhaps earlier as well. D. E. Pope, A.B., was the Principal as well as the teacher of the Ancient Languages, Higher Mathematics and Natural Sciences. Information about the school and its objectives was available, newspaper announcements of the period advised, from either the Principal or from Rev. E. L. Bailey (the minister of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, PA, from May 15, 1853 to February 18, 1866; see that issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA that was published on November 21, 1979 (Volume I, No. 2, pp. 7-8) or S. S. Benedict, Editor of the Weekly Advance.

The following notice about the Carbondale English and Classical Institute was published in the Weekly Advance of November 2, 1860 (Volume IV, No. 23, p. 3, col. 2):

Carbondale, Oct. 27, 1860.

A notice in the January 12, 1861 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume IV, No. 33, p. 2, col. 3) names not only the members of the Visiting and Examining Committee but also the Directors of the Carbondale English and Classical Institute in 1861:

CARBONDALE ENGLISH AND CLASSICAL INSTITUTE.

D. E. POPE, A.B., PRINCIPAL.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this School, on the evening of the 5th inst., the Reverend Messrs. E. L. Bailey, T. S. Ward, D. A. Shepard, and the future Rector of Trinity Church, were appointed as a Visiting and Examining Committee of the Institute:

DIRECTORS:

D. N. Lathrope, Pres.	D. E. Pope, Sec'y.
S. S. Benedict,	A. Barker,
George Foster,	A. O. Hanford,
J. M. Poor,	J. G. Thompson,
William Brennan.

The following notice about the Carbondale English and Classical Institute was published in The Advance of January 19, 1861 (Volume IV, No. 34, p. 2, col. 6):

CARBONDALE CLASSICAL INSTITUTE--THE WINTER SESSION.

The Second Quarter of this School will commence on Monday, Jan. 21st. That the Institute in the discipline afforded, and in the manner of imparting instruction shall offer inducements equal to the best seminaries, is the design and determination of the Principal. Through the generosity of a private individual, the School will enjoy the benefit of a complete set of chemical and philosophical apparatus for the illustration of those and kindred Sciences. The course of study is thorough as well as comprehensive, and daily supervision is given to the progress of all the students. The system of instruction is based upon the theory that thoroughness is comprehensiveness in its widest sense. Special pains will be given to those wishing to prepare themselves for teaching, or pursue the ancient and modern Classics.

The announcement for the Carbondale English and Classical Institute that is given below was published in the Weekly Advance of February 16, 1861 (Vol. IV, No. 38, p. 1, col. 2):

1861

From the January 19, 1861 issue of the Weekly Advance (Volume IV, No. 33, p. 3, col. 1) we learn that all the new school books adopted by the Board of School Directors for the Graded and Public Schools in the city of Carbondale were on sale at Jadwin's Drug & Book Store. The notice in question reads as follows:

ALL THE NEW SCHOOL BOOKS!

Adopted by the Board of School Directors for the GRADED and PUBLIC SCHOOLS, sold at the Lowest Introduction Prices!

at JADWIN'S DRUG & BOOK STORE.
Carbondale, Jan. 12, 1861.

From a notice in the January 19, 1861 issue of the Weekly Advance (Vol. IV, No. 34, p. 2, col. 4) we learn that the Graded School was opened during the third week of January 1861. We also learn a great deal of information about the other public schools of Carbondale. That notice is as follows:

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

After some delays incident to getting the Graded School Building in readiness, it has been this week opened and the Public Schools are now all in regular progress. The teachers are as follows:

Graded School.

Prof. A. J. WELLES, Principal.
Miss R. A. CORTRIGHT,
Miss S. P. MOSHER,
Miss CARRIE V. RUSS, Assistants.

No. 3 School,	M. B. BYRNE, Teacher.
No. 5 "	JOHN KELLY, "
No. 6 "	MARK DUFFY, "
No. 7 "	L. E. JUDD, "
No. 8 "	THOMAS LOFTUS, "

The present arrangements have very much increased the number of scholars in the Public Schools. The Graded School has opened with about 300 pupils, and Schools No. 5 and No. 7 are also thronged. Three rooms in the Graded School Building are completed and in use. A fourth room, which will be capable of accommodating 75 scholars, will be completed as early as possible. When this is done, the school will be relieved of the crowd which until then seems to be unavoidable, and 300 scholars can then be well accommodated and instructed in the four departments of the School.

In 1880 (p. 444) the date of the opening of the graded building described above (in the second ward, on Salem street) is incorrectly given as 1860. From 1880 (p. 444) we learn, however, the following about this graded school:

The schools of the building were divided into four departments: Primary, intermediate, grammar and high. The first principal was A. J. Wells. The grades and classifications made by him have been closely adhered to by his successors. Among the principals of the high school who have achieved success in teaching are W. H. Parsons, H. D. Cable. Charles L. Wheeler, D. G. Allen (superintendent in Wayne county) and Edwin Francis. In addition to the common branches, algebra, geometry, bookkeeping, philosophy, rhetoric and Latin have been taught in the "high school."

The following notice was published in the Weekly Advance of February 23, 1861 (Vol. IV, No. 39, p. 2, col. 4) following the meeting of the teachers of Carbondale in the Graded School Building on Saturday, February 9, 1861:

MINUTES

Of the Meeting of the Teachers of Carbondale, held in the Graded School Building on Saturday, Feb. 9, 1861, Prof. A. J. Welles took the Chair, ex officio.

On motion of L. E. Judd, M. J. Byrne was made Secretary.

The statistics of the attendance of pupils in the several Schools of the City during the preceeding week, as reported by the Teachers is as follows:

"In 1869, a one-story frame [school] building was erected on Main street, in the fourth ward. It contained two rooms. This was enlarged in 1876 by an additional story in height, and now contains four rooms, three of which are well furnished" (1880, p. 444).

"In 1870 a school-room was completed in the fourth ward, on Brooklyn street. The vestibule, though illy adapted to the purpose, has been used ever since as a school-room" (1880, p. 444).

"Mrs. L. A. Munger taught a select school during 1870. There are now (1880) no private schools" (1880, p. 444).

"In 1871 a primary school building was erected on Cemetery street, in the first ward, which in 1875 was made two stories high, containing four rooms" (1880, p. 444).

1872

"In 1872 a frame [school] building, two stories high, containing four spacious rooms, was erected on Laurel hill, in the second ward" (1880, p. 444).

1874

"In 1874 two new school-houses, each two stories in height and having two large rooms were completed on Salem street, in the second ward, and another on Powderly road, in the fourth ward" (1880, p. 444).

"In 1874 a private school was organized by a few gentlemen who were desirous of giving their sons an academic course. Twelve students attend" (1880, p. 444).

"In September, 1876, Sisters of the Order of the Immaculate Heart founded a convent in the first ward, between Hendrick avenue and Salem street. There are three school rooms in the building [see photograph of St. Rose Academy, this page], and four Sisters are teaching. Besides the common branches, drawing and music are taught. The average daily attendance of these schools is about 100 pupils. Two private schools of primary grade, with 40 pupils, are taught in the first ward" (1880, p. 444).

"In 1876 Carbondale city had twenty schools, with a total average attendance of 1,088. The schools were kept open nine months, at an expense of $13,083.17" (1880, p. 445).

"In September, 1876, a graded course of study for the public schools was adopted. General history, astronomy and drawing were added to the curriculum of the high school" (1880, p. 444).

"The following classification shows the number of teachers in each department, and the number in attendance during the year, according to the school report of 1877. The high school had at the close of the year one male and one female teacher; the average daily attendance, was 39. In the grammar department the number of teachers was 3; average daily attendance, 138. Intermediate department--teachers, 5; average daily attendance, 277. Primary department--teachers, 10; average daily attendance, 637. Total average monthly enrollment of pupils, 1,305; total average daily attendance, 1,091. If to this we add the attendance at private schools, we shall have an average monthly enrollment of 1,482, and an average daily attendance of 1,243" (1880, p. 444).

1879

"In 1879 there were twenty schools in the district, with an average attendance of 620 pupils. The schools were kept open nine months at an expense of $6,906.78" (1880, p. 444).

1889

The new High School building in the city of Carbondale was opened in 1889 (see photograph this page; see engraving on page 1 of this issue). It was opened, the following notice from The Carbondale Leader (Wednesday afternoon, September 14, 1889, p. 4) suggests, without any formal opening ceremony:

LET US HAVE A CELEBRATION.

To the Editor of The Leader: It would seem as if our new High school building was worthy of some more formal opening than its simple occupation by the scholars who are so fortunate as to attend it. In Pittston a similar building has recently had a formal dedication, and the little glorification indulged in was entirely justifiable and appropriate. It is to be hoped that our people may at least have an opportunity to inspect the splendid structure which so adds to the glory of the town, and inspires a just pride in the breast of every friend of liberal education.

JUNIUS.

In 1885, a free textbook law was passed by the Legislature of the State of Pennsylvania. (In 1893, this 1885 free textbook law was made compulsory in all school districts.) In 1889, new school textbooks were adopted by the Carbondale School Board. All students were required to buy the new books. This was not a popular requirement, as the following notice that was placed in The Carbondale Leader (Friday afternoon, September 20, 1889, p. 3) makes clear:

SCHOOL BOOKS

The School Board in its wisdom has swallowed the bait offered by a traveling School Book fiend and has ordered all scholars to supply themselves with a new and unknown series of Arithmetics and Geographies. The present era of high taxes and increased valuations, with lavish expenditures in all departments of the city government, would seem to be the worst possible time to order such a sweeping change, but the fiat has gone forth and with a view toward assisting parents and book buyers in bearing this latest burden we agree to furnish for 60 days all school books at actual cost. Old books exchanged and bought at

Notes on the Text

1. William Penn first referred to the establishment of a colony in Pennsylvania as a "holy experiment" in a letter of August, 1681, to James Harrison, to wit: "I have so obtained it [Pennsylvania], and desire that I may not be unworthy of His love, but do that which may answer His kind providence, and serve His truth and people: that an example may be set up to the nations; there may be room there [America], though not here [England], for such a holy experiment."
2. Given below is an outline map of the eleven counties of Northeastern Pennsylvania. The date given below each county's name on that map is the date that that county was organized. The letters A, B, C, and D refer to the treaties or purchases by which the land in question was acquired from the Indians.

- A Walking Purchase August 25, 1737
Deed comprising the "Walking Purchase," or "as far as a man can go in one day and a half" from the westerly branch of Nesamony to the Delaware. Land sold by some Unami Delawares near Wrightstown—blown up by a dishonest survey to take in all the Munsee territory from the Delaware Water Gap to the mouth of the Lackawaxen Creek.
- B Nine Indian Nations August 22, 1749
Deed for lands from the "Kekactany Hills to Maghoniyo Mountain," and between Susquehanna and Delaware on the north side of "Lechawachsein Creek." Land acquired from the Iroquois Indians.
- C New Purchase
September 5, 1768: The end of "Nittany Mountain assumed as a station," per deed made, and surveys not usually made north thereof.
November 5, 1768: Deed at Fort Stanwix, commonly called the "New Purchase," extending from northeast to southwest corner of Commonwealth. Land acquired from the Iroquois Indians.
- D Last Purchase
October 23, 1784: Deed explaining the boundary at Fort Stanwix and Pine Creek, declared to have been the boundary designated by the Indians, commonly called the "Last Purchase." Land acquired from the Iroquois Indians.
December 21, 1784: Deed declaring Lycoming to be the boundary.
January 21, 1785: Deed at Fort Stanwix and Fort McIntosh for the residue of the lands within the Commonwealth, made October 23, 1784, and January 21, 1785. Land acquired from the Iroquois Indians.

The information given above about the treaties or purchases by which the land comprising Northeastern Pennsylvania was acquired from the Indians is from Genealogical Map of the Counties, Compiled and Prepared in the Bureau of Land Records, 1933 (Eighth Edition, 1978).

3. Shortly after 1750, Thomas and a man named Willis were killed by the Indians. Thomas was a Baptist. This information about Thomas was brought out by George P. Ross in a paper read by him on Pioneer Day, at a session of the Wayne Baptist Association, held at Aldenville, Wayne County, in late August, 1921.
4. From the History of South Canaan, compiled and edited by Kurt A. Reed, and presented by him at Old Canaan Day, September 2, 1973, we learn (p. 4) the following information about the early schools of South Canaan:

"It is probable that the first school maintained in the township was started by Jonathan Nickerson in a portion of Hans Ulrich Swingle's house, in 1812. Prior to this, several classes were taught by the pioneers who could find time to instruct three or four neighbors' children that came when weather, roads, and household duties permitted. Nickerson School was kept up for several months and had an attendance of twenty pupils. Soon after, there was a school near Shaffertown (Varden) in a log house about three quarters of a mile above Shaffer Mill. Miss Lucy Goodrich taught here."

The next school established in South Canaan was the Stone Jug School. For more information on this school, see the text of the present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

In his History of South Canaan (p. 4), Kurt A. Reed names the nine one-room schools that came into existence after the Stone Jug School. Those schools are:

- Box School (located on the Tannery Road)
- Curtis School (located on the Bannon Road, toward Waymart)
- East School (located on the top of the East Canaan Hill, just above the cemetery)
- Frisbie School (located near the Stone Jug School)
- Hemlock School (located between South Canaan and Varden)
- Layton School (located on the road to Honesdale from South Canaan Corners, near the Cliff home)
- Lerch School (located at South Canaan Corners, presently Brunk's Garage)
- Spangenberg School (presently Alton Van Sickle's home)
- Union School (located at the foot of Salem Mountain)

"All of these schools," Kurt A. Reed reports (p. 4), "were kept up by the township until they were consolidated in 1938 into the South Canaan Consolidated School. Later, seven townships (Lake, Waymart, Hamlin, Canaan, South Canaan, Sterling, and Clinton became Western Wayne Jointure."

Photographs of the Box School, the Hemlock School, the Lerch School, and the Spangenberg School are in the Reed Photograph Archive, South Canaan, PA.

From a Souvenir Card (6" X 3 5/8") of the Stone School, Simon, Wayne County, Pennsylvania, presented, in 1896, to Harley Reed (a photograph of whom is attached to this card; card presently in the Reed Document Archive, South Canaan, Wayne County), we learn the names of the pupils, directors, and teacher of the Stone School at Simon, as well as the name of the County Superintendent of Schools, in 1895-1896.

The pupils of D. M. Wells, teacher of the Simon School in 1895-1896, are as follows: Mattie Frisbie, Nellie Vansickle, Bertha Swingle, May Beers, Blanche Swingle, Myrtle Clunnard, Effie Frisbie, Martha McKinney, Arvilla Swingle, Eva McKinney, Ella Vansickle, Bessie Beers, Edna Swingle, Gertie Beers, Bessie Cope, Mary Cobb, Ethel Robinson, Mabel Beers, Vergie House, Dean Swingle, Frank House, Oren Beers, Garfield McKinney, Anson Beers, Harley Reed, Delbert McKinney, Cornelius Reed, Howard McKinney, Ora Vansickle, Frank Clunnard, Frank Cope, Alton Vansickle, Herold Frisbie, Alton, Cisco, Nathan Swingle, Fred Vansickle, Walter Reed, Friend Williams, Charles Vansickle. The Directors of the Simon School in 1895-1896: H. Rockwell, John Beers, John Rock, J. F. Lee, Julian Swingle, Jessup Brooks. The Wayne County Superintendent of Schools in 1895-1896 was J. H. Kennedy.

On this Souvenir Card are the following three texts:

"Let fate do her worst, there are moments of joy,
Bright dreams of the past, which she cannot destroy,
Which come in the night time of sorrow and care,
And bring back the features that joy used to wear."
Moore.

POPULAR EDUCATION THE POWER THAT MOVES THE WORLD

"Ah me! those joyous days are gone!
I little dreamt till they had flown,
How fleeting were the hours."

5. Nine of the original shares of in the Waynesville School Society are in the Reed Document Archive: Numbers 3 and 4—purchased by David Freeman; Numbers 8, 9, and 10—purchased by Robert Hosmer; Numbers 16 and 17—purchased by John Fobes (the first Justice of the Peace of Canaan Township, Wayne County; Fobes wrote his own school books, one of which, written about 1825, is presently in the Reed Document Archive); Number 27—purchased by Thomas Starkweather; Number 29—not issued.
6. From Blackman (p. 527), we learn the following information about other schools in Montrose: "(Of other schools, Miss Harriet Conner taught early over Raynor's store. A French and English select school was taught in 1828, by Mrs. B. Streeter. Courses of lessons in English grammar, and also lessons on the German flute had been given by different gentlemen; in the mean time, Wentworth Roberts taught in the Bowman House.)"

From a notice that was published in the NORTHERN PENNSYLVANIAN on September 12, 1835 (Volume IV, No. 25, p. 3, cols 4-5) we learn that a select school was opened by Charles Morely in Dundaff, Susquehanna County, in 1835. That notice is reprinted herebelow:

SELECT SCHOOL.

CHARLES MORLEY.
Dundaff, Sept. 12, 1835,—tf.

7. At the beginning of the 1834 session, Samuel Breck was named Chairman of the Committee on Education of the Senate and secured the appointment of a Joint Committee of both houses to work out a bill for a general system of education. Breck was named Chairman of the Joint Committee and is credited with having written most of the 1834 Law.

The importance of Dutch thought and practice with reference to public schools, not only in Calvinistic New England but also in Quaker Pennsylvania, is pointed out by Wickersham and Pauline Wolcott Spencer. In The Contribution of Connecticut to the Common School System of Pennsylvania by Spencer (Lancaster: Press of The New Era Printing Company, 1915, pp. 6-9), Spencer states:

The Dutch, although the first comers to Penn's frontier province, were numerically unimportant; nevertheless they represented the nation which earliest of all the European states is held to have made literacy common to all, even the peasants, and to have established a system of public schools. Guicciardini, the Florentine historian, is said to have stated that before 1540 the peasants in Holland could commonly read and write their own language, and that free schools, supported by public taxes, were the subject of legislation at various times during the sixteenth century. From an earlier date the Dutch were interested in the public control and support of education, and a number of cities maintained schools. Salaries of the schoolmasters were sometimes paid from the town treasury, sometimes from church funds sequestered from the church orders at the Reformation. Owing to the many religious differences and to the attempt on the part of the Calvinists to dominate the state, religious and secular authorities worked against each other. By the middle of the seventeenth century throughout the country, both cities and rural districts were provided with schools of various grades, controlled and often supported by the public secular authorities. The children of the poor were taught gratuitously. Girls appear to have been admitted to the elementary schools with the boys, although excluded from the privileges of higher education.

The view has been frequently advanced that Holland furnished to both Calvinistic New England and Quaker Pennsylvania the ideal of a public school system. Wickersham says (p. 4)—"It was during their twelve years' sojourn in Holland that the Pilgrim Fathers obtained the germs of that system of education which has made New England so famous in our educational history; and it was in Holland, too, almost certainly, that William Penn learned those broad principles of educational policy that are embodied in the first Frame he constituted for the government of his Province, and that he endeavored to have incorporated in laws for the benefit of the people."

8. The five counties of Northeastern Pennsylvania that were organized after 1834 are: Monroe County, organized April 1, 1836; Wyoming County, organized April 4, 1842; Carbon County, organized March 13, 1843; Sullivan County, organized March 15, 1847; Lackawanna County, organized August 13, 1878.

9. The first county superintendents and their salaries are as follows:

Bradford County	Emanuel Guyer	$500.00	per year
Sullivan County	Richard Bedford	50.00	"
Luzerne County	John W. Lescher	500.00	"
Carbon County	Joseph H. Siewers	400.00	"
Monroe County	Lewis D. Vail	300.00	"
Pike County	Ira B. Newman	100.00	"
Wyoming County	Cornelius R. Lane	150.00	"
Susquehanna County	W. Richardson	350.00	"
Wayne County	John F. Stoddard	500.00	"
Columbia County	Joel E. Bradley	300.00	"

Lackawanna County was not yet established in 1854, the year in which this law was passed.

Speaking of salaries, listed below are the average salaries paid to the public school teachers of Pennsylvania in eleven different years in the period 1836-1900:

year	average salary per month
	Men	Women
1836	$13.34	$11.96
1850	17.20	10.15
1854	19.25	12.03
1855	22.15	12.48
1857	25.05	18.69
1859	27.12	16.11
1866	34.34	26.31
1871	41.04	32.86
1876	39.76	33.60
1881	33.86	29.03
1900	44.25	37.74

10. The $50,000 donated to the State by the Pennsylvania Railroad was given to assist in paying bounties to volunteers after the failure of the Peninsula Campaign in 1862, and pending a call from the Government for 300,000 additional men. It could not, at that time, be accepted for the purpose, owing to a want of the necessary authority from the Legislature of the Commonwealth.
- Wickersham reports that more teachers, in proportion to their numbers in the population, entered the army during the Civil War than any other profession or class of people in the State. By 1864, it was estimated, more than 3,000 teachers had become soldiers (nearly one-half of all the male teachers in the State at that time).
11. The following homes or primary schools were contracted with by the State to receive orphans: Northern Home, Philadelphia; Orphan Asylum, Pittsburgh; Soldiers' Orphan Home, Pittsburgh; Pittsburgh and Allegheny Orphan Asylum, Allegheny City; Home for Friendless, Allegheny City; Children's Home, Lancaster; Farm School, Zellenople, Butler County.
- The following advanced schools were contracted with by the State to receive orphans: Paradise, Lancaster County; McAlisterville, Juniata County; Strasburg (Mt. Joy), Lancaster County; Quakertown, Bucks County; Orangeville, Columbia County.
- The following new schools were organized under the acts of the legislature of 1865, 1866 and 1867: Andersonburg, Perry County; Bridgewater, Bucks County; Cassville, Huntingdon County; Chester Springs, Chester County; Dayton, Armstrong County; Harford, Susquehanna County; Lincoln Institution, Philadelphia; Mansfield, Tioga County; Mercer, Mercer County; North Sewickley, Beaver County; Phillipsburg, Beaver County; Uniontown, Fayette County; Titusville, Crawford County; White Hall, Cumberland County; Jacksonville, Centre County; Loysville, Perry County; Emmaus Orphan House, Dauphin County; St. Paul's Orphan Home, Butler County; Church Home, Pittsburg; Children's Home, York; Wilkesbarre Home, Luzerne County; Womelsdorf Home, Berks County; Rochester Orphan Home, Beaver County; St. James' Orphan Asylum, Lancaster; Episcopal Church Home, Philadelphia; Orphans' Home, Germantown; St. Vincent's College, Philadelphia; St. John's Asylum, Philadelphia; Catholic Home, Philadelphia; Industrial School, Philadelphia; Pennsylvania Training School for Feeble Minded Children, Media; Nazareth Hall, Northampton County.
12. One of the early schools of Clinton Township, Wayne County, is the one that was established in Curtis Valley, at the Curtis Homestead, Intersection of Route 296 and Route 297. On June 15, 1976, the Curtis Homestead was placed on the Pennsylvania Inventory of Historic Places (see letter of June 29, 1976, from William K. Watson, Acting Director, Office of Historic Preservation, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, William Penn Memorial Museum, Box 1024, Harrisburg, PA 17120, to Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis, R. D. # 1, Waymart, PA 18472; letter in collection of Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis).
- In 1976 a list of 100 Wayne County Historical and Bicentennial Sites was published in The Wayne Independent (Thursday, May 27, 1976).
- Number 43 in that list (p. 15) is OLD CURTIS HOMESTEAD. The following information is there given about the Old Curtis Homestead:
- The old Curtis Homestead was built in 1819, by Capt. Levi Bennet, for John Griswold, father of Francis Griswold, who, for many years kept what was called "The Cold Water Tavern," the name coming from the never-failing spring of cold water supplying the tavern. Water from the mountain spring still flows to the Homestead in 1976. Louisa Griswold, daughter of Francis, married Henry B. Curtis in 1851, and from that time the property was known as the Curtis Homestead. The present occupant is Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis, whose husband, Hobart Curtis, was a grandson of Henry B. Curtis and Louisa Griswold Curtis. The old Belmont and Easton Turnpike, better known as the North and South Turnpike, was opened in 1812. Cattle drovers traveling the road stopped overnight at the "Cold Water Tavern" using the barns to shelter their stock. P. P. Bliss, composer of sacred songs, was a guest at the "Curtis Homestead" where he held a musical convention and also attended a revival service at Clinton Center Baptist Church. Noting the people were hesitant in accepting Christ, he went from the meeting to the house of Judson Curtis, near Aldenville, where he was staying for the night, and wrote the hymn "Almost Persuaded."
- The following item about the Curtis Valley School--about which more will be said in future issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA--was published in The Wayne Independent of April 4, 1878 (Volume I, No. 9, p. 3):
- North Clinton

- Organist, H. Curtis; Violinist, Henry Loomis.
- The farces, dialogues and music, were all excellent in their way, and the teacher well repaid for her labor. It is understood that the proceeds of the exhibition are to be appropriated towards the purchase of a dictionary for the school.
- A. Listener.
13. The following biographical sketch of James Russell appears in Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania (New York and Chicago: Chapman Publishing Co., 1897, pp. 960-961):
- JAMES RUSSELL was the eldest son of John and Christina (Anderson) Russell, born in Ayrshire, Scotland, in June 1815. During the Summer of 1840 the family emigrated to the United States, locating first at McAlla City in Clifford Township, Susquehanna County, Pa. Within seven weeks after their arrival in this country the father died, and the eldest son was called upon to take his place as manager of the family affairs. In the Spring of 1841 the family purchased a tract of land, partly cleared, near Crystal Lake, in the Township of Fell, where the family home was erected and maintained until the death of the widowed mother, in March 1861. In the year 1847 James Russell purchased the farm property that still bears his name, and the first day of January, 1851, witnessed his marriage to Margaret Locke of Carbondale. Ten children were born to them, six daughters and four sons, of whom three sons, James A., ex-mayor of the city of Carbondale; George M., William A., and three daughters, Mrs. S. S. Jones, Jeanette L., and Jennie M., are still living.

Few men have enjoyed the confidence of their fellowmen in such an eminent degree as James Russell did during his lifetime. He served the district in which he lived continuously from 1849 as school director and treasurer of the township. He was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace in 1851 and re-elected at the expiration of each term, without opposition. He served three terms as supervisor of the township and was an ardent advocate of good roads and public improvements generally. He was a thorough-going business man, methodical, tireless and scrupulously honest in all his dealings. With him public office was accepted with all its responsibilities; he never shirked a duty, nor feared public criticism. He believed in doing right, and did it. He was always a busy man, and managed to accomplish by methodical work what would have been impossible without systematic planning. He was a scientific farmer, and his lands were tilled to secure the largest and best crops. His farm stock was kept up to a high standard. He was progressive and secured at once the labor-saving implements of agriculture, for he was always of the opinion that the best of everything was none too good, to help lighten man's burdens.

Mr. Russell was public-spirited, generous, always ready to assist those in need, and that promptly. In politics he was an ardent, old-school Democrat; his patriotism was never questioned and in the public campaigns he took an active part. He was enterprising and his efforts were not confined to agricultural pursuits.

For a number of years he operated the Fall Brook Colliery and the delivery of the Delaware and Hudson coal in the city of Carbondale. All his undertakings were successful, for the reason that he was in no sense a speculator, but holding firmly to the law that "men must earn what they call their own." This, and all his opinions upon matters appertaining to the daily life were formed from practical observations and experience. He was in no sense a theorist, but eminently practical, controlled by a high sense of duty to his Maker, and a tender regard for his fellowmen. His death occurred May 12, 1872.

Margaret Gillespie Locke, the wife of James Russell, was born January 1, 1833, in Scotland, and died December 31, 1904, in Carbondale, PA. She is the older daughter of Jeanette Gillespie (born 1799 in Dumfries, Scotland; died June, 1872, in Carbondale, PA) and George Locke (born and died in Scotland). In April, 1847, Margaret Gillespie Locke came to Carbondale from Scotland. She arrived in America with her mother, Jeanette Gillespie, and her sister, Jeanette Hume Locke. When they arrived in Carbondale, they stayed with John Gillespie Murray (Jeanette Gillespie's son by her first marriage, to a Mr. Murray), who had arrived in Carbondale long before his mother and two half-sisters arrived (John Gillespie Murray came to America with his maternal grandparents, John Gillespie and Jeanette Hume), and established a home at 35 River Street in Carbondale (see 1851 Map of Carbondale). At 35 River Street, Carbondale, PA, on January 1, 1851, Margaret Gillespie Locke and James Russell were married. The bride was given in marriage by her half-brother, John Gillespie Murray.

James Russell and Margaret Gillespie Locke were the parents of ten children: 1. John Murray Russell (born 10-24-1851, died 04-11-1885; married Isabel E. Wedeman on 10-25-1882); 2. James Anderson Russell (born 04-29-1853, died 07-13-1929; married Viola Kenyon Rivenburg); 3. Margaret Gillespie Russell (born 04-13-1855, died 03-02-1930; married Samuel S. Jones on 01-16-1877); 4. Christina Anderson Russell (born 05-17-1857, died 02-07-1864); 5. Jeanette Locke Russell (born 12-29-1859, died 02-06-1864); 6. George McClelland Russell (born 02-21-1862, died 04-30-1926; married Lydia Spencer); 7. Christina Anderson Russell (born 08-12-1864, died 02-18-1881); 8. Jeanette Locke Russell (born 10-29-1866, died 04-22-1963); 9. Jane Martha Russell (born 12-03-1868, died 01-30-1954); 10. William Anderson Russell (born 09-30-1871, died 02-05-1958; married Ora Esmarilda Loomis on 04-10-1907).

14. In the "Historical Souvenir" (published in 1901 by The Evening Leader) of which Eleanor Jones speaks, the Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute is situated at the corner of Church Street and Salem Avenue. In Murphy (p. 221, p. 434), as well, the Carbondale Academy and Lackawanna Institute is situated at the corner of Church Street and Salem Avenue.
15. In January, 1980, Donald Walter Powell undertook--with the gracious permission and cooperation of Miss Ann Muldoon, Librarian, Carbondale Public Library--the project of having microfilmed the newspaper holdings of the Carbondale Public Library. At press time, over 14 volumes of various nineteenth-century newspapers, all of which were published in Carbondale, have been microfilmed. In forthcoming issues of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA we will report to our readers the specifics of this historically important project.
16. Janet Locke ultimately became a teacher in the public schools of Carbondale, PA. In 1857 she was the teacher of School No. 2 in Carbondale. She is the younger daughter of Jeanette Gillespie (born 1799 in Dumfries, Scotland; died June, 1872, and George Locke (born and died in Scotland). She was born in Dumfries, Scotland, in 1837, and came to America in April, 1847, together with her mother and her sister, Margaret Gillespie Locke. When they arrived in Carbondale, they stayed with John Gillespie Murray (Jeanette Gillespie's son by her first marriage, to a Mr. Murray), who had arrived in Carbondale long before his mother and two half-sisters arrived (John Gillespie Murray came to America with his maternal grandparents, John Gillespie and Jeanette Hume), and established a home at 35 River Street in Carbondale (see 1851 Map of Carbondale). In 1854, 1855, 1856, Janet Locke was a student in the Phelps Institute, Carbondale, PA. This we know from the inscriptions in several of her books, presently in the Library at the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, PA.

Three of those books are:

Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839-1900 (Part I)

From the Editors:

In this - and in the following (Vol. II, No. 1) - issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA we examine studio photography in the eleven counties of Northeastern Pennsylvania from 1839, when photography first came to America in the form of the daguerreotype, to 1900, when the photographic process had become so simplified and so perfected that inexpensive and easy-to-operate Kodaks were mass produced, a phenomenon which spelled the end of the heyday of the professional studio photographer and which signaled the emergence of the do-it-yourself amateur photographer.

Initially the plan was to include all of the eleven counties in this issue, but the amount of material which presented itself was so great that all of it could not be presented within the format of a single issue of this quarterly and so the material had to be divided. Luckily the material itself suggested a natural division. The material uncovered for Lackawanna County equaled in size that of the material for the other ten counties, and since Lackawanna was the last of the eleven to be established, it was a simple enough matter to decide to do the first ten counties in this issue and to do Lackawanna all by itself.

Only one difficulty has resulted from the division into two parts of a text which was written to be presented in one part, and this difficulty is the result of the fact that a great many photographers included in this directory began their careers in one city and then moved to another, or opened a second studio in another. When the county they either moved into or out of does not happen to be Lackawanna County then there is of course no problem in following the career of a particular photographer as he moves from one location to another. But when the county they moved into or out of does happen to be Lackawanna County, then there is the difficulty that the Lackawanna County section will not be presented until our next issue, August 20, 1980. Regrettably, this difficulty could neither have been foreseen, nor remedied.

No bibliography is found in this issue. It will be included in Volume II, Number 1, the Lackawanna County issue. Books and articles are cited here in an abbreviated form. The complete reference will be found in the following issue.

In the August 1981 issue (Volume III, No. 1) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA the topic of Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839-1900, will again be taken up. In that issue the number and the nature of the works which have survived by the studio photographers whose identities, years of activity, and studio locations are chronicled in the pages which follow and in Volume II, Number 1, will be discussed in detail. In this and the August 20, 1980 issues, the dis-

The photographers included in this directory of studio photographers in northeastern Pennsylvania in the nineteenth century are arranged by the county in which they worked. Within each of the individual counties the photographers are presented in alphabetical order. The counties are presented in chronological order, according to the date of their establishment.

1. Luzerne	September 25, 1786	7. Monroe	April 1, 1836
2. Wayne	March 21, 1798	8. Wyoming	April 4, 1842
3. Bradford	February 21, 1810	9. Carbon	March 13, 1843
4. Susquehanna	February 21, 1810	10. Sullivan	March 15, 1847
5. Columbia	March 22, 1813	11. Lackawanna	August 13, 1878
6. Pike	March 26, 1814

cussion of specific photographs by individual photographers is given only when the internal evidence (printed names and addresses on the mounts) and the external evidence (hand-written inscriptions on the mounts) of any particular photograph enables us to pin down a specific fact (photographer's name, year of activity, location of a studio) which would otherwise be unavailable. Naturally, within the upcoming year many new nineteenth-century studio photographers from the region will emerge, and naturally, much additional information concerning the years of activity and the studio locations of those already given will emerge. In Volume III, Number 1, that information will also be given.

Acknowledgments

For their help in the preparation of this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, the author, Donald Walter Powell, would like to thank the following individuals and institutions:

1. Edith A. Gardner, Carbondale, PA., and Gertrude Snyder, Danville, PA., for their perpetual and cheerful help in tracking down people and information, and for their "tea and sympathy" in the times of great weariness and the times of great joy
2. Anne Muldoon, Librarian, and the staff - particularly Mrs. Romayne Prince - of the Carbondale Public Library, for their cheerful courtesy and assistance while I worked at the Library reading the Library's large holdings of nineteenth-century newspapers

3. Kurt Reed, Dean and Mae Reed, Hartford and Ronna Reed, all of South Canaan, PA., and Burlin B. Abbey, Honesdale, PA., for their abundant, enthusiastic and gracious help in locating information about and photographs taken by studio photographers of Wayne and Lackawanna Counties
4. Rev. William P. Lewis, Executive Director of the Lackawanna County Historical Society, Scranton, for allowing me such complete freedom with the use of the extensive collection of primary and secondary source materials (books and photographs) in the collection of the Society, particularly its large holdings of city directories, and for so generously sharing with me his great personal knowledge of early photography and of the references to regional photographers in published sources
5. Verna Varcoe, Waymart, PA., Ruth Hawkins Stephens, Jermy, PA., Larry and Josephine Downey, Endwell, NY., Margaret Winter, Jermy, PA., Lois Norton Curtis, Waymart, PA., Dwight and Margaret Rude, Waymart, PA., for allowing me to study and to photograph their personal collections of family photographs; I am particularly grateful to Margaret Winter for her introduction to Mrs. Stephens
6. Alice Curtis Lund, Seelyville, PA., and Melbourne, FL., and Dorothy Rodgers, Fairless Hills, PA., for bringing to my attention several books and articles on regional history and studio photography
7. Mrs. Rebecca Colville, Carbondale, PA. for allowing me to study and to photograph several nineteenth-century photographs in her collection, and for sharing with me her knowledge of studio photography in Carbondale

8. Edna Munson Wiltz, Waymart, PA., for allowing me to examine a copy of the Wayne County Herald of March 22, 1866, in her personal collection
9. The staffs of the Hazleton Public Library, Hazleton, PA., of the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale, PA., and of the Albright Memorial Library, Scranton, for making their facilities available for me, and for helping in locating references
10. Paul and Olga Danchak of the Ivy Antique Shop, Carbondale, PA., for "keeping an eye out" for me for examples of the work of regional studio photographers
11. Stan Pratt, C. P. P., Honesdale, PA., for his inspired help with information about the life and work of three Wayne County photographers - William Doud, Sidney Joseph Tyler, and Louis Hensel, and for his guided tour down Main Street, Honesdale, during which tour he pointed out to me the former locations of four nineteenth-century photography studios
12. Fred W. Kost, Star Route, Honesdale, PA., for showing me prints taken by Sidney Joseph Tyler during Tyler's stint in Indian Territory (I.T.), Oklahoma
13. Gordon Bieberle, Editor of The Professional Photographer, for granting me permission to reprint herein the article entitled "Sidney Joseph Tyler - Photographer" by Stan Pratt and Laurie Theobald that was published in The Professional Photographer of March 1975 (Vol. 102, No. 1954, pp. 53-55)

Introduction

WHY COMPILER A DIRECTORY OF STUDIO PHOTOGRAPHERS?
WHY STUDY AND COLLECT OLD PHOTOGRAPHS?

1. because we are interested in looking at our "kind" (in looking at pictures of our self)

HARPER'S NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, No. CLXIV. - January, 1864. - Vol. XXVIII. p. 274 (in the section of the magazine entitled LITERARY NOTICES)

Mr. ANTHONY TROLLOPE and Miss MARY E. BRADDON are among the most popular English novelists of the day. Neither rank among the great masters of diction whose works will stand the test of time; but both write tales which, in their day, find a larger circle of readers than those which posterity will recognize as a possession. Except in the one fact that both write readable books, they have nothing in common. The latest novel of each - Mr. Trollope's Rachel Ray and Miss Brandon's John Marchmont's Legacy - stand side by side as the newest numbers of "Harper's Library of Select Novels." Mr. Trollope constructs a story of very common materials: ordinary kind of people, any one of whom any body might know. He has no startling incidents in his plot. Nobody kills any body, runs away with somebody's wife or husband, commits any very flagrant violation of any one commandment of the Decalogue. He hates surprises. To be sure, in "Orley Farm" the very estimable Lady Mason has committed a forgery, the detection of which, by all rules of the novelist's art, should have been kept for the last chapter; but Mr. Trollope is uncomfortable until he has made her confess, before the middle of the story, that she had committed the act, which, under the circumstances, was almost justifiable. This mystery happily disposed of, Mr. Trollope goes on to construct a pleasant story. So in Rachel Ray the persons and characters are of the most common order. We are interested in them and their fortunes just as we are in a volume of photographs, because we know that they must be likenesses of living persons. --- Miss Braddon proceeds on a very different plan. She must have a story; this story must involve crime, usually a series of crimes interlinked together. She has usually given at least one case of murder and bigamy to each story, to say nothing of plots, fraudulent conspiracies against purse and person. In John Marchmont's Legacy we are spared the murder and the bigamy, but have in their stead more than the usual allowances of ordinary rascality. -- Both these novels are quite readable, each in its own way.

2. because we are interested in discovering where we came from (our roots)

Cal turned his head toward Lee, and his face had lost its tightness. He smiled, and Lee knew he had not fooled the boy entirely. Cal knew now it was a job--a well-done job--and he was grateful.

Lee went on, "That's why I include myself. We all have that heritage, no matter what old land our fathers left. All colors and blends of Americans have somewhat the same tendencies. It's a breed--selected out by accident. And so we're overbrave and overfearful--we're kind and cruel as children. We're overfriendly and at the same time frightened of strangers. We boast and are impressed. We're oversentimental and realistic. We are mundane and materialistic--and do you know of any other nation that acts for ideals? We eat too much. We have no taste, no sense of proportion. We throw our energy about like waste. In the old lands they say of us that we go from barbarism to decadence without an intervening culture. Can it be that our critics have not the key or the language of our culture? That's what we are, Cal--all of us. You aren't very different." "Talk away," said Cal, and he smiled and repeated, "Talk away."

GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN. / 'Tis hard to break the tender cord / When love has bound the heart, / 'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words; / "We must forever part." / Dearest loved one we must lay thee / In the peaceful grave's embrace, / But thy memory will be cherished / 'Till we see thy heavenly face.

DIRECTORY OF STUDIO PHOTOGRAPHERS

How many studio photographers were there in northeastern Pennsylvania between 1840 and 1900?

In the directory of ten of the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania which follows, 164 photographers are listed.

But this is not the entire picture. For although I have in my search for studio photographers combed the many city and county directories which have been available to me, and gone through the "old photographs" in a good number of junk and antique shops, I have not been to all libraries and historical societies in the region, and I have not even been able to locate and check all of the directories issued by even the major cities and towns in the region. And so surely many, many photographers have escaped my net, and the actual number of photographers who worked in these ten counties of northeastern Pennsylvania in the six decades, 1840-1900, may be as much as twice the number I have identified.

William C. Darrah, in his book THE WORLD OF STEREOGRAPHS (Gettysburg, Pa.: W. C. Darrah, Publisher, 1977) has arrived at some interesting statistics concerning the number of photographers working in the United States between 1860 and 1890. Darrah has examined "more than 25,000 cartes de visite" photographs by photographers who operated before 1890 and has compiled a checklist of names, locations and dates of operation. He has identified a total of 3784 carte de visite photographers. Darrah is interested in determining what percentage of these photographers made stereographs, and in his analysis of his data he provides a wealth of statistics. He says (p. 237): "... for all practical purposes, every photographer between 1860 and 1890 produced cartes de visite and this period coincides with the most active period of stereography 1859-1885."

Let me just reproduce some of Darrah's statistics:

Only names and images that could be dated within an accuracy of two years are included in the tabulations which follow. A photographer who operated in more than one decade is counted only once, being placed in the period in which his stereographs - if any - were principally issued.

Breakdown of decades:

Number of cdv photographers	Number who produced stereos	Percentage
1860's 1178	304	25.8
1870's 1192	816	45.0
1880's 814	126	15.4
Totals 3784	1246	32.6

My data on Pennsylvania photographers are more extensive than for any other state:

682	235	34.4%

Darrah's statistics indicate that roughly one third of the carte de visite photographers also produced stereos, and he has also arrived at some very interesting statistics concerning population and geography, concluding that "the smaller the community the more likely the photographer produced stereographs."

The 5 largest cities in the U.S.	403	89	22.8%
The 15 largest cities in the U.S.	716	183	25.5%
50 cities, population 12,000-30,000	1252	394	31.4%
100 towns, population 2,500-8,000	709	363	51.2%
50 villages, population 800-1,500	134	71	53.0%

And surely there is much more specific information to be found about the photographers who I have discovered, particularly about the earliest and latest date of their activity. The information given here is, therefore, the extent of my knowledge at the moment. But, just as surely as I will continue actively working with historical materials concerning all aspects of the history of northeastern Pennsylvania, just as surely will I find new photographers and more information concerning the photographers who are listed below, information which will enable me to refine the rough outlines I have here drawn. If you - my reader - can help in this refining process - either by telling me of material I have not uncovered, or by correcting information which I have here given, I shall be most grateful to you. Just write to me, Donald W. Powell

Where and what is given in this directory?

NAME (last name, first name, initial)

Other names in this directory, where more information is given about the subject of the entry.

first documented record:

This is the earliest year I have found or have been able to infer for the activity of the photographer in the city under discussion.

last documented record:

In many, many instances I have left this blank because the working life of the photographer has gone on much beyond the turn of the century, the approximate cut-off date for this directory. In some instances this date is given.

location of studio:

Earliest year in which he is found at the location. Ideally, all of the locations at which the photographer worked will be known, and the first year of his residence in each particular location will be given with each new address. And ideally, too, we assume that the photographer stayed at previous address until the next address is given. But without a year-by-year record of the movements of every photographer, such a precise list is impossible to make. The aim here is to chart the motions as accurately as can be determined at the moment.

Sources of information

1. City and county directories (the predecessors of the modern phone book--both white and yellow pages)

Particularly useful sources of information about when the studio photographers were working and about where they were working are the many county and city directories which began to be published in the second half of the nineteenth century. These directories tend to have rather long titles and these titles are cited in full only in the bibliography (see Part II of this history of Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839 to 1900, in the August 1980 issue - Volume II, No. 1 - of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA). In the text below, only an abbreviation of the full title is given.

In the text of the directory which follows are reproduced a great many citations from the city and county directories. In all cases, these citations are reproduced as they appear in the directories. The observant reader will notice, therefore, an enormous variety in punctuation and in the forms of abbreviation in these citations. For example, in the Lackawanna County section, notice the number of ways Lackawanna Avenue is abbreviated and punctuated. There must be a dozen forms for it. Although these countless forms could be standardized, they have not been, since the form of the original - and thus the flavour of the historical period - is more important, and desirable than any contemporary homogenization.

Marked differences occur between nineteenth-century terminology and classification and that in practice today. In order to avoid any confusion in using the city and county directories and at the same time to present a preliminary survey of the trades and professions which existed on the fringes of studio photography, a directory of these related trades and professions is given in Part II of this history of Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839 to 1900, in the August 1980 issue - Volume II, No. 1 - of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

2. Photographs themselves

I have inspected at first hand photographs by a great many of the photographers included in this directory. Many of these photographs contain much vital information about correct name, location, past location, type of work the photographer does, predecessor at the location.

3. Newspapers, display ads, editorial remarks

4. Interviews with living persons who knew studio photographers included in this directory.

ANONYMOUS

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

A great many studio photographs survive in private collections, in historical societies, and in antique and junk shops in northeastern Pennsylvania which surely must have been taken by studio photographers from the area, but which have no marking whatsoever to indicate who the photographer was, where the studio was, or when the photograph was taken. Many photographs of this kind can be assigned an approximate date on the basis of the costume of the portrayed, or on evidence supplied by the type of photograph or mount.

The identities of the photographers who took the pictures and of the persons whose likenesses they are, are, for all intents and purposes, lost forever.

The above pair of cabinet photographs of an unidentified man and an unidentified woman by an unidentified photographer well illustrate the type. Neither photograph bears any identifying inscription or printed name and address of any kind. Both photographs were surely taken by the same photographer because both are mounted in the identical highly unusual way: although both photographs are mounted on cards of standard cabinet photograph size (4 3/16" X 6 1/2"), both photographs themselves are much larger than the typical photograph mounted in the cabinet format. Typically the bottom inch of the front of the card is reserved for the printed name and address of the photographer. Here both photographs come right down to the base of the card. And the front of both cards is the identical color: pinkish-white. All that can be said about the identity of the photographer and the identity of the sitters is this: since both photographs came to the Ivy Antique Shop, Carbondale, Pa., from a house in Jermy, Pa., the photographer and the couple may have been from Jermy, Pa., or from the vicinity of Jermy, Pa.

Luzerne County

N.B.: On August 13, 1878, a large portion of Luzerne County became independently organized as Lackawanna County, and therefore all pre-1878 photographic activity in what is now Lackawanna County should - strictly speaking - be found in this section on Luzerne County. But - for the sake of keeping the situation as uncomplicated as possible - it is not found here, but there - under Lackawanna County. Let the reader keep this fact in mind when he is dealing with the material for Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties.

Note: The date 1862 comes from the back of a cabinet photograph, in the collection of the author, printed thusly:

Kellmer,
Photographic Art Studio
No. 13 West Broad St.
Hazleton, Pa.

Established in 1862.

West Broad Street

On the basis of the fact that in the earliest printed reference that I have found mentioning a location - from 1873 - the location is given as "West Broad St.," I am assuming that when P.
Kellmer first set up business, he was located at the spot where he is located eleven years later.

--1873 New Gallery of Art, West Broad St.

The following bit of biographical information about P. Kellmer was published in History of Luzerne, Lackawanna and Wyoming Counties, Pa.,
...., 1880, p. 248 C

P. Kellmer, formerly a blacksmith, now a photographer in Hazleton, was born in Germany, November 28th, 1842. His wife was Miss S. Rippel, of Hazleton.

The J. Will Kellmer, above, is surely the son of P. Kellmer. Cabinet photographs printed with the address "From Kellmer's, Hazleton, Pa.," or "Kellmer, Hazleton, Pa." are not uncommon.

10. Mahorn, Alfred

In the biography of S. Y. Richards, given in Richard Edwards, Industries of Pennsylvania, Statistical and Trade Review...., 1881, p. 277 (Pittston), we learn the following:

The photographic art is well represented in Pittston by Mr. S. Y. Richards at his galleries at the
S. W. Cor. Main and Water Sts. These galleries were first opened to the public by Mr. Alfred Mahorn, who conducted them for some time, and was succeeded by the present proprietor in 1877 who has since that time made many improvements in them, and added many new features.

John W. Powell, crayon portrait, 16" X 20", collection of Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa. (gift of Arthur Zimmerman, Clarks Summit, Pa., August 18, 1978), photographic copy print by DWP.

Mary Howell Powell, crayon portrait, 19 5/8" X 15 3/4", collection of Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa. (gift of Arthur Zimmerman, Clarks Summit, Pa., August 18, 1978), photographic copy print by DWP.

The carte de visite portrait of Mary Howell Powell, below, is printed on the base of the front with the name and address of the photographer: Beacham, Plymouth, Pa. The crayon portrait of Mary Howell Powell, above, bears no printed address giving the name of the photographer who did it, but we can see that it is an enlargement of the Beacham carte de visite and thus certainly also done by Beacham. The crayon portrait of John Powell, above, the husband of Mary Howell Powell, bears no printed or written photographer's name or address, but it was almost certainly done by the same photographer for the following very good reason. When the Mary Howell Powell carte de visite and the John W. Powell crayon portrait were given to the present owner, the same donor also gave to the present owner the crayon portrait of Mary Howell Powell, and another crayon portrait of John W. Powell, identical to the one illustrated above but just slightly smaller in size (19 5/8" X 15 3/4"). Since a set of crayon portraits of the couple are of identical size, they were most certainly at one time in identical frames, and since the original carte de visite portrait of which the crayon of Mary Howell Powell is a blow up is identified by photographer, then we may safely assume that the same photographer, Beacham, Plymouth, did all three crayon portraits as well.

The following brief biography of J. W. Powell was included in the Richard Edwards, Industries of Pennsylvania, Statistical and Trade Review, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Pittston, Plymouth, Carbondale, Kingston, (Philadelphia: Richard Edwards, Editor and Publisher, 1881), p. 284 (Plymouth):

J. W. POWELL — Grocer and Provision Dealer, Main St.

The grocery and provision stand, now conducted by Mr. Powell, was originally started by John Herbert, who sold the business to the former in 1879. The store is well stocked with fresh family groceries in the usual variety, provisions, butter, eggs, lard, salt and smoked meats and fish; flour and feed, and all the foreign and domestic fruits, vegetables, etc., generally found in stores of this class, with a line of tobacco and segars of the most desirable brands. Mr. Powell is a native of South Wales, born in 1841, came to America in 1863, settled at Providence, Pa., and worked in the coal mines at that place until he left there and came to Eckley, Pa., in 1866, and to Plymouth in 1870, where he was employed again in the mines until 1879. In 1878, he was elected to Council from the third ward. He was also made Register for the fifth ward. In addition to his other business, Mr. Powell is at the present time running a local express between Plymouth and Wilkes-Barre. He is a very successful and popular business man.

S. Y. RICHARDS, Photographer, S. W. Cor. Main & Water.

The photographic art is well represented in Pittston by Mr. S. Y. Richards at his galleries, at the
S. W. Cor. Main and Water Sts. These galleries were first opened to the public by Mr. Alfred Ma-horn, who conducted them for some time, and was succeeded by the present proprietor in 1877 who has since that time made many improvements in them, and added many new features. A specialty with Mr. Richards is retouching photographs, in which branch of the business he has achieved a high reputation. He is also largely engaged in taking pictures either in card, Imperial and life-size--in fact, everything pertaining to a first-class gallery. He is thoroughly proficient in the art, and has received many flattering encomiums for the skill, taste and judgment displayed by him in making a perfect likeness. He was born near Danville, Montour Co., and served a regular apprenticeship in the profession and since he has been in business in Pittston has secured a large, substantial, and liberal patronage.

Curiously, this biography makes no mention of S. Y. Richards' Carbondale years. S. Y. Richards was working as a photographer in Carbondale from 1871-1875, and if the "tone" of a display ad he placed in 1871 is any indication, we may safely assume that he was at work in Carbondale before 1871. See his name in the Carbondale section.

Considering the fact that William C. Darrah has in The World of Stereographs, p. 237, estimated that between 1860 and 1890 the total number of photographers who operated in the United States and Canada was in excess of 40,000, it is not surprising that one female studio photographer should have shown up in northeastern Pennsylvania.

Beaumont Newhall, The Daguerreotype in America, 1976, p. 65, notes that Reese and Company, of 289 Broadway, claimed to have inaugurated the mass-production system of making daguerreotypes and notes the great rivalry - if not outright animosity - between the established daguerreotypists and "picture factories" like Reese's. Newhall then adds:

Professor Reese was a man of marked prejudice. That he should attack the established daguerreotypists with violent sarcasm is understandable, but his unchivalrous blast at the few lady daguerreotypists then active is not so readily explained. "Much has been said, written and whistled with regard to females being capable of taking daguerreotypes...it's all gammon...we shall yet believe that female Daguerreans are out of place, pants or no pants."

Richard Edwards, Industries of Pennsylvania, Statistical and Trade Review..., 1881, p. 283

G. W. COLLAMER - Artist-Photographer, Corn Exchange Building, 3rd Story.

The photographic establishment of Mr. Collamer is undoubtedly the largest of its kind in Luzerne County, and occupies the entire third story of the Corn Exchange Building at the corner of Public Square and South Main Street, comprising nine handsome rooms. The parlors are elegantly furnished and contain countless specimens of a high order of Photographic Art, evincing the cultured taste, the trained eye, and the artistic and mechanical skill which are all indispensable requisites to success in this line at the present day. Years ago when this Art was in its infancy, mechanical accuracy was the principal requirement in most instances, but competition suggested and made necessary, many improvements, and those who were incompetent or careless were left behind. The subject of this brief sketch has studiously kept pace with the progress of the day, and his patrons find their orders executed in a style worthy of the most celebrated establishments in the country. The true idea of a picture is an artistic reproduction, not a mechanical copy, and the life, tone, and delicacy of finish, the exquisite harmony of color, the light and shade, the lines, distinct without hardness, all combined to make Mr. Collamer's pictures admired by all who afford themselves the pleasure of a visit to his rooms. He is a native of Montpelier, Vermont, but established himself in Wilkes-Barre fifteen years ago, three years of which time his place was closed on account of ill-health. With that exception his experience here has been prosperous, while affable manners and honorable dealing have created for him an unusual degree of personal popularity.

Successor to Collamer & Stearns

L. E. Stearns was in business by himself in Wilkes-Barre from at least 1875 (see his name in this section), and Collamer - if this Collamer is George W. Collamer - was in business in Wilkes-Barre in 1873 with Condit - Condit & Collamer (see the firm in this section).

In all the text that follows I assume that "Collamer" = George W. Collamer.

Condit & Collamer

Condit & Collamer were in business together previous to this instance of their partnership in Wilkesbarre in 1873. They - under the name COLLAMER & CONDIT - were in business in Honesdale in 1857 (see the discussion of them in the Honesdale section). Since Collamer got first billing in the name of the partnership in Honesdale, we may assume that he was either there first or that he had more capital to invest in the firm. Previous to his Honesdale partnership with Condit, Collamer had a Honesdale partnership with Pughe - COLLAMER & PUGHE.

What are we to make of the fact that in Wilkesbarre the partnership is named Condit & Collamer? Did Condit leave Honesdale and move to Wilkesbarre and establish himself there, and did Collamer then later move to Wilkesbarre and become a partner with the already-established Condit?

From a biography of G. W. Collamer, published in 1881, we know that G. W. Collamer "established himself in Wilkes-Barre fifteen years ago" - 1866 (see the biography above).

C. F. COOK. - Photographer, 118 S. Main St.
One of the most successful photographic establishments in Wilkes-Barre is that of Mr. Charles F. Cook, at 118 South Main Street. This location is one of the best in the city, being on one of the great arteries of local commerce, and readily accessible to all. The proprietor commenced business here twenty-three years ago, at the corner of Public Square and West Market street. Later, he removed thence to the north side, and was there when the Rebellion broke out. He closed his place of business, and joining Co. D, 143d Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, serving in the 3d Brigade, 1st Division, 1st Army Corps. He served faithfully--was disabled near Fredericksburg, Va., in 1863, was honorably discharged, and returned to Wilkes-Barre, where he recommenced business at 112 South Main street, very near his present establishment. His parlors, operating room and residence are on the second floor, the first floor being occupied by a jewelry store. His operating room is 17x40 feet in size, and fully equipped with everything essential to the successful prosecution of his business. Mr. Cook has lived in this place twenty-three years, and was married here, his wife having been Miss Mary E. Dailey of Wilkes-Barre.

Mr. E. B. Headley is conceded to be one of the best Photographers in Luzerne county. He possesses that love for his art characteristic of the true artist, together with the nice perceptions and exquisite taste, implanted by nature and developed by culture, which are so eminently essential to success in this profession. The skill and taste of this gentleman are recognized in a practical manner by the people of Wilkes-Barre, who gave him a very liberal patronage. Mr. Headley was born near Fallsington, Bucks county, but commenced business at his present stand some ten years ago, and has been uniformly successful. His establishment is fitted up with all the necessary paraphernalia, of most modern and improved description, and occupies a space of 22 X 65 feet. Devoted to his art, Mr. Headley mingles but little in public matters, contented with his profession and satisfied to possess the esteem of those who know him.

1. Doud, William

first documented record: 1885

last documented record:

location of studio:

William Doud, in 1900 described as a "skillful and prominent artist of Waymart, Wayne County" (1900, p. 983) after he came back from the Civil War, learned the art of photography in Clifford (Susquehanna County) and in Carbondale (Lackawanna County) and in 1875 began for himself in a wagon (a portable gallery) in Gibson (Susquehanna County). Doud remained in Gibson for 4 years - until 1879, in which year he moved to Waymart, where he was in 1900 still actively engaged in the photography business. The biography of Doud which was published in 1900 is given below in the Waymart section of Wayne County. We reproduce here only the section of that biography which concerns Far View:

With Mall Wells, at Clifford, he began learning photography, serving a six-months apprenticeship, and was later with S. S. Hull, at Carbondale, for four months. He then began for himself in a wagon, at Gibson, Penn., at which place he remained for four years, and in 1879 came to Waymart, where he has since successfully engaged in business. In 1885 he also opened a gallery at Far View, which is located 2,300 feet above sea level.

At some time after 1900, William Doud opened a studio in Honesdale, Pa. See his name in the Honesdale section, Wayne County.

--1912-1941 Afton, Oklahoma

Note: The Pratt-Theobald article cited below says the following about this period in Tyler's life:

Sid married Nettie Eileda Pollack, a school teacher in Wayne County. Then, because of an inborn wanderlust, he closed his local studio and moved to Afton, Oklahoma, where his wife's cousin, Dr. Glen Rutledge was a practicing physician. There he set up a studio and operated it successfully until 1941 when the shortage of materials, caused by World War II, put him out of business.

--1941-1952

Note: The same Pratt-Theobald article sums up the post-Oklahoma life of Tyler:

For a while Sid worked at numerous jobs, including railroading. In 1952, at the age of 76, he retired to his grand-mother's home in Galilee, the place where he had started his career many years before. Though he expressed an interest to do so, he never reopened his Galilee studio. He spent his remaining years enjoying the outdoors and his two favorite sports, hunting and fishing.

I first came across the name Syd Tyler while reading the Summer 1978 issue of Upper Delaware (published at Callicoon, N.Y., 12723, Volume 1, Number 1).

There (on p. 20) a photograph is captioned thusly:

The info on the back says "Photo by Mrs. Syd Tyler." He was the great Wayne County photographer who left thousands of slides recording turn-of-century days, but this is the first indication Mrs. T. got in the act...

At that time I wondered just how "great" Syd Tyler could be if I had never heard of him. More recently, when Kurt Reed, South Canaan, learned of my research on studio photographers of northeastern Pennsylvania for NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Volume I, Number 4, he repeatedly said to me "Stan Pratt has the Tyler negatives." On Saturday, May 3, 1980, Kurt and I went to the Stan Pratt photography studio in Honesdale and at that time, and at a subsequent visit (May 7, 1980) Stan Pratt provided me with all of the information which follows concerning Syd Tyler. It might be said that Stan Pratt has practically single-handedly preserved the photographic remains of Sydney Joseph Tyler, Photographer.

In the March 1975 (Vol. 102, No. 154) issue of The Professional Photographer (pp. 53-55), appeared the following article, entitled "Sidney Joseph Tyler - Photographer" (Copyright 1975 The Professional Photographer. Reprinted with permission.) and written by Stan Pratt and Laurie Theobald.

One morning seven years ago I noticed a gnarled old man who was dressed in clothing of bygone days. He appeared to be studying the portraits behind the glass in my display window with extreme fascination. Thirty minutes later he was still there gazing into the window as though the pictures could revive the past, if only for him.

Curiosity finally got the best of me and I went out to talk with him. During the brief conversation that followed, I learned that his name was Sid and that many, many years before he had been a professional photographer. Through Sid's reminiscing I was given an interesting history of professional photography in the days of flash powder and glass plates. Regrettably, I never had the opportunity to speak to him at any length again.

One day in 1970 I saw Sid's name at the top of a very brief obituary in the local newspaper. For the next few days I gave his passing much thought, wishing that I had found more time to converse with him. I had no idea, however, of the impact Sid was yet to make on my life, nor the role he and his work would some day play in my career.

As time moved on, Sid was all but forgotten until one day one of his heirs called me on the phone. He had found some old photographic equipment in a building on Sid's property, and wanted me to help him sell it.

I found him a buyer for what little equipment was left. This gave me the opportunity to look over the old studio from one end to the other. The many personal and photographic items I found told me much about Sidney Joseph Tyler, the man and the photographer. In one end of the building, which had served as his studio from 1897 to 1912, I found his negative file, hidden beneath a tattered old background. This nostalgic treasure had been concealed for years and consisted of more than 5,000 "Seed Dry Plates."

I purchased the plates from the estate, and moved them to my studio. Once they were stored in a safe place, I began the time-consuming, but rewarding, task of cleaning and printing them. To my dismay I found that the roof in the old studio had leaked and many of the plates were beyond salvage. From those printed I have learned a great deal about Sidney Joseph Tyler and his world.

The study of his photography has given me a much greater insight into my chosen profession. I have discovered that many of the techniques used by Sid in his day-to-day work more than 70 years ago are still very valuable to me today.

Sidney Joseph Tyler--
Man and Photographer

Sid was born April 16, 1876, in Galilee, Pennsylvania. Details about his early life are very sketchy. He was first an apprentice to his uncle, Albert North, an experimental photographer. Along with Sid's interest in the complexities of nineteenth century photography, there appears to have been a passionate absorption with the world in which he found himself: the days of the heroic land-clearing farmer; the stately hemlock forests; the log rafts floating down the Delaware; and the hustle and bustle of rural life which he and his family had been a part of for so many years. All of these left behind an imprint on the community in northern Wayne County which today is known as Tyler Hill.

Emotionally and historically rooted in the period of life in which he found himself, it was inevitable that his early efforts in the photographic art reflect the interest and attachment to the people and scenes around him.

Hensel's Photographic Views of Honesdale and Vicinity Including scenes along the Delaware & Hudson Gravity Road (see "The Keystone Block," under Stearns, E. Honesdale, Terminus of D. & H. RR. and D. & H. Canal, detail of view published in 1890 in L. Hensel's Photographic Views of Honesdale and Vicinity Including scenes along the Delaware & Hudson Gravity Road (see "The Keystone Block," under Stearns, E. J. & Son, below, p. 14), photographic copy print by DWP.

It is in his articulate use of the camera, lighting, posing and other details, and the love of his subject matter that the artistry of Sidney Joseph Tyler is revealed. Prior to Sid's entry into the field of professional photography the great photographers like Matthew Brady labored under tremendous difficulties in the use of the wet plate. In 1871 the introduction of the "dry plate" revolutionized the industry. It was the dry plate that Sid used exclusively for many years. Flexible film was soon introduced, but he refused to use it for years because of inconsistency in quality which marred his striving for excellence.

Sid married Nettie Elleda Pollack, a school teacher in Wayne County. Then, because of an inborn wanderlust, he closed his local studio and moved to Afton, Oklahoma, where his wife's cousin, Dr. Glen Rutledge, was a practicing physician. There he set up a studio and operated it successfully until 1941 when the shortage of materials, caused by World War II, put him out of business.

For a while Sid worked at numerous jobs, including railroading. In 1952, at the age of 76, he retired to his grandmother's home in Galilee, the place where he had started his career many years before. Though he expressed an interest to do so, he never reopened his Galilee studio. He spent his remaining years enjoying the outdoors and his two favorite sports, hunting and fishing. In November 1970 he died at the age of 94, leaving behind a forgotten wealth of photography not to be discovered until almost two years later.

In my brief photographic career I have seen many old photographic negatives destroyed by people who thought that the pieces of glass were just in the way. This fate will not befall the Tyler plates. They hold the mysteries of life and photography of the past, which some how must be shared with the present.

A display of forty 16x20 prints from the Tyler Collection was shown at the Professional Photographers Association of Pennsylvania Convention in Harrisburg last summer. Following the convention the prints were exhibited in the William Penn Memorial Museum in Harrisburg.

Notes:

1. How big a pile is 5,000 "See Dry Plates"?

Stan Pratt recalled (May 8, 1980) that when he removed the plates from the Tyler studio that they completely filled the very large trunk and back seat of Stan's 1969 Plymouth Satellite.

2. As Pratt-Theobald say in their article, Sidney Joseph Tyler "left behind an imprint on the community in northern Wayne County which today is known as Tyler Hill." Sidney Joseph Tyler belongs to the family whose name has given Tyler Hill its name. But just how I can not say. For an introduction to the Tylers of Tyler Hill see Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County..., Second Edition, 1902, p. 128.

3. A word about the Tyler plates.
A full-size glass plate is 6 1/2" X 8 1/2". Tyler's scenics (his landscape views) are mostly full-plate size, although some are half-plate size. Tyler's portraits are all quarter-plate size.

GALILEE (possibly)

1. North, Albert

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

Albert North, experimental photographer, was the uncle of Sidney Joseph Tyler, and Sidney Joseph Tyler learned the art of photography as an apprentice to his uncle. Since Tyler was born and raised in Galilee we may assume that North operated somewhere nearby, possibly in Galilee itself, possibly across the nearby Delaware River in New York state. See the entry for Sidney Joseph Tyler, above.

HAWLEY

1. Foedish, Charles first documented record: July 16, 1857

last documented record:
location of studio:

Charles Foedish is documented in Carbondale from June 4, 1857 until July, 1857, and from what may be read between the lines of a display ad which he placed in the Carbondale paper, The Advance (Vol. I, No. 5, June 18, 1857, p. 3, col. 2), it is clear that he was actively working in Carbondale as an ambrotypist some time previous to June 4, 1857. From an announcement in the editorial column of The Advance of July 16, 1857 (Vol. I, No. 9, p. 2, col. 3), we know where he went when he left Carbondale on July 16, 1857 - Hawley. Here is the text of the announcement placed - at Foedish's request - in The Advance of the 16th:

We have been requested by Mr. Foedish to state that his Ambrotype Saloon will be closed for some time, as he has taken his apparatus to Hawley, so that the people of that locality may have an opportunity of supplying themselves with good likenesses.

Mr. G. Collamer is now at Waverly.

Charles Foedish remained in Hawley for a little over five weeks, and then returned to Carbondale. We know he is back in Carbondale by Thursday, August 27, 1857, because of this announcement which he placed in the Carbondale paper, The Advance (Vol. 1, No. 15, p. 2, col. 7) on that date. The same ad was repeated in Vol. 1, No. 16, p. 3, col. 3).

AMBROTYPES.

Charles Foedish would respectfully inform the citizens of Carbondale and vicinity, that he has returned to his old Gallery on Main Street over Wilsons Auction Rooms where he will be happy to receive all of his old friends and new who may favor him with their patronage.

Carbondale Aug. 27th

After his return to Carbondale in August of 1857, Foedish is recorded there until 1861. But by 1863 he had left Carbondale and was working in Honesdale: he announced to the citizens of Honesdale and vicinity on July 8, 1863, that he had opened a photographic gallery "One door above Hand & Kirtland's Store, (formerly Mr. Carrier's Establishment)."

For Foedish's post-Hawley career in Carbondale, and in Honesdale, see his name under those cities.

Pre-Hawley, he was "extensively engaged in taking landscape and other outside views"

The following information about L. Hensel if from Illustrated Wayne County, p. 126:

L. Hensel, of Hawley, is one of the progressive photographers of the present time. He located in Hawley in 1878, prior to that time having been extensively engaged in taking landscape and other outside views. At first he erected a small portable gallery. Four years later he purchased the site of his present establishment and increasing business compelled him to enlarge his studio, and he erected a building with an operating room, 36 X 19 feet, with a skylight. This establishment he equipped with all the modern improvements in his art. The excellence of Mr. Hensel's work soon procured for him a large patronage which demanded his whole attention and he was obliged to give up the view business which he had continued to follow as he had leisure. Mr. Hensel was the first to publish a series of views of Honesdale, Carbondale, Scranton, Pittston and Wilkesbarre. His views of the now abandoned Delaware & Hudson's gravity and the Pennsylvania Coal Company's gravity railroads are quite famous and in great demand. Many of them appear in this book.

July 19, 1897, Mr. Hensel's establishment and entire contents which represented years of toil and accumulation were swept away by one of the most disastrous fires in the history of Hawley. Nothing but ruins remained where but a short space of time before the main business part of the town had stood. Undismayed by his misfortune Mr. Hensel at once began to rebuild and on Nov. 1st, of the same year, the new studio, one of the largest and finest in the county, was opened to the public.

In the Fine Art store on the first floor will be found a large variety of framed pictures, statuary, vases and novelties, both useful and ornamental, suitable for wedding, birthday and Christmas presents. A book department, second to none in the county, has been added where all the latest works of popular authors may be procured. No visitor to Hawley should fail to visit the Fine Art store.

Mr Hensel has been twice honored by the citizens of Hawley electing him a member of the town council. He is now serving his second term as president of that body.

L. Hensel

Louis Hensel was born in New York City, January 29, 1849, and was a son of Louis and Sewety Hensel. When but two years of age Mr. Hensel's parents moved to Long Island and then to what is now known as Williamsburg, Brooklyn, N.Y. At the age of seventeen Mr. Hensel located in Port Jervis, N.Y., and while at that place engaged in photography, learning the trade. During one of the heavy winter freshets, Mr. Hensel took some pictures of the ice gorge in the Delaware River at that point. The demand for these photographs was so great that he conceived the idea of traveling around and taking a series of views of the various towns. Traveling from Port Jervis to Nanticoke via Hawley, Honesdale, Carbondale, Scranton, Pittston, and Wilkes-Barre, he made views of the towns, landscape and points of interest, which found ready sale. The excellence of Mr. Hensel's work soon procured for him a large patronage.

On June 16, 1875, he married Theresa Gengnagel, of New York City, and in 1878 settled in Hawley. He first erected a small portable gallery, as he was extensively engaged in landscape work in the various towns mentioned above. But four years later purchased the site where his present place of business is located and erected a large up-to-date studio. This building was destroyed in the big fire of July, 1897. But he immediately began a new building which was completed on November 1 of the same year and is his present place of business.

Mr. Hensel, with Daniel Bingham, organized the first fire company in this community, and for a number of years was president of the company. For nine years he was president of the Hawley Council. He has always taken an active interest in all civic matters and was one of the first members of the Chamber of Commerce which sponsored the Centennial.

Mr. and Mrs. Hensel have two sons, Gustave, of Scranton, Penna., and Louis C. of Chicago.

An outstanding example of L. Hensel's published views is L. Hensel, Photographic Views of Honesdale and Vicinity Including scenes along the Delaware & Hudson Gravity Road, Photographed & Published by L. Hensel, (Hawley, Pa.: 1890)

This volume is unusual in format and manufacture and it may be described here:

Between two thick "board" covers---the outside of the front one printed in elaborate gold letters with the word "PHOTOGRAPHS" and the inside of both covers - as well as the outside of the front and rear end paper - covered with white moire silk---twenty five 6 11/16" X 9 7/8", thick paper pages are hinged with cloth (perhaps a fine-grained canvas) and bound with two shoe strings (4 posts). Apparently Hensel himself patented this particular process of book binding; printed on the binding edge of each individual sheet is "PAT APR 4 82." The printed title page is the only text in the volume although each of the photographs illustrated is captioned right on the negative. Each page contains from 2 to 5 original Hensel photographs, each pasted down, and in order to fit all the individual photographs on each page, many unimportant corners of individual photographs are often clipped out in order to allow space for over-lapping photographs. The number of photographs on each page is as follows:

1(4), 2(3), 4(3), 5(3), 6(3), 7(3), 8(3), 9(3), 10(3), 11(4), 12(3), 13(5), 14(3), 15(4), 16(3), 17(5), 18(4), 19(3), 20(4), 21(3), 22(4), 23(4), 24(4), 25(2).

In all, 87 original Hensel photographs.

The only copy I have seen of this splendid book is the one donated by Miss Florence E. Baker, Honesdale, Pa., to the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale.

Curiously, Hensel is not listed in the 1904 North-Eastern Pennsylvania, Hawley Business Directory (p. 204)

HONESDALE

1. Bodie, Joseph A.

first documented record: about 1872 last documented record: still active 1908
location of studio:

--About 1872 Bodie began to learn photography with E. J. Stearns.

The above date is determined from the 1902 biography of Bodie (reproduced below). Bodie was born in 1852 and at the age of 15 years (1867) became a clerk for Hamlin, and Bodie was with Hamlin for 5 years (until 1872) "and then began learning the profession of photography with E. I. Stearns."

In 1872 E. J. Stearns & Son was located in the Keystone Block (see Stearns, below).

"In 1875, he (Bodie) purchased a half interest in the business (the Stearns business) and three years later became sole proprietor." (Bodie biography)

--1878 the former E. J. Stearns gallery in the Weston Building, on Main Street (132 Main Street)

I am at a loss how to precisely interpret interpret this information which comes from the first sentence of the Bodie 1902 biography.

We know that in 1872 Stearns was in the Keystone Block, and we presume that Bodie was a partner and then bought out the Stearns Gallery in the Keystone Block - if my calculation of the dates in the above text is correct - in 1878.

The difficulty is that the same 1902 biography says that Bodie is located in the Stearns Gallery in the Weston building. Did Stearns move from the Keystone Block to the Weston building after 1872, and is that where Bodie became partner and then sole proprietor? Or was the Weston building a part of the Keystone Block? Probably the Weston building was part of the Keystone Block.

There may be some uncertainty about where precisely the Weston building was located, but there is no uncertainty about where the Weston family house was located. The house is now 313 Park Street, Honesdale, and it is now the Stan Pratt photography studio. The house was built in the late 1840's or early 1850's.

The following information about Joseph A. Bodie is given in Illustrated Wayne County (p. 48):

JOSEPH A. BODIE has been the leading photographer in Honesdale since 1878, at which date he became proprietor of the E. I. Stearns gallery in the Weston building, on Main Street. He occupies the whole of the third floor of this double brick structure, in which he does a general photographing business. He has 3500 square feet of floor space, and keeps a choice stock of pictures of every description, suitable for wedding, birthday and Christmas gifts and other uses, frames in regular sizes and made to order. Lately he has added an amateur supply department in which he keeps a complete stock of everything amateurs need. Developing and finishing is also done for the trade. He gives special attention to the enlarging of pictures and the satisfaction given patrons has brought him a large business in that line.

Mr. Bodie was born in Dyberry township, June 20, 1852, and his boyhood days were spent on his father's farm and in attendance at school. At the age of fifteen years he became clerk for H. B. Hamlin, who conducted a store at the corner of Main and Twelfth streets. He was with Mr. Hamlin five years and then began learning the profession of photography with E. I. Stearns. In 1875, he purchased a half interest in the business and three years later became sole proprietor. Mr. Bodie is prominently identified with church and society work in Honesdale. He has been treasurer of Honesdale council Royal Arcanum for fifteen years and choir leader in the Presbyterian church about the same length of time. He is also an elder, a member of the session of that church, and of Freedom Lodge of Odd Fellows. On Jan 1st, 1899, he was chosen superintendent of the Seelyville Sunday school.

A biography of Joseph A. Bodie's brother, Edwin R. Bodie, was published in 1900--Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania..., 1900, p. 1649--and this biography records much information about the parents and ancestors of Joseph A. and Edwin R. We reproduce here the first two paragraphs of this biography of Edwin R.:

EDWIN R. BODIE is a leading representative of the business interests of Prompton, Wayne county, where he is successfully engaged in general merchandizing, and is also efficiently serving as justice of the peace.

Mr. Bodie is a native of Wayne county, Penn., born in Dyberry township, March 17, 1857, and is a representative of one its honored pioneer families, his parents being Charles F. and Jane P. (Snell) Bodie. (The name was originally spelled Bode.) His paternal great-grandfather was a native of Holland, and about 1820 emigrated to America, locating first in Philadelphia, whence he removed to Shohola, where he worked in a glass factory for a time. He then came to Wayne county, and spent the remainder of his life upon a farm about one and one-half miles from Bethany. On coming to this country he was accompanied by the grandparents of our subject, Joseph and Caroline (Fox) Bodie, who were also natives of Holland, and died in Dyberry, Wayne county. In early life the grandfather engaged in glass-blowing, but later following farming in Dyberry township. The father of our subject, who was a carpenter by trade and worked for tanneries, died of typhoid fever in October, 1865, at the age of thirty-six years; the mother, who was born December 31, 1833, now makes her home with her children. They are: Joseph A., a photographer, of Honesdale; Mary, wife of G. W. Strongman, a manufacturer of gloves in Honesdale; and Edwin R., the subject of this sketch.

The first time Joseph A. Bodie, Jr. is mentioned as a photographer in a Honesdale city directory is in 1906-1907. In this directory his address is given in this way:

Thanks to the complete printed photographer's address on the back of the card, and to the contemporary inscription identifying the sitter on the back of the card, we know who is portrayed, when he was portrayed, and by whom he was portrayed.

A portrait of W. W. Fletcher's mother, Matilda Balcom Squire, is illustrated on p. 6 of Volume I, Number 1 of this quarterly.

I am not entirely certain what the two numbers in the address indicate, but I would guess that possibly the buildings along Main Street were re-numbered.

In a photograph entitled "Business Section, Main Street, Honesdale," which was published in PICTURESQUE WAYNE, Volume V, 1908, 830 Main Street, in the Reif-Spettigue building, is clearly visible. On the right hand end of the third floor of this building can easily be seen a sign reading "BODIE, Photographer..."

This precise location - the third floor of the Reif-Spettigue building - was occupied certainly by one and possibly by two Honesdale photographers before Bodie, Jr. took up his residence there some time after 1902. The photographer who was certainly there is George Ward Robbins, the photographer who was very likely there is H. T. Dolmetsch. For the documentation concerning the occupancy of this location by these men, see their names, below.

Were it not for the 1906-1907 directory one might easily assume that the sign on the front of the Reif-Spettigue building in the 1908 photograph was a sign for the Joseph A. Bodie studio. But, in the same 1906-1907 directory, Joseph A. Bodie, the father of Joseph A. Bodie, Jr., is listed at his own location, 706 Main Street.

Presumably young Bodie learned the business while growing up in his father's studio. Further research will have to be undertaken in order to determine when young Bodie was born, and when he first set up on his own in the Reif-Spettigue building. All that we may say now is that it was after 1902, the year in which George Ward Robbins was still located in the third floor at the location.

--after 1912

The Reif-Spettigue building burnt in 1912, and presumably at that time young Bodie moved elsewhere. I have not researched the Bodie's on into the twentieth century, but I have uncovered the following information concerning the Bodies, and I offer it here so that it may be recorded.

Curiously, and amusingly, a billhead for THE BODIE STUDIO, dated Jan. 2, 1915, in the collection of the Wayne County Historical Society, made out to Miss McGraw does not mention the address of THE BODIE STUDIO. Presumably everyone knew where it was. Here is the information it gives:

To J. A. Bodie, Jr.
Photographs - Portraits Enlarged
Frames, all kinds and sizes
Eastman's Kodaks Pictures Finished
Films, Papers, Etc. for Amateurs

The bill - for $8.00 - is itemized, marked "Paid 1-2-15," and signed "Jos. A. Bodie Jr."

Everyone, well practically everyone, in the Honesdale area has heard of the Honesdale photographer named Bodie, but few, very few, are aware that there were two Bodies - father and son, both named Joseph. Old Bodie died, and young Bodie continued in business, and the last location of a Bodie studio in Honesdale was in the third floor of the building on the east side of Main Street, at the corner of 7th Street and Main Street, the building which today is occupied on the ground floor by Parker's Pharmacy.

At least one photograph exists which shows a Bodie sign on the north wall of the "Parker's Pharmacy" building. This photograph is in the collection of the Wayne County Historical Society, in a scrapbook that belonged to Edwin Calloway. On page 5 of this scrapbook is a photograph captioned thusly:

This photograph was taken from the hill behind the old Independent building, looking Southeast and on the upper part of the side wall of the building - on the east side of Main Street - in which today Parker's Pharmacy is located on the ground floor may be seen the following sign:

The current - 1980 - telephone book gives the following address for Parker's Drug Store: 649 Main.

An undated advertising hand-fan of cardboard, painted to look like it is a palm leaf fan, in the collection of Burlin B. Abbey, Honesdale, Pa. is inscribed thusly:

The saga of the fate of the photography studio left vacant by the death of Joseph A. Bodie, Jr., was related to the author recently (May 8, 1980) by Stan Pratt, C. P. P., Honesdale.

The studio hadn't functioned since the 1950's, and the studio was still intact until 4 or 5 years ago (until about 1975), although the sky-light had been cemented over. Still there until about 1975 were the darkroom equipment and picture frames. But not there in 1975 were the camera equipment and the negatives. Where did the camera equipment and negatives go? To Haggerty's Art Studio, who bought out the Bodie photo studio. Presumably the Bodie negatives - and the E. J. Stearns negatives too, since Bodie the father bought out Stearns (half interest in 1875, the other half in 1878) - were part of the paraphernalia which was transferred from Haggerty's Art Studio (600 Main Street), to Jennings Photography, when Jennings bought out Haggerty in 1962 or 1963.

A revolving stand for cameras and glass negatives that once belonged to one of the Bodies, Joseph A. Bodie, or his son, Joseph A. Bodie, Jr.

On the first day of a tag sale of the effects of Judge Clarence E. Bodie, Golf Hill, Honesdale, Fred Kost, Burlin Abbey and Kurt Reed discovered in the garage at the Judge Bodie home a "big wooden box type affair" used for the storage of nuts and bolts, and none of them knew just what the object was. It was a beautifully made piece of furniture, with big doors and narrow little doors, each with a large porcelain handle, and the doors themselves were each panelled. On the second day of the sale the executors, in order to get rid of everything, substantially lowered the price of the object, and it was bought by Fred Kost. When the object was being loaded into the trunk of the Kost station wagon a hole was discovered by Kurt Reed in the bottom. Kurt suggested that the four-wheeled post, also in the Bodie garage, went with the wooden object. The four-wheeled post was shoved into the hole and it fit perfectly and the object was stood upright and with the aid of the post the wooden object revolved beautifully. Fred Kost knew what the object was. The box itself was about chest high (about 4 1/2 feet high) and about 3 feet square. On each side of the box was one large door and a narrow door which went from top to bottom. Behind the large door was a large compartment with an adjustable shelf (the height of the shelf within could be adjusted) for a camera. Behind the tall door were lots of little compartments with grooves for the storage, on their edge, of glass negatives. As one rotated the wooden box the large compartments alternated, one on top, the next side on the bottom, and so forth. The camera spaces were located left-of-center on each side.

Presumably the stand came from the last Bodie studio in Honesdale, on the third floor over the present-day Parker's Pharmacy building. The stand was empty (it contained no negatives and no cameras) when it was bought by Fred Kost. Incidentally, Kurt Reed does not recall seeing any negatives or photographs for sale at the Judge Bodie auction.

G. W. Collamer - in partnership with Patton, Collamer & Patton - is first mentioned as a daguerreotypist working in Carbondale in a display ad, dated June 1, 1853. He is recorded in Carbondale in the fall of 1853, and in the spring of 1854, too, but in July of 1854, William F. Underwood announced that he had purchased the former Collamer & Pughes daguerrean gallery. There is no record of G. W. Collamer from the time of the sale until July 16, 1857, when we learn from a notice in an editorial in the Carbondale paper that Mr. G. Collamer is then at Waverly, presumably there taking likenesses. We do not know how long Mr. G. Collamer remained in Waverly, but we may speculate that he spent a month, perhaps the summer, there, and then moved on to somewhere else.

The somewhere else that he moved on to may have been back to Honesdale, for in December of 1857, a photographic firm by the name of Collamer and Condit opened for business in Honesdale. I have not yet been able to determine whether the Collamer of this partnership is Mr. G. W. Collamer, but I see no reason to doubt that it is.

Here is the ad which the firm of Collamer & Condit wrote on December 9, 1857, and ran frequently in the Carbondale paper, The Advance, beginning in December of 1857, and continuing at least through the following July (this same ad appeared in Vol. 1, No. 30, December 12, 1857, p. 2, col. 7; Vol. I, No. 31, p. 3, col. 3; Vol. 2, No. 7, July 17, 1858, p. 1, col. 2).

FINE ARTS GALLERY

COLLAMER & CONDIT would respectfully inform the public that they have opened a New Photograph and Ambrotype Gallery, first door below Hamlin's Store, and directly opposite Col. Seeley's Mansion, where all kinds of Pictures will be taken in the best style of the Art, not inferior to the productions of any Establishment of the kind in the State. Having had a practical experience in all the improved methods of producing Pictures, they feel confident that all who may desire a good picture will not be disappointed at their hands. A large sky and side light has been built for the purpose, upon an improved plan, superior to any other Gallery in Northern Pennsylvania.

Photographs, Ambrotypes, Melainotypes, Ferotypes.

In fact, Pictures in accordance with every recent improvement. To all we would say--give us a call, no pains will be spared to render our Gallery attractive in every feature.
Honesdale, Dec. 9, 1857 30-tf

The next reference I have uncovered which might concern the firm of Collamer & Condit in Honesdale is this notice which appeared in the Carbondale paper, The Advance (Vol. 2, No. 8, p. 2, col. 5, on July 24, 1858, the summer after the firm of Collamer & Condit was established the previous December. Again, I am not certain whether the Mr. Collamer mentioned in the notice is the same as Mr. G. W. Collamer or whether either of these is the same Collamer of Collamer & Condit. But, for the moment, I am assuming that he is. Here is the notice -

--On the 26th of March, 1788, at Goshen, Ct., three sisters were born at one birth. They are still living, at the mature age of 70 years. One is Mrs. Grennell, the widow of Michael Grennell, late of Clinton, in this county. She now resides in Rushville, Susquehanna county. Another is Mrs. Luddington, widow of Theron Luddington. She lives in Texas township, in this county. The third is Mrs. Bushnell, wife of Pope Bushnell, Esq., of Dyberry township, Wayne county. They were daughters of Gideon Hurlburt, by his wife, whose maiden name was Amanda Beach.--They are all hale, hearty old ladies. We doubt if another similar circumstance can be found in this country.-- Honesdale Dem.

Mr Collamer has a Photograph of the three sisters, executed in his usual excellent style, which can be seen by calling at his rooms.

This notice might refer to the Collamer & Condit of Honesdale, and since the three ladies mentioned in the notice lived over "Honesdale way" and since the notice was originally published in the Honesdale Dem., and since Collamer & Condit was located in Honesdale, these three facts might lead one to assume that the picture was taken by Collamer & Condit in Honesdale. But, speaking for the opposite side of the coin are these facts:

--G. W. Collamer is known to have been taking likenesses in Carbondale in July of 1854 (see Collamer in the Carbondale section).

--When the "borrowing" from the Honesdale Dem. was printed in the Carbondale paper, the editor added a bit of information of his own, and this bit of information asks the Carbondale readers to call at the rooms of Collamer to see the picture.

Mr. Collamer has a Photograph of the three sisters, executed in his usual excellent style, which can be seen by calling at his rooms.

Certainly the editor can mean nothing other than "the rooms of Mr. Collamer in Carbondale."

The Curtis Grandchildren, mounted studio photograph, approximately 8" X 10", photograph by U. G. Ridgeway, Main St., Honesdale, Pa., collection of Dwight and Margaret Rude, Waymart, Pa., photographic copy print by DWP.

In the center are Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold Curtis (portraits of whom are given on p. 6 of Volume I, Number 1, of this quarterly).

Perhaps Collamer had a studio in Honesdale where the picture was taken and perhaps he had the picture (or an impression of it) in his studio in Carbondale.

--1861-1862 George W. Collamer, Main Street All doubts about whether the "Collamer" of Collamer & Condit is George W. Collamer, and all doubts about whether this George W. Collamer had a studio in Honesdale after 1858 are quickly dispelled by the following listing in The North-Eastern Counties Business Directory, 1861---2, p. 14 (Wayne County Business Directory, Daguerreotypists)

George M. Reynolds, Editor and Proprietor of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, in his column in Volume V, Number 16, of the paper, Friday morning, December 2, 1853, p. 2, col. 1, took special notice of some recent developments in the daguerreotyping activity of Carbondale's G. W. Collamer, and it is in Reynolds' remarks that we learn about the daguerreotyping activity in Honesdale of Collamer & Pughe.

We perceive by the Honesdale Press that our esteemed citizens, Pughe and Collamer, have purchased the Sky-light Gallery formerly occupied by Leroy Hancock, and are prepared to furnish pictures of the good looking people of that Borough. We consider it fortunate for Honesdale to have such an Artist as George W. Collamer locate among them, for he is a "decided character" in his profession, and we doubt not but what the emanations from these gentlemen's Gallery, will have a tendency to elevate the standard of taste in the fine arts, and diffuse a more chaste and correct idea of the beautiful art of Daguerreotyping. We hope the community will improve the opportunity, as it is the intention of these Gentlemen shortly to make a professional tour through the principal cities of Europe. Success attend them. Their Gallery in this city is located opposite Bronson's Hotel.

8. Doud, William

first documented record: after 1900

last documented record:

location of studio:

William Doud began his photographic career in Clifford (Susquehanna County), then continued his apprenticeship years in Carbondale (Lackawanna County) with S. S. Hull, then set up in business on his own in Gibson (Susquehanna County), then moved to Waymart (Wayne County) where he actively worked from 1879 until at least 1900. In 1885 he opened a gallery at Far View, a place not more than a mile from Waymart. In 1900 a biography of Doud was published in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania..., 1900, pp. 983-984, and it is from this biography that we learn all of the above information. In this biography - reproduced in full under Doud's name in the Waymart section (Wayne County) - no mention is made of Doud's studio in Honesdale, and so we may safely assume that Doud opened his studio in Honesdale after 1900. Curiously, Doud is not mentioned in any of the city or county directories I have seen and I have looked at many in which he should be mentioned.

Were it not for the "energetic historical sleuthing" of Kurt Reed, South Canaan, Pa., which led to my introduction to Stan Pratt, C. P. C., Honesdale, Pa., I would not have learned of the existence of William Doud, and were it not for the conversation which Stan Pratt and I had on May 8, 1980, I would never have stumbled upon the biography of William Doud which is published in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania..., 1900, pp. 983-984, nor would I have learned of the existence of the Doud studio in Honesdale. Stan Pratt is a professional photographer with a studio in Honesdale, and since many members of the community are aware of Stan's interest in early photography, he has accumulated a wealth of information about - and thousands of glass negatives from - several nineteenth and early twentieth century Wayne County photographers.

Stan Pratt has a couple hundred glass plate negatives from the former Doud studio on Main Street, Honesdale. Doud's work was exclusively portraits and today (May 8, 1980) Pratt characterized these portraits as "with severe, stern expressions and with composed, rigid poses."

The location of the former Doud studio was the third floor of the building which today has on its ground floor several shops, 941-949 Main Street. Several years ago Bruno P. Silvestri, Public Accountant and Tax Consultant, bought the building (941-949; Silvestri's offices are now located in 941-945) and in the course of business transactions between Pratt and Silvestri, Stan learned from Silvestri of the presence of the negatives in the third floor of the Silvestri building. Stan went to the third floor and investigated and Silvestri gave Stan the glass plate negatives. The third floor of the building was the top floor, and since in those days the photographers used North light (windows on the North side of their building) to take their photographs, the studio where the Doud portraits were taken would have to have been on the North side - (the Main Street side) - of the present Silvestri building.

Honesdale, Pa., Main Street, in 1880 or 1881, cabinet photograph, 4 3/16" X 6 1/2", printed on the back with the following address: J. A. Bodie & Co., Honesdale, Pa., collection of Kurt Reed, South Canaan, Pa., photographic print by DWP.

James Abram Garfield (1831-1881) had been elected senator from Ohio and was to begin his term of office in 1881, and went to the national Republican convention in Chicago in 1880 as the head of the Ohio delegation. Though the Ohio delegation was pledged to vote for John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury in the Hayes administration, Garfield made a speech placing Sherman's name before the convention, and the speech received a great ovation. On the thirty-sixth ballot, Garfield himself received the nomination. For his vice-presidential running mate Garfield chose the number two man in the New York political machine, Chester A. Arthur.

Suspended on a fish net so that the wind can blow through it and not whip it, is a commercial banner of the Republican party. Flanking an eagle with upraised wings which stands on an American flag, are two medallion portraits of the Republican candidates, Garfield on the left, Arthur on the right. The text of the banner reads:

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.
For JAMES A. GARFIELD, of President. Ohio

For CHESTER A. ARTHUR of Vice-Pres't New York

FOR CONGRESS C. C. JADWIN

Who was C. C. Jadwin? He was the owner of Jadwin's Drug Store, visible at the lower right corner of the stereograph. Running between the first and second floor of the building can be seen the shop sign - "C. C. Jadwin." And what is located on the second floor of the Jadwin building - look at the sign hanging on the front of the second floor:

"Republican Headquarters." A close inspection reveals that on this sign are also two medallion portraits - on the left Garfield, on the right Arthur. C. C. Jadwin obviously was a staunch Republican. The Jadwin portion of the street banner moved - no doubt it blew in the wind - when the lens of the Bodie camera went off. The "For Congress C. C. Jadwin" is blurred though still readable.

Kurt Reed is able to describe precisely the location shown in this view. The banner stretches across Main Street from the Jadwin Building (the Jadwin Building burnt in the mid 1950's; on the site today is the Rea & Derick Drug-store) to the wooden building which was the predecessor of the former Wayne Independent building. On the second floor of the Jadwin building was a large hall; in 1880-1881 the hall was used for the Republican Headquarters, later on the hall served as the GAR post, and in more recent times the hall was used for dances. The third floor of the Jadwin Building was apparently only ever used as storage; "years ago" Burlin Abbey visited this third floor and found there many Civil War uniforms and Civil War guns. Kurt Reed says that Bodie must have taken the picture from the second floor of the old gravity depot (the old Erie freight house).

It would be interesting to learn whether Jadwin won his election. James A. Garfield was elected but died in office: four months after he was elected he was shot by a disappointed office-seeker and two months later he died.

9. Dolmetsch, H. T.

first documented record:

last documented record: died before 1897

location of studio:

From a biography of George Ward Robbins which appears on p. 145 of the Second Edition (1902) of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County... (biography of Robbins given in full under Robbins, below), we learn the following about the period of Dolmetsch's activity as a photographer in Honesdale and about the possible location of his studio:

George Ward Robbins was born in Philadelphia, Pa., April 7, 1870, and was educated in the schools of Bordentown, N. J.... At the age of fifteen years he began the study of photography and was employed in a number of the prominent studios in that city (Philadelphia). In 1894 he opened a gallery of his own and three years later he came to Honesdale and purchased the studio of the late H. T. Dolmetsch. Since that time Mr. Robbins has doubled both the stock and the equipment of his plant, and his business has had a steady growth. He occupies the third floor of the Rief Red Stone building...

If I am deciphering the information from this extract of the Robbins biography correctly, it is saying this: the H. T. Dolmetsch studio was located in the top floor of the Reif-Spettigue building. For the discussion of the possible confusion in the literature over one or two "red stone front" buildings in Honesdale, see the discussion under George W. Robbins below. For a discussion of the occupant of the third floor of the Reif-Spettigue building after the Robbins period, see Joseph A. Bodie, Jr.

And a mounted studio portrait of James Russell Jones (born, October 11, 1877 - died, March 23, 1965) as a young man - about 18 - in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa., is printed at the base of the front: "H. T. Dolmetsch, Honesdale, Pa."

Before he opened his photographic gallery "One door above Hand & Kirtland's Store, (formerly Mr. Carrier's Establishment)" in Honesdale in July of 1863, Charles Foedisch had worked extensively in Carbondale - from at least June 4, 1857, (and almost certainly before that) until at least Feb. 9, 1861 (and possibly after that time) and for about five weeks in the middle of the Summer of 1857 he also is documented in Hawley.

Here is the text of the announcement Foedisch placed in the Wayne County Herald, Honesdale, Penna. on July 8, 1863 (the impression of this ad that I have seen was published on p. 4 of the March 22, 1866 issue of the paper):

I have so far been unable to determine the location of the Hancock "Sky-light Gallery." All that I do know about it is that it was bought by the photographic firm of Pughe & Collamer. And my research on Pughe & Collamer has not yet turned up the location of their (and Hancock's) studio in Honesdale.

George M. Reynolds, Editor and Proprietor of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, in his column in Volume V, Number 16, of the paper, Friday morning, December 2, 1853, p. 2, col. 1, took special notice of some recent developments in the daguerreotyping activity of Carbondale's G. W. Collamer, and it is from Reynolds' remarks that we learn that Leroy Hancock had a daguerreotyping gallery in Honesdale.
We perceive by the Honesdale press that our esteemed citizens, Pughe and Collamer, have purchased the Sky-light Gallery formerly occupied by Leroy Hancock, and are prepared to furnish pictures of good looking people of that Borough. (For the rest of this editorial, see Collamer & Pughe, above.)

Since Leroy Hancock is documented in Scranton on September 15, 1854, we may guess what took place: he sold his Honesdale "Sky-light Gallery" and moved to Scranton. For his career in Scranton, see below.

RIDGEWAY 548 Main St. Photographer Honesdale, Pa. The Latest Designs in the Art. Amateur and Professional Supplies For Sale. Ground Floor Studio.

In Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County..., 1902, p. 152, the following biography of Ulysses Grant Ridgeway was published, and accompanying the biography are two pictures, one of Ridgeway himself and one of the exterior of U. G. Ridgeway's residence. Since Ridgeway designed and constructed buildings, we may safely assume that Ridgeway designed and built his own very commodious residence.

ULYSSES GRANT RIDGEWAY was born at Glenwood, Susquehanna county, Pa., in 1869. His father, Uriah Ridgeway, was born at Fishkill, N.Y., and came to Glenwood about 1859. He served three years in the Civil war, and now resides at Clifford at the age of 77 years. The mother of our subject, Barbara Hurd, died in May, 1871, a consistent member of the M.E. church. Two sons were born to them: one resides on the homestead; the other came to Honesdale in 1888, and followed carpentering for a time, studied architecture and did contracting and building. He designed and constructed some of the best buildings in Honesdale, one of which is the Red Stone Front, erected in 1896. While disabled for several months by a railroad accident, he studied photography and successfully conducted a gallery at White Mills for a year. He then removed to Honesdale and erected his "Ground Floor Studio" nearly opposite the City Hall. It is the only ground floor studio in the county and he had been established in business but a short time when he found it necessary to enlarge it. He always has a fine line of frames and pictures reproduced from old masters in stock. Careful attention is given to enlarging pictures in crayon, water color or pastel. His work is his best recommendation.

On August 29, 1894, he was united in marriage with Sadie E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter R. Collum, of Honesdale, and one son, Homer Grant, now in his sixth year, has been born to them. Mr. Ridgeway is a member of the Presbyterian church, Freedom Lodge of Odd Fellows, Heptasophs and Amity Social Club.

If the Red Stone Front which Ridgeway designed and which was erected in 1896 is the same building as the Reif-Spettigue building which was erected in 1894 and which had a red stone front, then Ridgeway designed the building in which Robbins - and possibly H. T. Dolmetsch before Robbins, and Joseph A. Bodie, Jr. after Robbins - had his photographic gallery. See the discussion of the two "red stone front" buildings under G. W. Robbins, below.

The building in which Ridgeway had his "Ground Floor Studio" nearly opposite City Hall, Honesdale, still stands. It was pointed out to me on May 8, 1980 by Stan Pratt, C. P. P., Honesdale, Pa. It is a modest one-story building, located on the East side of the 900 block of Main Street, between 9th and 10th Streets. The building, now Dandy's Hero Shop, 937 Main Street, is located across the street from and a few buildings South of City Hall. In the Summer of 1968 - so Stan Pratt informed me - the front of the building was redone and beneath the facing was found a Ridgeway sign.

A great many large mounted views taken by Ulysses Grant Ridgeway have been preserved. Many are found in the collection of the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale. One of these deserves special notice here because a detail visible in the lower left hand corner of it may indicate that Ridgeway had a studio on Main Street in Honesdale other than the "Ground Floor Studio" nearly opposite City Hall. This large (9 1/2" X 7 9/16") photograph was donated to the Wayne County Historical Society by John T. (?) Bussa, Honesdale, on May 17, 1944. It is inscribed on the back - "Main St - Honesdale - bet 5th and 6th St. Old Home Week - 1909 - Parade." It is embossed on the matt at the lower right corner of the front: "U. G. Ridgeway, Main St., Honesdale, Pa." In the lower left corner of this photograph is a Ridgeway building (with the round-arched window on the second floor) and a small kiosk on the sidewalk. The building still stands, and the front of it bears - in the glass in the top of the round-arched window - the following inscription:
1904 RIDGEWAY BUILDING, QUALITY MOTOR CARS, SALES & SERVICE 1904

Ridgeway sold Studebaker cars. Is this the same Ridgeway as U. G. Ridgeway the photographer? Are they related? Despite the very attractive stained glass in the windows of the second floor of the Ridgeway Building, the available light in that second story would not make it a very suitable photography studio. If this Ridgeway and U. G. Ridgeway are two separate people, then what are we to make of the kiosk which has on it photographs which presumably are for sale? Doesn't such a kiosk indicate that some photography studio is nearby?

Studio portraits by Ridgeway are scarce. I have seen one - a portrait of Henry Patey, when a child, 2 3/16" X 2 10/16", embossed at the lower right on the matt: U. G. Ridgeway, Main Street, Honesdale, Pa., in the collection of Edith Gardner, Carbondale, Pa.

--1897 the former studio of H. T. Dolmetsch
Note: The Reif-Spettigue building, in which Robbins was located in 1902 (cf. biography published in 1902, given below), was built in 1894. In 1897 when Robbins came to Honesdale he "purchased the studio of the late H. T. Dolmetsch" (see biography of Robbins). Was the studio of H. T. Dolmetsch located on the third floor of the Reif-Spettigue building?
--in 1902 Third floor of the double store building erected in 1894 by Wm. J. Reif and O. M. Spettigue, Honesdale 830 Main (see note 830, below)
Note: We are particularly well-informed about the precise location of G. W. Robbins' studio, thanks to Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County, 1902. On p. 84 of this text we are given a picture of the exterior of the building in which the Robbins studio is located and the following details about the building erected by Reif, who in 1902 advertised that he was "Honesdale's oldest oldest shoe dealer," and O. M. Spettigue, who in 1902 advertised that he had "the largest line of hardware and builder's supplies in this part of the state."

"This imposing double store building was erected in 1894 by Wm. J. Reif and O. M. Spettigue and has been occupied (Spettigue on the north, on the left in the photograph; Reif on the south, on the right in the picture) by them since its completion that year. It is three stories and basement, 45 X 75 feet with an extension of 25 feet in the rear of Mr. Spettigue's part. It is constructed of brick with a red stone front. In the second story of the southern half are the law offices of Homer Greene and C. A. McCarty, and G. W. Robbin's photograph gallery is on the third floor."

Note: Unless there were (and possibly still are) two buildings in Honesdale known by the name of "Red Stone Front" there is some slight conflict in information given on two different pages of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County... (Second Edition, 1902, pp. 84, 152).

On p. 84 in the discussion of the Reif-Spettigue building, we learn the following:
This imposing double store building was erected in 1894 by J. Reif and O. M. Spettigue and has been occupied by them since its completion that year.... It is constructed of brick with a red stone front."

On p. 152 in the biography of Ulysses Grant Ridgeway, a Honesdale photographer who began his professional life as a carpenter-contractor-builder, we are told:
He (U. G. Ridgeway) designed and constructed some of the best buildings in Honesdale, one of which is the Red Stone Front, erected in 1896.

A biography and a portrait of George W. Robbins were published in Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County... (Second Edition, 1902, p. 145). We reprint here that biography.

GEORGE WARD ROBBINS was born in Philadelphia, Pa., April 7, 1870, and was educated in the schools of Bordentown, N.J. His father was a practicing physician and druggist in the City of Brotherly Love. At the age of fifteen years he began the study of photography and was employed in a number of prominent studios in that city. In 1894 he opened a gallery of his own and three years later he came to Honesdale and purchased the studio of the late H. T. Dolmetsch. Since that date Mr. Robbins has doubled both the stock and the equipment of his plant, and his business has had a steady growth. He occupies the third floor of the Reif Red Stone building shown on page 84, consisting of reception, toilet, stock and operating rooms. Mr. Robbins is recognized as an artist in every sense of the word. He has made a thorough study of posing and lighting, the two most essential requirements in artistic photography. Many of the engravings in this volume were made from his photographs. As a side line he deals in cameras, amateurs' supplies, etchings, frames and enlarged pictures of every description. All work is given especial attention. He is a member of Freedom lodge of Odd Fellows, the Amity and Exchange clubs, being president of the former club and one of the board of directors of the latter.

Note: 830 Printed on the lower part of the matt of the Robbins photograph of Lois Norton Curtis which we reproduce here is the following address:
830 Main St. ROBBINS Honesdale
And, careful scrutiny of the exterior of the Reif-Spettigue building illustrated on p. 84 of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County (1902 Edition) reveals that the sign outside the Robbins third floor studio says:
830 G. W. ROBBINS 830
At some time after 1902 - when this photograph of the exterior of the Robbins studio was published - and before 1908 - when PICTURESQUE WAYNE, Volume 5, 1908, was published - the Robbins studio was taken over by Bodie (see above).

The Reif building burnt in 1912.

In addition to the vertical oval portrait of Lois Norton Curtis, which we reproduce here, several other un-standard sized studio portraits by Robbins have been preserved.
In the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale, a large (7 3/4" X 6 13/16") mounted studio portrait of a baseball team is inscribed at the top center of the matt: "About 1907-8."

The Keystone Block

The Keystone Block is no more. Where once it stood is today the Park and Shop Lot in the 700 block on the West side of Main Street.

Views of the Keystone Block are not uncommon:

--p. 13 (Keystone Block, Main Street, looking north"; 3 1/2" X 2 7/8")

--p. 14 ("View down Main Street from Basin Bridge"; 3 1/2" X 2 3/8") The Keystone Block may be seen in the upper right corner. A sign painted on the end wall indicates who an occupant of the end building was in 1890:

Phineas G. Goodrich - in his History of Wayne County (Honesdale: Haines & Beardsley, 1880) p. 376 - speaks very highly of the Keystone Block:

The progress that Honesdale has made within the past twenty years may be seen in the superior value and permanency of the buildings erected, and in other important improvements made. The Keystone and Centennial blocks below the canal bridge and many other buildings in town would not appear to disadvantage in any city.

1901 a biography of Joseph A. Bodie was published in IWC (p. 48), and in it we learn the following about Bodie and Stearns during Bodie's early years:

Mr. Bodie was born in Dyberry township, June 20, 1852, and his boyhood days were spent on his father's farm and in attendance at school. At the age of fifteen years [1867] he became clerk for H. B. Hamlin who conducted a store at the corner of Main and Twelfth streets. He was with Mr. Hamlin five years [1867-1872] and then [1872] began learning the profession of photography with E. I. Stearns. In 1875, he purchased a half interest in the business and three years later became sole proprietor.

Two carte de visite portraits, both in the collection of the Reed family, South Canaan, bear on the back the following printed address:

Photographed by
E. I. Stearns,
FINE ART GALLERY,
Honesdale, Pa.

One of these portraits has on the back of it an orange 1865 revenue stamp.

Was the Fine Art Gallery in the Keystone Block?

In the first issue of this historical quarterly, Volume I, Number 1 (August 15, 1979, p. 4, bottom row right) is published a photograph of Theron Orsemus Loomis that was taken by Stearns. The photograph bears the printed Stearns address - "E. I. Stearns & Son, Phot. Honesdale, Pa." - and is inscribed on the back in Theron Orsemus Loomis' hand - "Taken the 9th of June 1871." In his diary for June 9, 1871, Theron Orsemus Loomis wrote: "Hitched up the horses and Uncle Erastus and I went down to Honesdale, had my Photographs taken. Got home after dark. Paid for Photographs $3.00."

How much was $3.00 worth in those days? Well, in 1880 in Lant Brothers Scranton City Directory the Lackawanna Valley House, I. E. Whipple, Proprietor, advertised that the Lackawanna Valley House "Is the only First-Class $2.00 a day House in the city of Scranton, Pa."

In 1903-1904, in the Carbondale City Directory, the Erie House, Ed. Weirshing, Propr., of Binghamton, N.Y., advertised: "Rates, $1.00 Per Day." And finally, in 1906-07, in the Philippi Directory Co.'s Honesdale Directory, the Allen House, Church and Ninth Streets, Near Union Station, Honesdale, Pa. advertised:

"Under new management, Frank Crissman, Proprietor, Rates $2.00 to $2.50 per day."

--1878 Weston building, Main Street

The first sentence of the same Bodie biography is this:

Joseph A. Bodie has been the leading photographer in Honesdale since 1878, at which date he became sole proprietor of the E. I. Stearns gallery in the Weston building, on Main street.

Did Stearns & Co. move from the Keystone Block to the Weston building after 1872?

When Bodie "became sole proprietor" in 1875 did Stearns retire?

Who was the "son" of E. J. Stearns & Son, and what happened to him in 1875?

18. Tisdell, A. G.

A. G. Tisdell was not a photographer, nor did he work in the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania, but he was born in Wayne County, and his proficiency in making photographic and stereographic instruments in Brooklyn, N.Y., merit his mention here.

Green, Esq.), p. 778 ff.

Lawrence Tisdell, who was a son-in-law of Beuthel, settled just north of him, and is still living, in his eighty-ninth year. Hannah, his wife, is eighty-four, and both are cared for by their son, George W., who lives at the homestead. Mr. Tisdell had a number of sons, all of whom have shown great constructive ability, and become noted for their skill in the avocations they have adopted. L. W. Tisdell is widely known among sportsmen as the ingenious gunsmith of Scranton. A. G. is a resident of Brooklyn, and has the reputation of being one of the best photographic and stereoscopic instrument makers in the country. Bethuel, who is a fine workman on calendar clocks, is the foreman of a large establishment in Ithaca, N. Y., where another brother is also employed; while Frederick, the oldest son, has a very successful truck farm at Pittston.

Curtis E. Jones' glass negatives survived until quite recently. They were stored in the attic of the family house and were thrown out with the garbage.

The former Curtis E. Jones studio in Lake Ariel still stands, and is today the Donnie Chapman Barber Shop. Diagonally across the street from the former Jones Studio, in the Wayne Body Shop, is a large (about 8" X 10") mounted studio photograph taken by Jones showing the Wayne Garage (now the Wayne Body Shop) in about 1916-1917.
This view of the Wayne Garage was taken from out in front of the Jones studio building.

Honesdale, View down Main Street, Looking South

4 3/16" X 6 3/16", photograph, collection of Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale, copy print by DWP.

In this "View down Main Street" are shown the buildings on the east side of Main Street which were located directly opposite the site of Col. Seeley's Mansion. As we have noted above, Collamer & Condit announced on December 9, 1857, that they had opened a "New Photograph and Ambrotype Gallery, first door below Ham-lin's Store, and directly opposite Col. Seeley's Mansion." This photograph was taken much after 1857, but in it might possibly be seen the building which once was occupied by Collamer & Condit.

By 1872 the firm of Collamer & Condit had long ceased to be extant in Honesdale, but the neighborhood if not the precise Collamer & Condit site across the street from Col. Seeley's Mansion was still involved with matters photographic - apparently E. I. Stearns lived there. Here is the evidence: in the 1872 Beers Atlas, p. 49 (Photographers) we learn that Stearns' place of business was in the Keystone Block:

Stearns, E. J. & Son. Photographers, Keystone Block. Manufacturers and Dealers in Picture Frames of all kinds.

and on the map of Honesdale on p. 49 of the same 1872 atlas, on the east side of Main Street, between Eleventh and Twelfth Streets, in the middle of the block, the name "E. I. Stearns" appears on a building which is located directly across the street from the "Res. C. F. Young." "C. F. Young," so Kurt Reed, South Canaan, informs me, is Coe. F. Young, and the residence of Coe F. Young is the former residence of Colonel Richard Lewis Seeley, and further, that after Coe F. Young left the house, it was bought by the Van Deusens.

The building no longer stands which once housed the "New Photograph and Ambrotype Gallery" of Collamer & Condit. On the site where the building once stood is now Glinsky's Drug Store, corner of 11th Street and Main Street, Honesdale. In the display ad which Collamer & Condit wrote on December 9, 1857, the text of which we have reproduced above, they say that they are located "directly opposite Col. Seeley's Mansion." The Colonel Seeley Mansion once stood practically opposite Glinsky's Drug Store. For the fact that there was once a photography studio located where Glinsky's now is, I am indebted, as I have been on several other instances in this Honesdale section of this survey of studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania from 1839 to 1900, to Stan Pratt, C. P. P. (Certified Professional Photographer).

The precise details about the location of the studio are these: two buildings once stood where the Glinsky drug store now is, the one on the corner was a grocery store, and the one immediately north of the grocery store had apartments upstairs. Both buildings were once owned by Julie Friend. A woman who worked for Stan Pratt's father lived in the building with the apartments and it was she who told Stan that there was a photography studio there.

The commercial viability of the new art of photography was undisputable. Everywhere a new gallery opened the great and the near great thronged to have their pictures taken. And fortune, and perhaps fame, awaited the enterprising and gifted photographer. Since the hubbub of commercial activity found at the crossroads of a community is - for obvious reasons (convenience, publicity) - clearly good for business, the photographers - almost without exception - set up their studios on the market street (the main street) of the community, or on a side street which led into the main market street. In New York City the market Street was Broadway, in Scranton the market street was Lackawanna Avenue, in Honesdale the market street was Main Street, and in Carbondale the market street was Main Street. In order to emphasize just how busy the market street could become at times, it is perhaps instructive here to cite the example of Broadway in New York City in the 1860's. Bill Kaland, in his recent article, entitled "The New York City Galleries of Matthew Brady," PHOTOGRAPHICA (A publication of The Photographic Historical Society of New York, Inc.), Volume XI, No. 10, December 1979, pp. 3-7 (p. 3) describes the situation: "Traffic streamed up and down Broadway at an alarming rate and the horse drawn carriages were said to be a serious threat to women and children. As a result a foot bridge was built across Broadway at Fulton Street."

The largest percentage of the studios were set up on the second floor of buildings on the main street, but in the few instances where the photographer had the main ground floor space, mention of such was sure to be made in the advertisements for the establishment, and usually some reference was made to the fact that clients who patronized the establishment did not have to climb long flights of stairs to get to the photographic studio. The fineness of the costume and the elegance of the pose of the sitters, and the overall grace and refinement of the hundreds of thousands of studio photographs taken in America from the 1840's onward is all the more wonderful when one remembers the hustle and bustle on the street outside and when one learns that sometimes the most unrefined activities were taking place in the next building, or on the floor below. On the ground floor below Brady's Gallery at 359 Broadway was Thompson's Saloon (Kaland, p. 5).

In the Lake Ariel bank there is a framed panorama of Lake Ariel taken by Jones. The panorama is composed of 4 separate pictures pieced together; the seams are easily visible. The panorama is entitled, "Excursion Day at Lake Ariel" and was taken in 1900.

Many Curtis E. Jones views of Lake Ariel and vicinity have survived, as have some studio portraits. These are in the collection of the Reed family, South Canaan, PA., and they include some family portraits, and a particularly fine 1912 view of the Lake Ariel bank (6 15/16" X 7 7/8").

location of studio:
1872 Millville

Note: F. W. Beers' Atlas of Wayne Co. Pennsylvania..., 1872, plate 42 (Waymart, White Mills) gives the following reference to
B. F. West under the South Canaan Business Notices:
West B. F. Tanner and Photographer.
Millville

Question: Is Millville somewhere near Varden? On January 26, 1980,
Kurt Reed told me that B. F.
West began in Varden, and then moved to Waymart.

The map - of "Millville, South Canaan Tsp [sic]" - on p. 44 of this same atlas clearly indicates the location of the West house, the West Photo Gallery and the West Tannery. The Photo Gallery was attached to the street side of the house, and the Tannery was located out in back, near the stream.

From Shaffertown to Millville to Varden.
On further checking with Kurt Reed, South Canaan, PA., on April 24, 1980, the following saga was related to the author about the names previously given to the present village of Varden. Kurt Reed got his information from two of W. R.
Shaffer's daughters, Emma and Florence. The legend is this:

Originally the place which we know today as Varden was a land grant to John Shaffer, and the place thus became known as Shaffertown. And then, because of the seven mills located at the place (1 grist mill, 1 planning mill, 3 saw mills, 1 tannery mill and 1 powder mill) the name was changed from Shaffertown to Millville. But because there were two places called Millville in Pennsylvania, the mill was getting mixed up, and so the postmaster, W. R. Shaffer, who had the post office in his store (this building still stands, at the "Y" in the road at Varden) changed the name to Varden. Why Varden? Well, W. R. Shaffer, was an avid reader of Charles Dickens and in Barnaby Rudge there is a character named Gabriel Varden, who was the village blacksmith and Gabriel Varden's daughter, Dolly, was W. R. Shaffer's favorite character and so W. R. Shaffer renamed Millville, Varden.

In the next business directory of this section of Wayne County that I have been able to locate - J. H. Lant's Pittston, Carbondale, Honesdale &c. Directory For 1875--6, - B. F. West is not listed in the South Canaan business directory (p. 220), nor is he listed in the Waymart business directory (p. 221), but there is, in the Hollisterville Business Directory (pp. 218-219) listed the following businessman:

West, store.
Can this be B. F. West?

Neither is B. F. West listed in the South Canaan Business Directory (p. 192), nor in the Waymart (Waymart) Business Directory (p. 189) of the 1879 Lant Carbondale & Honesdale Directory.

The former West house still stands at Varden, in the "Y" of the road. Perhaps a tracing of the deed of the house would show when West left Millville.

No photographs taken by West while he lived in Millville are known to have survived.

Can the "B.F." of B. F. West possibly stand for "Benjamin Franklin"?

After 1872 - and just how long after 1872 we are not yet able to determine - West moved to Waymart. No directory of Waymart lists him there, but many cartes de visite printed on the back with his name and address at Waymart - "B. F. West, Waymart, Pa." - are extant.

Mrs. Sandra Buguski, who has done extensive research on the town of Waymart in preparing her history of Waymart, has never come across the name of B. F. West in Waymart, PA.

West must have moved to Waymart before 1879 because he is not listed among the businessmen in the South Canaan Business Directory published in M. W. Lant's Carbondale and Honesdale directory of 1879, p. 192. But neither is he listed in the "Waymart Business Directory" on p. 189 of the same 1879 directory. Perhaps West was somewhere else in that year. Perhaps "Waymart" and "Waymart" are two places, and "Waymart" is not merely misspelled, as I am assuming.

See West under Waymart.

Today in Pennsylvania there are three Salems: Salem, Clearfield County, Salem, Mercer County, and Salem, Snyder County. The F. F. Leonard carte de visite in the collection of the Reed family was taken in a Salem which no longer exists, the present-day village of Hamlin. The story of the name change - from Salem Corners (or Salem) to Hamlin - is much the same as the name change from Millville to Varden reported above, and thanks again to the combined efforts of the Reed family, South Canaan, and a few standard Wayne County reference books, the following thread may be unraveled.

The present village of Hamlin is located in what has always been Salem Township, Wayne County. The original name for present-day Hamlin was Salem or Salem Corners. Goodrich, p. 265, tells us that Harris Hamlin settled at Salem in 1802, two miles west of the corners and his son Oliver was an associate judge for 5 years, and when he moved back to Salem they called Salem, Hamlington in honor of the family. The change from Hamlington to Hamlin is easy to see. I am told by the Reeds that old timers still refer to Hamlin as Salem.

I have found no directory reference to F. F. Leonard in Salem, Salem Corners, Hamlington or Hamlin, but the following reference might relate to F. F. Leonard:

Mrs. M. Leonard

Note: Could this be the mother or the wife of F. F.? Matthews, p. 752, col. 2 bottom, mentions various Wayne County Leonards, none of whom seems to connect with our F. F. Leonard. Burlin B. Abbey, Honesdale, Pa., reported on April 24, 1880, that he seems to recall having seen a reference to F. F. Leonard in Hamlin, and that F. F. Leonard had a brother who was killed in the Civil War.

1. Doud, William

first documented record: in Waymart, 1879
last documented record:
location of studio:

On May 8, 1980, just when I thought I had uncovered everything there is to know about regional photographers, the fact that the biography of a photographer named William Doud is included in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania..., 1900, pp. 983-984, was brought to my attention by Stan Pratt, C. P. P., Honesdale, PA. In all of my sifting through regional city and county directories I have not once come across the name Doud among the photographers listed, but, as the reader will see from the biography that is given below of William Doud, he was no insignificant figure on the regional scene.

WILLIAM DOUD, a skilled and prominent artist of Waymart, Wayne county, was born July 28, 1834, in Clifford township, Susquehanna Co., Penn., where his parents, Franklin and Jemima (Halstead) Doud, spent their entire lives. He is a representative of an old and honored family of northeastern Pennsylvania, his great-grandfather, Jude Doud, a native of Connecticut, having located at Lenoxville, Susquehanna county, in 1799. He crossed the river at that place on the rocks below the mill dam. He built and operated the mill known as Doud's mill, and also owned and cultivated 400 acres of land.

Near his father's mill John Doud, our subject's grandfather, was born, reared and remained throughout life, while he engaged in both farming and milling. He died at the ripe old age of eighty-seven years. He married Miss Elizabeth Baker, and to them were born ten children, of whom are mentioned: Franklin, Thomas N., Harrison, George, Elizabeth (who first married Skidmore Thompson), and after his death Rev. Gray, a Baptist minister, Susan (wife of Edmun Worth), Ann (wife of Ethen Warren), and John. The survivors are Thomas, who is living retired in Clifford, Penn.; and Elizabeth, now a widow, living in Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania.

Franklin Doud, our subject's father, was a progressive and enterprising farmer, an honored and valued citizen of his community, and a Republican in politics. He died March 4, 1873, aged sixty-five years, his wife in 1850 aged thirty-seven years, and both were buried in Clifford township, Susquehanna county. William is the eldest of their children; Joseph still resides on the old homestead in Clifford township; Martin, now a resident of Long Island, N. Y., was a private in the Union army during the Civil war, and was for six months a prisoner in Andersonville; Marietta died at the age of two years; Maria E. is the widow of Charles Niles, and is a resident of Portland, Oregon; Jackson is in the geographical survey at Donbolia, Australia. For his second wife the father of these children married Mrs. Dorothy Reilly, who is now living in Lenoxville, Susquehanna county.

The maternal grandparents of our subject were Joseph and Maria Halstead, of Susquehanna county, the former of whom, a lumberman was killed by lightning while engaged in rafting on the Susquehanna, his hat band being cut in four different places, and a hole cut in the tip of his boot, but the skin of his body was not broken.

William Doud remained on the home farm with his parents until February, 1862, when he enlisted in Company K, 56th P.V.I., under Capt. Mitchell. He was never wounded, but was taken ill on the march to Slaughter Mountains, Va., and was sent to hospital, where he remained until honorably discharged, February 4, 1863, when he returned home. With Mall Wells, at Clifford, he began learning photography, serving a six-months apprenticeship, and was later with S. S. Hull, at Carbondale, for four months. He then began for himself in a wagon, at Gibson, Penn., at which place he remained for four years, and in 1879 came to Waymart, where he has since successfully engaged in business. In 1885 he also opened a gallery at Far View which is located 2,300 feet above sea level. He thoroughly understands his profession, and his work is pronounced by competent judges to be of a high order and to possess genuine artistic merit. He is an active and capable business man, possessing a clear judgement, and is amply endowed with those qualities which make an honorable citizen, and insure for him the highest respect and regard of his fellow men. Socially he affiliates with Waymart Lodge No. 542, F. & A. M., and politically is identified with the Republican party. In 1890 he was elected a member of the town council, two years later was elected assessor, and is now acceptably serving as president of the board of health.

At Nicholson, Penn., Mr. Doud was married, September 25, 1869, to Miss Adeline A. Tennant, Rev. L. Pease, a Methodist Episcopal minister, officiating. They have one daughter, Viola, now the wife of Frederick C. Shaffer, a fireman on the Delaware & Hudson River railroad, living in Carbondale, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Doud was born in Clinton township, Wayne county, December 20, 1834, a daughter of John A. and Abigail (Herd) Tennant, natives of Connecticut and New York, respectively, who were married in Newburg, N. Y. The father came to Wayne county with his parents in 1812. Mrs. Doud's parents spent their remaining days upon a farm in Clinton township. The mother died December 25, 1843, aged thirty years and was laid to rest in Keens cemetery, Canaan township, but the father long survived her, dying December 6, 1896, at the extreme old age of ninety-three years, seven months and nineteen days, being laid to rest in the Baptist Church burying-ground, Clinton township. He was one of the prominent and honored pioneers of Wayne county, and was honored with a number of township offices. By his first marriage he had six children, namely: Adeline A., the wife of our subject; Mabel, who died at the age of one year; William, deceased; Lyman, who died aged two years; and Abigail and Andrew (twins), who died in infancy. For his second wife Mr. Tennant married Adeline Tanner, and to them were born the following children: Emma, who married James Jones, and both are now deceased; George, a retired farmer of Honesdale, Penn.; Russell, a farmer of Nebraska; Everal, who was a soldier during the Civil war, and is now a lumberman of Wilkes Barre, Penn.; Abigail, wife of Alvin Loomis, a farmer of Pleasant Mount, Wayne county; M. A., the wife of Abel Wilcox, a carpenter and farmer, of Clinton township; Lorin, a fireman on the Gravity railroad, living in Ashley, Penn.; and Ella and Ella (2) who both died at the age of one year.

The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Doud, Charles and Betsy (Beckworth) Tennant, were natives of Connecticut who became residents of Clinton township, Wayne Co., Penn., in 1812, but later migrated to Illinois, where the grandfather died. He was twice married, his second wife being a Mrs. Meredith. His children were Charles; Abel; John A.; Lyman; Betsy, wife of Horace Buckland; Sallie, wife of Pierce Sloan; Laura, who was three times married, first to Castle Peck, second to a Mr. Lynch, of New York, and third to a gentleman out West; and Ann J., who first married Hiram Brown and later Nelson Carpenter.

The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Doud were Hon. William and Mabel Herd, of New York State, the former of whom was associate judge at Newburg. His daughters were Sallie, wife of Jonathan Gates; Nancy, wife of E. Fitch; Betsy, wife of G. Sherwood; and Abigail, mother of Mrs. Doud; there were also ten sons in the family. The grandmother was twice married, her second husband being a Mr. Sherwood.

What we are not told in this biography written in 1900 is that William Doud was actively engaged in the photography business in Honesdale, Pa. Since the biography does not mention it we may assume that he opened his Honesdale studio at some time after 1900. For a discussion of Doud in Honesdale, see his name in the Honesdale section, Wayne County.

2. West, B. F.

--1872 Millville

Note: F. W. Beers' Atlas of Wayne Co. Pennsylvania..., 1872, plate 42 (Waymart, White Mills) gives the following reference to B. F. West under the South Canaan Business Notices:

West B. F. Tanner and Photographer.
Millville

Having been recorded in Millville in 1872, West is subsequently not mentioned in Millville (Varden) business directories. A "West" recorded in Hollisterville - (J. H. Lant, Pittston, Carbondale, Honesdale &c. Directory For 1875--6, pp. 218-219 - Hollisterville Business Directory), "West, store" - in 1875-1876 might possibly be our B. F. West, but there is no certainty about this. We know that West was active in Waymart as a photographer because many cartes de visite printed on the back in the way -

B. F. West
PHOTOGRAPHER
Waymart,

have been preserved, but curiously, B. F. West is not listed in the 1875-1876, nor in the 1879 business directories of Waymart.

And, Mrs. Sandra Buguski of Waymart has done extensive research on the village of Waymart in the preparation of her bicentennial history of that village, and she has never come across the name B. F. West in Waymart.

Our B. F. West seems not to be related to any of the various Wests whose biographies appear in 1900 North-eastern Pennsylvania, pp. 416-419 (Col. James West), p. 416 (West Family), p. 416 (Mrs. James West), p. 1196 (John D. West).

WHITE MILLS

1. Ridgeway, Ulysses Grant first documented record: pre-1906

last documented record:
location of studio:

IWC, 1902, p. 152

In 1902 a biography of Ulysses Grant Ridgeway was published - see Ridgeway, Honesdale, where the entire biography is reproduced - and in it we learn that when U. G. Ridgeway first got into the photography business that his first gallery was at White Mills - While disabled for several months by a railway accident, he studied photography and successfully conducted a gallery at White Mills for a year. He then removed to Honesdale and erected his "Ground Floor Studio" nearly opposite the City Hall.

Since Ridgeway is listed at 548 Main Street, Honesdale, in 1906-1907, the year in White Mills was before this time.

In the collection of the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale, there is a large - about 8" X 10" matted photograph embossed on the front of the matt with this address -

U. G. Ridgeway
Main Street
Honesdale, Pa.

and inscribed on the back thusly -
Graded School White Mills Mar. 9, 1905

Although Ridgeway had left White Mills and opened his Honesdale studio long before Mar. 9, 1905, surely the connections he made during his year's residence in White Mills lay behind his having taken this picture.

1. Hambke, George A.

first documented record: 1911
last documented record:

Donated by the Family of Peter & Frances McGinnis May and is stamped at the center of the back:

GEORGE A. HAMBKE,

In addition, the front of the map is inscribed:
Honesdale 1911 Joe May (with line indicating his location in the Fife & Drum Corps)

Whether Hambke was a Honesdale photographer, or not, the evidence is insufficient to say.

2. Lyden, Charles P.

first documented record: 1904

CLIFFORD

1. Doud, William

first documented record: after February 4, 1863
last documented record:
location of studio:

In a biography of him published in 1900, William Doud is described as a "skillfull and prominent artist of Waymart, Wayne County" (1900, p. 983). William Doud began his photographic career in Clifford, and after his Waymart period - that is to say some time after the year 1900 - he set up business in Honesdale, Wayne County. The 1900 biography of Doud is here given in full under Doud's name in the Waymart, Wayne County, section. The part of this biography which concern's Doud's beginnings in Clifford may here be given -

William Doud remained on the home farm with his parents until February, 1862, when he enlisted in Company K, 56th P.V.I., under Capt. Mitchell. He was never wounded, but was taken ill on the march to Slaughter Mountain, Va., and was sent to hospital, where he remained until honorably discharged, February 4, 1863, when he returned home. With Mall Wells, at Clifford, he began learning photography, serving a six-months apprenticeship, and was later with S. S. Hull, at Carbondale, for four months. He then began for himself in a wagon, at Gibson, Penn., at which place he remained for four years, and in 1879 came to Waymart, where he has since successfully engaged in business.

2. Wells, Mall

first documented record: after February 4, 1863, and probably before that time also

last documented record:
location of studio:

The only reference I have found concerning Mall Wells as a photographer is found in the biography of William Doud which was originally published in 1900 and which is given in full here under Doud's name in the Waymart (Wayne County) section. Mall Wells was the man from whom Doud had his first lessons in the art of photography. The part of the Doud biography which mentions Mall Wells is this -

William Doud remained on the home farm with his parents until February, 1862, when he enlisted in Company K, 56th P.V.I., under Capt. Mitchell. He was never wounded, but was taken ill on the march to Slaughter Mountains, Va., and was sent to hospital, where he remained until honorably discharged, February 4, 1863, when he returned home. With Mall Wells, at Clifford, he began learning photography, serving a six-months apprenticeship....

FOREST CITY

1. Braman, D. R.

first documented record: May, 1888
last documented record: 1895
location of studio:

Thanks to the following biography of D. R. Braman which was included in Commemorative Biographical Record of Northeastern Pennsylvania..., 1900, p. 1605, we are particularly well informed about the ancestors, family, business and social activities of D. R. Braman:

D. R. BRAMAN, the present well-known manager of the wholesale liquor house of M. Hartung, at Forest City, Susquehanna county, was born in Broome county, N.Y., April 23, 1863, and is a son of John and Irene (Snyder) Braman, natives of Rhode Island and Pennsylvania, respectively, and residents of Broome county at the present time. The father was born in 1827, has followed farming through his life, and has held a number of township offices. The mother's birth occurred in 1831. Both are consistent members of the Baptist Church and highly respected by all who know them. To them were born five children, namely: De Forest, a resident of Binghamton, N.Y.; Dehester, deceased; Delaska, of Binghamton; Dela, widow of J. V. Le Roy and resident of Forest City, Penn.; and D. R., our subject. The paternal grandparents were James and Hannah Braman, natives of Rhode Island, who removed from that State to Courtland, N.Y., where they spent their remaining days as farming people.

Upon the home farm D. R. Braman spent the first seventeen years of his life in much the usual manner of farmer boys of his day. He then entered a photograph gallery in Courtland, N.Y. and after mastering the art continued to work for C. P. Page at that place until coming to Forest City, Penn., in May, 1888. He conducted a gallery here until 1895, when he sold out. He was elected justice of the peace in February, 1893, and acceptably filled that office until November, 1897, when he resigned to accept his present position. He is quite a prominent representative of the Republican party in his town, has been a member of the Vigilance committee for eight years, and has been honored with public office, having served as overseer of the poor three terms and as clerk of the town council. Socially he is very popular, and is a member of the Masonic Lodge of Forest City.

In New Milford, Penn., March 3, 1885, Mr. Braman was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Le Roy, and to them have been born two children: Isabella and John Le Roy. Mrs. Braman was born in New Milford Township, Susquehanna county, and is a daughter of Levi L. Le Roy, whose sketch appears elsewhere.

2. Doud, William

first documented record: 1875
last documented record: 1879
location of studio:

William Doud, in 1900 described as "a skillful and prominent artist of Waymart, Wayne County" (1900, p. 983), worked as a photographer in Gibson for 4 years, 1875-1879. We learn this fact from his biography which was published in 1900 (pp. 983-984). This complete biography is reproduced above, under Doud's name in the Wayne County section. We cite here only the portion of that biography (from p. 984) which concerns his Gibson years:

William Doud remained on the home farm with his parents until February, 1862, when he enlisted in Company K, 56th P.V.I., under Capt. Mitchell. He was never wounded, but was taken ill on the march to Slaughter Mountain, Va., and was sent to hospital, where he remained until honorably discharged, February 4, 1863, when he returned home. With Mall Wells, at Clifford, he began learning photography, serving a six-months apprenticeship, and was later with S. S. Hull, at Carbondale, for four months. He then began for himself in a wagon, at Gibson, Penn., at which place he remained for four years, and in 1879 came to Waymart, where he has since successfully engaged in business.

In 1885 Doud opened a studio in Far View, a place but a mile or two from Waymart, and at some time after 1900, he opened a studio in Honesdale. See his name under both Far View and Honesdale, in the Wayne County section.

4. Kirby, W. E.

last documented record:
location of studio:

In 1881 the biography of W. E. Kirby, manufacturer and dealer in furniture, No. 413 Church Street, Carbondale, was published (See Kirby, in the Carbondale section), and in this biography we learn the following:
Mr. W. E. Kirby is originally from Orange county, N.Y., and came to Carbondale in 1865, at which time he conducted a photographic art gallery, which he relinquished to engage in his present enterprise. He was also at one time in business at Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Penna., and during the war served in the Sixth N.Y. Heavy Artillery, and on receiving his discharge immediately came to Carbondale, where he has since resided, and gained hosts of friends and become popular with all classes of the community.

Since at the time of the writing of this biography - 1881 - he is a manufacturer and dealer in furniture, and since he was in Carbondale when he relinquished his present enterprise, then he must have conducted a photographic art gallery in Montrose before the Civil War.

For his Carbondale career, see Kirby in the Carbon-dale section.

SUSQUEHANNA

1. Fenner, J. B.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

A cabinet photograph in the collection of Lois Norton Curtis, Waymart, PA., inscribed at the top of the back "Jessie Perham Lillie," is printed at the base of the front with the following address:
J. B. Fenner, East Main St.
Susquehanna, PA.

2. Harding, A. D.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:
-- year 42 Main St.

Two examples of the work of A. D. Harding are known to the author: one, a cabinet photograph in the collection of Larry and Josephine Downey, Endwell, N.Y., printed on the base of the front: "Harding ADH (in monogram) Susquehanna, Pa." and inscribed in pen at the top of the back, "Aunt Phoebe, grandmas mothers sister," and the other a cabinet photograph in the collection of Fred W. Kost, Star Route, Honesdale, Pa., of a standing man with a silk hat, printed on the back with this address: "A. D. Harding, Photographer, Susquehanna, Pa."

A cabinet photograph of a young boy, in the collection of the author, is printed at the base of the front with this address:
Harding 42 Susquehanna, Pa.
Main St.

Although no initial is given on this cabinet photograph of the young boy, the photographer stands a very good chance of being A. D. Harding, since the clothes worn by the sitters in both photographs are approximately of the same vintage - 1880's.

Whether A. D. Harding is the "Harding" of the Susquehanna Depot photographic partnership, Harner and Harding, the evidence is at this point insufficient to say.

D. L. Harding, below, might well be a son of A. D. Harding. See the discussion below.

3. Harding, D. L.

first documented record: 1924
last documented record:
location of studio:

A mounted studio portrait (5 3/4" X 3 3/4") in the collection of Larry and Josephine Downey, Endwell, N.Y., is inscribed in pencil on the back of the matt, "4 yrs old Mr. 10, 1924, Robert Kennedy," and is embossed on the front of the matt at the lower right hand corner: "D. L. Harding, Susquehanna, Pa."

Since this photograph was taken in 1924 and since the examples by A. D. Harding (see above) are from a much earlier era, it only stands to reason that D. L. might well be a son of A. D.

See also, Harner & Harding, Susquehanna Depot, below.

4. Kitchen, A. G.

first documented record:
last documented record:
location of studio:

Two examples of the work of A. G. Kitchen have surfaced, and both are cabinet photographs of the same format (back - blank; front - printed at the bottom in gold letters on a white background with the following address: A. G. Kitchen, Susquehanna, Pa. One is in the collection of Larry and Josephine Downey, Endwell, N.Y., and is inscribed at the base of the front, "Joe Sanford"; the other, bought by the author from an antique dealer at the Harford Fair, August 21, 1979, is also inscribed at the base of the front, "The Wheat family."

5. Winaus, B. L.

first documented record:
last documented record:

FACTORYVILLE

- 1. Manchester, Walter N.
first documented record: 1880
last documented record: 1905
location of studio:
According to information related to the author by Rev. William P. Lewis of the Lackawanna County Historical Society, Scranton, who is preparing an article for a local newspaper on Walter N. Manchester, Manchester was active at Factoryville from 1880-1905, after which time he moved to Scranton and then to Daytona, Florida, where he died in 1923.
The former Manchester studio on College Avenue in Factoryville still stands, although it has been much altered, almost beyond recognition. Rev. Lewis has in his collection a mounted studio photograph showing the Manchester studio from the front.
Manchester was a tremendously successful photographer in Factoryville and Rev. Lewis remarked that "bushels of his pictures turn up."
Walter N. Manchester no doubt got interested in photography through his uncles, Henry W. Manchester and Edwin H. Manchester, both of whom were actively engaged in photography in Providence, R.I. The brief biography of these two men given in Richard C. Stone, Genealogy of the Stone Family originating in Rhode Island, (Providence: Knowles, Anthony and Company, Printers) 1866, p. 194 (Note 156), we reproduce here:
Henry W. Manchester (1186), and Edwin H. Manchester (1188), sons of Earl Manchester and Lucy Stone, both reside in Providence, R.I., and have been associated in business for twenty years or more. They are, and have been, steadily and perseveringly engaged in the daguerreotype, ambrotype, and other forms of human immortalization. Their judgment and artistic skill has given them a widely-extended reputation, and placed their photographs, especially, among the very best artists in America. Henry W. (1186) married Miss Sarah Hodges, a lady of cultivation and refinement; they reside in Elmwood, a beautiful and healthy suburb of the city. Edwin H. (1188) for his 2d wife married Miss Sallie Stone, they reside in the city. (See Note 152.) His first wife was Miss Sarah Potter.

A carte de visite portrait of a young woman, in the collection of the Lackawanna County Historical Society, Scranton, is printed at the base of the front with this address: "Manchester, Photographer," and is inscribed on the back: "Sept. 19, 1882," and a cabinet portrait of an infant, in the same collection, is printed at the base of the front in the same manner

The author has found no examples of studio photographs by Sullivan County photographers, nor has he yet found a city or county directory issued in the nineteenth century for Sullivan County.

Stereographers

View of Shepard's Crook, on the Delaware and Hudson Gravity Railroad, Carbondale, Pa., No. 1119 of a series of stereograph cards of the Del. & Hud. Gravity Road photographed and published by L. Hensel, Hawley, Pa., 7" X 4 1/2", collection of the author, photographic copy print by DWP.

"The stereograph, also known as the stereogram and commonly simply as a stereo view, is a double photograph or printed image paired in such a manner that, when viewed with a stereoscope, it appears as a three-dimensional or solid image. It was conceived in the infant years of photography and perfected between 1850 and 1854."

So writes William C. Darrah to open Chapter One (EARLY HISTORY OF STEREOGRAPHS) in his book The World of Stereographs (Gettysburg, PA.: W. C. Darrah, Publisher, 1977). These extracts from the text which appears on the inside front of the book jacket will serve to illustrate the scope and the depth of this definitive volume:

This book, intended as a survey of and guide to stereographs, considers them from four points of view: historical, geographical, topical and by the photographers who produced them.

The historical chapters describe the kinds of stereographs, how to interpret them, their manufacture and mass production and their relations to art, entertainment, education, science and industry.

The geographical chapters summarize the stereo views and photographers of sixty countries, beginning with the eastern United States and closing with the islands of the Atlantic Ocean.

Eighty topics ranging from advertising to zoology comprise the encyclopedia section.

There are two checklists; first, the names and locations of 3500 North American stereographers arranged alphabetically by states and, second, a world register of 4200 cited photographers giving the countries and approximate dates of operation and references to the pages of the book on which they are cited.

Darrah (pp. 26, 44) has defined the extent to which stereography had percolated in America by 1862, and has defined four main types of stereographers.

By 1862, hundreds of American photographers were issuing stereographs. Most of their work was scenic architectural and documentary. Their trade was largely local or regional. Relatively few found means to distribute views nationally. The large publishers and wholesalers, like Anthony, handled large quantities of foreign views but were not interested in promoting those of their American competitors.

Resident photographers before 1870 had established studios in virtually every town and village in the United States and Canada.

These local operators were of four main types, each characterized by the stereo work produced.

- (1) The photographer who specialized in the production of stereographs but confined his practice to local subjects. If operations were continued for a decade or more, the trade list would range from several hundreds to several thousands of titles.
- (2) The resort photographer (there were hundreds of them at Niagara Falls, Saratoga, the White Mountains, Catskills, etc.) who virtually limited his work to the tourist trade. Many produced negatives numbered in the thousands.
- (3) The studio photographer who, as a side line, occasionally produced stereoscopic portraits, poses, interiors of churches and public buildings, commonly including a small series of local town views.
- (4) The opportunist who produced a few views when some unusual event - flood, fire, train wreck, parade, or such - created a transitory market for souvenirs. In some instances the negatives, or rights to them, were sold to large-volume publishers.

Nearly every photographer who did his own publishing developed his individual fashion of mounting and labeling, his own style and artistry, and even his peculiar methods of merchandising. Many energetic photographers maintained highly profitable nation-wide mail order business.

Thanks to the state checklists (Pennsylvania, pp. 209-210; New York, pp. 206-208) we are able to identify the following photographers or publishers who worked in the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania which are the geographical scope of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

For each of the 23 photographers listed below, we assume that they belong to category 3 of the four main types of operators as defined by Darrah.

"6,7,8" : These numbers are Darrah's (p. 213) The date of stereo activity is indicated by decades, 5 = 1850's, 6 = 1860's, 7 = 1870's.... If a photographer produced stereo views for only a few years over a period such as 1868-1872, he may be placed in either decade or both, depending upon the importance of his work. The decades given do not indicate his total period of operation. Many photographers who remained in business thirty years, published stereographs only briefly, often only three or four years.

Ten of the stereographers included by Darrah have been independently identified by the present author as studio photographers, and eleven of the stereographers included by Darrah are completely new photographers to the present author.

And even so, many more stereographers are likely to have worked in the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania. Even Darrah is not telling all he knows. Here is how he prefaces his state by state checklist:

The following geographic list of photographers or publishers who issued stereographs represents fewer than half of the known names. It is believed that all photographers who produced large series or numbers of titles are included. To insure broad geographic coverage, minor photographers who operated in thinly populated areas are frequently included.

For states like New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, less than a third of the stereographers are given. Only the more important names in the larger cities are mentioned.

BECKWITH, E. W.

In order to acquire notable subjects for his stereographs, E. W. Beckwith travelled to Binghamton, N.Y., to photograph the suspension bridge there. Darrah p. 150 (BRIDGES, in the topical section of the book): Stereo views of other suspension bridges include St. Johns, New Brunswick (by Climo), Binghamton, New York (Beckwith), and Pittsburgh (Purviance).

HENSEL, LUDOLPH

From the biography of L. Hensel published in IWC, 1902, p. 126, we learn a great deal about the stereograph activity of Ludolph Hensel:

L. Hensel, of Hawley, is one of the most progressive photographers of the present time. He located in Hawley in 1878, prior to that time having been extensively engaged in taking landscape and other outside views... The excellence of Mr. Hensel's work soon procured for him a large patronage which demanded his whole attention and he was obliged to give up the view business which he had continued to follow as he had leisure. Mr. Hensel was the first to publish a series of views of Honesdale, Carbondale, Scranton, Pittston and Wilkesbarre. His views of the now abandoned Delaware & Hudson's gravity and the Pennsylvania Coal Company's gravity railroads are quite famous and in great demand. Many of them appear in this book.

The Hensel stereograph card (no. 1119) that we reproduce here, both front and back, shows a view of Shepherd's Crook, a very famous turn on the Delaware & Hudson's Gravity Railroad.

Since on the basis of this card we might assume that all of Hensel's views of the Delaware and Hudson Gravity Road have on the back this same imprint, might we assume that since the back of the stereograph that we discuss below under Carbondale, Del. & Hud. Machine Shops and foot of No. 1 Plane, does not have this imprint, but a completely different one, that it was not taken by Hensel, but by someone else, either T. H. Johnson, or even S.Y. Richards?

Thompson, Frederick F.

In the collection of the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale, there is a stereograph showing Birdsall Brothers Mill, Seelyville, Pa., and running along the left and right edges of this card is the following:

Frederick F. Thompson Amateur Photographer

GRAVES, J.

Topographical and scenic views, so called "regional views," were very popular for stereograph cards, and one of the most popular of the northeastern Pennsylvania regional views was Delaware Water Gap. Darrah (p. 73) lists three stereographers who photographed the site, one of whom was a regional photographer, J. Graves. On page 26 Darrah illustrates (fig. 31) an absolutely entrancing stereograph taken in 1865 of Delaware Water Gap by John Moran, "a fine versatile photographer" (Darrah, p. 44), from Philadelphia.

CARBONDALE

Darrah's lists cite only S. Y. Richards as making stereographs in Carbondale. I have not yet located a S. Y. Richards stereograph card. I have seen several unidentified stereograph cards of Carbondale subjects, and surely some or all of these may have been taken by S. Y. Richards.

But S. Y. Richards was not the only one who took stereographs in Carbondale. L. Hensel (see above) took a great many of Carbondale subjects, and T. H. Johnson, of Scranton, also may have taken a substantial number of Carbondale views for his stereographs (see below). And Charles Foedish made stereographs too. In the Carbondale paper, the Weekly Advance (Vol. IV, No. 37, p. 1, col. 2), in a display ad written Sept. 29, 1860, Foedish announced to the public that at his Excelsior Gallery, over A. Watt's Store, corner of Main and Dundaff Streets, Carbondale, that one could obtain "STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES taken in the best style."

The illustration of the Hendrick School House in the preceding issue of this quarterly (NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, I, 3, February 20, 1980, p. 14) is one half of a stereograph card—by an unidentified photographer—owned by Mrs. Rebecca Colville, Carbondale. Mrs. Colville has in her collection a large number of stereograph cards—many of which are hand-tinted—showing views of the buildings and grounds of the Hendrick estate, Carbondale.

Also, the back of a stereograph card, by an unidentified photographer—most likely Ludolph Hensel (see above) or T. H. Johnson (see below)—showing the Del. & Hud. Machine Shops and foot of No. 1 Plane, in the collection of John F. Malone, Carbondale, PA. 18407, and brought to my attention by John M. Winters, former Executive Director of the Carbondale YMCA, lists the following stereograph cards of Carbondale and the vicinity:

VIEWS OF CARBONDALE, PA.

- 1191 - View down Main Street, from Del. & Hud. Office.
- 1102 - Highroads of the D. & H. Road across Dundaff St.
- 1193, 1194 - Views of St. Rosas Academy.
- 1195 - The Grotto of the Holy Virgin at St. Rosas Academy.
- 1196 - Del. & Hud. Machine Shops and foot of No. 1 Plane.
- 1197, 1198 - D. & H. Coal Office at Providence, Pa.
- 1199, 1200 - The Providence Bridge, of the D. & H. Road.

VIEWS OF CRYSTAL LAKE,

- 1210 - The Lady of the Lake starting from the Boat House.
- 1211 - The Grove and Steamer seen from across the Lake.
- 1212 - The Lake House seen from across the Lake.

JOHNSON, T. H.

The anthracite coal industry was the major industry in northeastern Pennsylvania from the discovery of the coal in the first quarter of the nineteenth century until well into the middle of the twentieth century, and naturally such an important and conspicuous part of the regional scene would be the subject of stereographs. Here is Darrah (p. 173):

There is a splendid stereo coverage of the anthracite basins of Pennsylvania by dozens of photographers, especially Langenheim, A. M. Allen, Josiah Brown, Schurch, and Johnson. Because no flames can be permitted, no interior mine views could be taken prior to the invention of the incandescent electric light. Nevertheless, the method of mining and the associated coal breakers is clearly recorded. Keystone published several series of interior views between 1906 and 1925, some of which illustrate electrification of some mines.

Schurch is, of course, the Scranton studio photographer, William H. Schurch, and Johnson is T. H. Johnson, also a Scranton studio photographer.

If T. H. Johnson is the same "Johnson, Photographer, Scranton, Pa." who took so many views of the Del. & Hud. Canal Co. railroad in 1860, and it seems that he very likely is, then T. H. Johnson is a very likely contender for the photographer who made the stereograph card, which we reproduce above, Del. & Hud. Machine Shops and foot of No. 1 Plane. But, see also Ludolph Hensel, above, who is also a likely contender for the authorship.

The text that is given below is a typescript of the printed text that appears on the back of the stereograph card (View of Shepherd's Crook, on the Delaware and Hudson Gravity Railroad, Carbondale, Pa., No. 1119 of a series of stereograph cards of the Del. & Hud. Gravity Road photographed and published by L. Hensel, Hawley, Pa., 7" X 4 1/2") that is reproduced on p. 22 in this issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

PLEASE NOTE:

Part II of this two-part history of Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839 to 1900, will be published in the August 20, 1980 issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume II, Number 1).

In the August 19, 1981 issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume III, Number 1) the topic of Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839 to 1900, will again be taken up. In that issue the number and nature of the works which have survived by the studio photographers whose identities, years of activity, and studio locations are chronicled in Volume I, Number 4 and Volume II, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA will be discussed in detail.

Studio Photography in Northeastern Pennsylvania, from 1839-1900

(Part II)

LACKAWANNA AVENUE, SCRANTON, about 1896
Looking East from the DL & W Station (now replaced by the State Office Building), Franklin Avenue.
Collection of Lackawanna County Historical Society, Scranton, 7 7/16" X 9 1/2", copy print by DWP.

The commercial viability of the new art of photography was undisputable. Everywhere a new gallery opened the great and the near great thronged to have their pictures taken. And fortune, and perhaps fame, awaited the enterprising and gifted photographer. Since the hubbub of commercial activity found at the crossroads of a community is - for obvious reasons (convenience, publicity) - clearly good for business, the photographers - almost without exception - set up their studios on the market street (the main street) of the community, or on a side street which led into the main market street. In New York City the market Street was Broadway, in Scranton the market street was Lackawanna Avenue, in Honesdale the market street was Main Street, and in Carbondale the market street was Main Street. In order to emphasize just how busy the market street could become at times, it is perhaps instructive here to cite the example of Broadway in New York City in the 1860's. Bill Kaland, in his recent article, entitled "The New York City Galleries of Matthew Brady," PHOTOGRAPHICA (A publication of The Photographic Historical Society of New York, Inc.), Volume XI, No. 10, December 1979, pp. 3-7 (p. 3) describes the situation: "Traffic streamed up and down Broadway at an alarming rate and the horse drawn carriages were said to be a serious threat to women and children. As a result a foot bridge was built across Broadway at Fulton Street."

The largest percentage of the studios were set up on the second floor of buildings on the main street, but in the few instances where the photographer had the main ground floor space, mention of such was sure to be made in the advertisements for the establishment, and usually some reference was made to the fact that clients who patronized the establishment did not have to climb long flights of stairs to get to the photographic studio. The fineness of the costume and the elegance of the pose of the sitters, and the overall grace and refinement of the hundreds of thousands of studio photographs taken in America from the 1840's onward is all the more wonderful when one remembers the hustle and bustle on the street outside and when one learns that sometimes the most unrefined activities were taking place in the next building, or on the floor below. On the ground floor below Brady's Gallery at 359 Broadway was Thompson's Saloon (Kaland, p. 5).

What a change has taken place between the Lackawanna Avenue which we see in this photograph, and the Lackawanna Avenue of 1850 as described by Col. Frederick L. Hitchcock in his HISTORY OF SCRANTON AND ITS PEOPLE, Vol. 1, 1914, p. 131:

It should be remembered that Lackawanna avenue at this time had but recently been opened and was very much a dirt road. On either side were woods - the rude stumps and roots of the trees which were felled to make room for the road, still ornamented the way; a rough two-plank hemlock sidewalk made footing for the pedestrian on both sides... This same year 1850, Dr. B. H. Throop erected a one-story frame residence with office attached in the "Pines" - a beautiful group of pines standing on the north side of Lackawanna avenue midway of the block between Wyoming and Washington avenues.

Acknowledgments

In addition to the many people who have already been mentioned in the acknowledgements section of Part I of this two-part history of studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania, the author, Donald W. Powell, would like to thank the following individuals and institutions:

1. Mrs. Emily Miller, Carbondale, Pa., for allowing him to study, to photograph and to publish pictures of her ancestors, and for supplying him with much information about Carbondale "in the old days"

2. Mr. Paul Starzer, Editor of the Carbondale (Pa.) News, and Mr. C. F. Molinaro, respectively, for enabling him to photograph and allowing him to publish the photograph of Main Street, Carbondale, during flood, probably in 1922.
3. Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Russell, Sinking Spring, Pa., and Newton Lake, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. James B. Russell, Reading, Pa., and Newton Lake, Pa., for allowing him to study and to photograph their large collection of studio photographs taken by Lackawanna County photographers.

Donald W. Powell

From the Editor:

We, Edwin M. Sheffield, are pleased to hereby accept--at the request of S. Robert Powell and Donald W. Powell, the creators of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA--the editorship of this historical quarterly. We do so with a firm resolve to comply with the principles and procedures that were established by the Powell brothers during the first year of the existence of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. We welcome this opportunity to actively participate in the writing of the history of northeastern Pennsylvania. The Powell brothers, be it known, will continue to write the majority of the texts that are published in this quarterly.

The present issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is Part II of a two-part history of studio photography in the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania from 1839 to 1900. It was written by Donald W. Powell. Part I of this two-part history deals with the material for the following counties: Luzerne, Wayne, Bradford, Susquehanna, Columbia, Pike, Monroe, Wyoming, Carbon and Sullivan. Part II deals with the material for Lackawanna County, the youngest of the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania.

This issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA contains 32 pages. The large size of this issue is a consequence not only of the fact that a large amount of material has been uncovered by Donald W. Powell for Lackawanna County, but also that included in this issue are (1) a Bibliography covering the eleven counties of northeastern Pennsylvania and (2) a preliminary directory of the trades and professions that exist on the fringes of studio photography, entitled "ARTISTS, PAINTERS AND PICTURES."

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Volume II, Number 2, will be a history of the Griswold family of Clinton Township, Wayne County. It will be written by S. Robert Powell and published on November 19, 1980.

Lackawanna County

N.B.: On August 13, 1878, a large portion of Luzerne County became independently organized as Lackawanna County, and therefore all pre-1878 photographic activity in what is now Lackawanna County should - strictly speaking - be found not in this section on Lackawanna County. But - for the sake of keeping the situation as uncomplicated as possible - it is found here, not there (in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, I, 4) - under Luzerne County. Let the reader keep this fact in mind when he is dealing with the material for Lackawanna and Luzerne Counties.

Whether Willis R. Bargar is any relation to P. K. Bargar who was in the 1850's involved with the press of Carbondale, it will take further research to be able to say. From 1880, p. 445, we learn the following about P. K. Bargar:
The Carbondale Democrat was established by P. S. Joslin and Silas S. Benedict, in 1845. The paper was enlarged and the title changed to Lackawanna Citizen and Carbondale Democrat in 1849, by S. S. Benedict, who had entire control of the paper since April 1st, 1846. The title was changed again December 13th, 1850, to the Lackawanna Citizen. P. K. Bargar became a partner with Mr. Benedict in the summer of 1852. Mr. Benedict retired December 1st, 1852, when Homer Grenell entered into a partnership with Mr. Bargar under the name of P. K. Bargar & Co. The publication of this paper was discontinued April 1st, 1854.

first documented record: 1844
last documented record:

1844 Mansion House

The Mansion House was a hotel. The 1841 map of the city of Carbondale (detail reproduced here) indicates that the Mansion House was located at the northeast corner of the intersection of North Main Street and Street No. 5 or Salem Street (now Salem Avenue). On this 1841 map at this site we find the following information:

Mansion House
Arnold & Serfess
Proprietors

The next building to the north of Mansion House on the east side of Main Street is owned by W. N. Arnold. Perhaps this "W. N. Arnold" is the "Arnold" of the Mansion House.

Two separate sources - Thomas Murphy, Jubilee History Commemorative of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Creation of Lackawanna County..., 1928, p. 433, and History of Luzerne, Lackawanna and Wyoming Counties, Pa., 1880, p. 440 - tell us that S. S. Benedict began taking daguerreotypes in Carbondale in 1844:

1880, p. 440: S. S. Benedict first began taking daguerreotypes in January, 1844, at the Mansion House.

Murphy, p. 433: A daguerreotype parlour was opened in 1844 by S. S. Benedict at the Mansion House.

S. S. Benedict is, therefore, without any question, the earliest documented daguerreotypist working in Carbondale and the nearby towns, if not in northeastern Pennsylvania. In Scranton, for instance, the two earliest documented daguerreotypists are George B. Chase, first documented possibly as early as 1851-1852, and Leroy Hancock, first documented on September 15, 1854. S. S. Benedict's daguerreotyping activity is even more astonishing when one recalls that the technical details of the process of taking daguerreotypes was first divulged to the world, in Paris, France, at a joint open meeting of the Academy of Sciences and the Academy of Fine Arts, on August 19, 1839, and that the first daguerreotypes made in America were made in New York City in the Fall of 1839.

Note: William Welling (Photography in America, The Formative Years 1839-1900, New York: Thomas Y. Crowell Company, 1978, p. 3) outlines the early years of daguerreotypy in America in this way:

With notable exceptions, daguerreotype portraits or views were not taken successfully on any large scale until after the introduction of methods for lessening camera exposure time from minutes to seconds (in 1841) and the adoption of the first true camera portrait lens (available in 1841 but not widely used until 1843). The first major display of some 1,000 daguerreotypes took place at an industrial exposition in Paris in 1844. A French technical journal reported sales of 2,000 daguerreotype cameras and over half a million camera plates in 1847. Horace Greeley's New York Tribune estimated that by 1853, "there cannot be less than 3 million daguerreotypes taken annually in the United States."

One would love to find more information about the early days of daguerreotyping in Carbondale. Who, for example, was the daguerreotypist who took the two daguerreotypes exhibited in the exhibition held in 1901 in Carbondale in conjunction with the semi-centennial celebrations of the incorporation of the City. These two daguerreotypes were listed in the catalogue of the exhibition:

208. Daguerreotype of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Morss, 1841
232. Daguerreotype of the first hotel with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bronson on the porch, and the old stage coach with people on top. This hotel stood where the Aitken block now is. It burned in 1850.

S. S. Benedict did not begin taking daguerreotypes until 1844, and S. S. Benedict is the first documented daguerreotypist in all of northeastern Pennsylvania. The 1850 daguerreotype, which had to have been taken on locale - in Carbondale - might well have been taken by Benedict. Mr. and Mrs. Bronson and their hotel are discussed in considerable detail under Collamer & Pugh, Carbondale.

Mr. and Mrs. Morss might well have had their daguerreotype taken somewhere outside of northeastern Pennsylvania, and it should be noted here that in our search for the identity of photographers who took any particular daguerreotype, that we should not be too parochial - too near-sighted - since people could easily have had their picture taken when they were visiting outside of this area. The nearby big cities of Philadelphia and New York and Boston are likely places where daguerreotypes may have been taken. The Philadelphia photographer C. G. Crane placed the following display ad in the Carbondale newspaper, the Herald Advance (Vol. IV, No. 48, p. c, col. 4) on April 27, 1861, the year in which the Civil War broke out, and so Carbondaleans travelling to Philadelphia may have taken advantage of his services while they were there.

On a cylinder made about 1915, for an Edison Amberol, a "talking machine" (the author has seen one made in Orange, N. J. in 1913), Cal Stewart has immortalized just this subject - having a picture taken while visiting the "big city" - in a sketch entitled "Uncle Josh in a photograph gallery." We reproduce here, complete with all the "ha ha's" so characteristic of and so integral a part of all Uncle Josh recordings.

(Ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha). Well sir, I went and had my picture took. Yep, I didn't want it done, but Nancy wanted it. She said she wanted my picture to hang up with the pictures of her first three husbands. You see, Nancy was married before and when her husbands died she cremated them (ha ha ha ha ha ha ha). Some women can't keep married at all, but Nancy had husbands to burn. Well I told Nancy I wanted ( ? not) to have my picture hung up in any rogues gallery (ha ha ha ha). Well she commenced to cryin' about it. She said Ezze Hoskins had his tooken and Jim Lawson had his tooken and Deacon Witherspoon had his and in order to keep peace in the family I told her I'd have mine took. While I was down to New York I thought me a good time to have it done. I had my store clothes on, my boots polished and my hair cut and I looked pretty scrumptious for an old feller (ha ha ha ha ha ha). Well I went up to one of them picture galleries, a gal showed me into a settin' room, she said the picture man was a little busy and he'd be out in a little bit and while I was a waitin' I should look at the photographs and gosh they was a lot of 'em, so some of 'em had weddin' clothes on, some of 'em had uniforms on, and some of 'em didn't have much of anything on. I guess they was actor gals (ha ha ha ha ha ha). She showed me a picture of one young lady, she was Miss Van der Rockerbuilt in her coming out gowns. Gosh it was real handy, all she'd had to do would be sneeze and she'd a been out (ha ha ha ha ha ha). Well that picture feller come out and asked me how I'd like to have my picture taken - in a group, standing up full length, or on a bust. And I told him I didn't go on a bus very often but when I did I went full length. Well he took me into the other room, and sat me down in a chair and I asked him how I thought I'd look good in a picture. He said he thought I'd take a good picture standin' behind a tree (ha ha ha ha ha ha). Well he twisted a little pitch fork in the back of my head and another in the small of my back and he shoved my spinal column clear up into my wishbone and then he twisted my head around sideways till my collar was a cuttin' my throat, and he put my right boot over on my left boot where I had a sore corn and told me to look pleasant and he wheeled up that picture machine, and I guess he was a little ashamed of himself because he hid his head under a rag while he was doin' it (ha ha ha ha ha ha). Just then a fly got on the end of my nose and the darn thing wouldn't get off, and I winked one eye and then I winked the other and I blew at him, and I whistled at him, and I wobbled my ears like a mule, and just then that feller pulled the trigger. He said it'd be all right, and he'd send me my photographs by mail. Well when they come gosh I was a sight (ha ha ha ha ha ha). One ear was on top of my head, the other was hangin' on my chin, and that fly looked like a mud turtle crawling all over my face. Now when Nancy gets the album out she says this is Ezze Hoskins, this is Ezze's first wife, this is Deacon Witherspoon, this is Cy Petten-gild, and this is Jim Lawson, and that's a picture Joshua had taken while he was down to New York and it's plain to be seen he was drinkin' (ha ha ha ha ha ha). Gosh that feller had me on a bust sure enough (ha ha ha ha ha ha).

Note: Special thanks here to April Powell for her help in making this transcription from a tape made from the original cylinder. Particularly challenging was the task of determining just how many "ha ha's" Uncle Josh uttered on each occasion.

In a future issue of this historical quarterly - an issue in which the nineteenth-century newspapers published in northeastern Pennsylvania will be surveyed - we shall have much more to say about S. S. Benedict and the newspaper business in Carbondale.

Let us cite here, however, the two paragraphs of information about S. S. Benedict given in 1880:

Hon. S. S. Benedict, editor and publisher of the Carbondale Advance for twenty-nine years, was born in Walton, Delaware county, N. Y., March 7th, 1816, and married Rowena K. Bartlett, of Waymart, Wayne county, Pa. Mr. Benedict was formerly a teacher, and has served as alderman five years, member of the legislature two years, school director twenty-five years and notary public eighteen years. (p. 452 A)

The Carbondale Democrat was established by P. S. Joslin and Silas S. Benedict, in 1845. The paper was enlarged and the title changed to Lackawanna Citizen and Carbondale Democrat in 1849, by S. S. Benedict, who had had entire control of the paper since April 1st, 1846. The title was changed again December 13th, 1850, to the Lackawanna Citizen. P. K. Berger became a partner with Mr. Benedict in the summer of 1852. Mr. Benedict retired December 1st, 1852, when Homer Grenell entered into a partnership with Mr. Berger under the name of P. K. Barger & Co. The publication of this paper was discontinued April 1st, 1854. (p. 445)

Thanks to Shirley Ferry Bell (Mrs. Thomas A. Bell), great granddaughter of Charles Marsh Ferry, we have learned that the sister of the wife of Charles Marsh Ferry (one of the pioneer daguerreotypists of northeastern Pennsylvania) married a son of Hon. S. S. and Rowena (Bartlett) Benedict. The following information is from Albert Dexter Rust, Record of the Rust Family, (Waco, Texas: 1891), p. 326.

Eugene A. Benedict, son of Hon. S. S. and Rowena (Bartlett) Benedict, married in Carbondale, Pa., Nov. 12 1859, Sarah Louise Rust (b. June 15 1839). Sarah Louise Rust's sister, Elizabeth Roe Rust (b. Oct. 24, 1835) married, in Carbondale, Pa., on April 11 1852.

For more on the family of Charles Marsh Ferry and his career as a daguerreotypist, see below.

Since all the Birkett family apparently lived at 28 Copeland Avenue then there is not much likelihood that they had a photography studio there - although I wouldn't be at all surprised if Thomas did in 1888-1889, at least if the way his address is given in the 1888-1889 directory is any indication. Perhaps Thomas, like Sidney G., worked for A. L. Cramer.

The D. G. Beers, Atlas of Luzerne County..., 1873, p. 43, makes the following reference under "Miscellaneous" in the Carbondale Business Notices.
Brownell, D. K. . . . Lumberman Photograph Gallery, Main St.

Does this reference say that D. K. Brownell is both a lumberman and the operator of the Photograph Gallery on Main St.? It would seem as though it does.

The above 1873 reference is the only one I have found to D. K. Brownell as a photographer in Carbondale. D. K. Brownell was active as an ambrotypist and photographer in Harford (Susquehanna County) in 1861-1862, and in Scranton in 1861-1862, and in 1865-1868.

See Brownell, D. D., in the Scranton section.

8. Collamer

The name Collamer pops up in so many places and in so many combinations in photography circles in northeastern Pennsylvania in the period 1853-1894 in Carbondale, Honesdale, Hawley, and Wilkes-Barre that the following chart is useful in order to keep track of the various Collamer photographic firms.

It seems that there are two Collamers involved - G. W. Collamer, and his son, Arthur E. Collamer. Arthur E. Collamer is first specifically mentioned by name in Wilkes-Barre in 1884, although his father, G. W. Collamer, is recorded in Wilkes-Barre in 1873. Presumably young Arthur E. worked with his father in the pre-Wilkes-Barre period of his activity.

Collamer & Patton

first documented record: June 1, 1853
last documented record:
location of studio:
June 1, 1853 Over Watt's Store, opposite Bronson's Hotel.

Note: We have recorded that S. S. Benedict took daguerreotypes in the Mansion House, a hotel on the northeast corner of the intersection of Street No. 5 or Salem Street and North Main Street - the crossroads of the city of Carbondale. Bronson's Hotel - more correctly, the Railway Hotel, W. W. Bronson, proprietor - was also located at this same intersection. The Railway Hotel was located on the southeast corner. See the detail of the 1851 map of the city of Carbondale (reproduced here).

Incidentally, at the edges of this 1851 Carbondale map are depicted nine of the most significant buildings of the city at that time, one of which is the Railway Hotel (left side of map). And before we leave W. W. Bronson and the Railway Hotel, it is interesting to note here that in 1901 a daguerreotype showing the exterior of the Railway Hotel, with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bronson on the porch and the old stage coach with people on top, was exhibited in the exhibition held in conjunction with the celebrations of the semi-centennial of the city of Carbondale. This daguerreotype was probably taken by S. S. Benedict (see above).

From a display ad placed in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 5, No. 49), September 29, 1854, p. 2, col. 6, we learn precisely in which building Watt's Store was located.

The advertiser - C. M. Ferry - "would respectfully inform his friends and the public, that he has rented of Wm. F. Underwood, the APPARATUS, ROOMS, &c., which were lately occupied by Messrs. Collamer & Pughe. Over Watt's store, (Campbell's building) opposite Bronson's Hotel." In the detail of the 1851 Carbondale map which we here reproduce, the "P Campbell" building is clearly indicated on the southwest corner of the intersection, the spot today occupied by the First National Bank. If the "P Campbell" on the 1851 map is identical to the Campbell of "Campbell's building" mentioned in the C. M. Ferry display ad - and it seems relatively certain that he is - then it is interesting to note the following Administrator's Notice which appeared in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 6, No. 5, January 12, 1855, p. 3, col. 5):

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.
Estate of PETER CAMPBELL, late of Carbondale City, deceased.
Notice is hereby given, that Letters of Administration having been granted to the undersigned upon the Estate of Peter Campbell, late of Carbondale City, Luzerne County, deceased this is therefore to give notice to all persons indebted to said Estate to make payment to them without delay, and those having claims to present them, duly attested, for settlement to JAMES CLARKSON,
JOHN S. LAW, Administrators.
Carbondale, Sept. 13th, 1854. 47-6w

And, if the reader will allow the author one further bit of "nit picking," we learn from a display ad placed in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (March 25, 1855, reproduced below) by William F. Underwood, that the first initial of the Mr. Watt who owned the store over which was this daguerrean gallery was "A": "Carbondale City Improved Sky Light Gallery, Over A. Watt's Store."

In 1850, a great fire swept through Carbondale, destroying a great many buildings on Main and Church Streets. From a detailed description of the losses reported in the Lackawanna Citizen and Carbondale Democrat of October 4, 1850 - and reprinted in Historical Souvenir of Carbondale, Penn'a., 1901, (pages unnumbered, in section PROPERTY VALUATIONS, approximately p. 31) - we learn the following information concerning the property of Peter Campbell and Wm. W. Bronson:

West side of Main Street
Peter Campbell, corner store, $3,000, insured $1,000.
Upon the East side (of Main Street)
Peter Campbell, jewelry shop building torn down and thus buildings below it saved, $400, no insurance
Wm. W. Bronson, two shops, store and Railway Hotel, establishment entire, $8,500, insured $3,500.

Campbell and Bronson both apparently rebuilt, since they both are in operation when our story opens on June 1, 1853.

In Volume 5, Number 2, of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal of August 5, 1853 (p. 2, col. 4) appeared an ad placed by the daguerreotyping firm of Collamer & Patton. This ad - reproduced here - is the earliest printed reference I have found mentioning the firm, but from internal evidence within the ad itself - the date of the original composition (writing) of the ad, June 1, 1853 - we can be certain that the firm of Collamer & Patton was open for business at least two months before August 5, 1853, i.e., June 1, 1853.

NEW DAGUERREAN GALLERY
Over Watt's Store, opposite Bronson's Hotel

COLLAMER & PATTON respectfully announce that they are now ready with the best quality of Apparatus, and every facility for taking Pictures in the highest style of the art.

They possess a thorough theoretical and practical knowledge of the Art, backed by long experience. Their Pictures are unlike the ordinary productions of the Art in respect to their brilliancy and boldness of impression, seeming to round out into form and life, and appear like perfect solids to the deceived sense: so delicate and truthful are they that their effect is perfectly bewitching.

Pictures taken equally as well in cloudy as clear weather.

A call is solicited from all the admirers of the Fine Arts.
June 1, 1853.

Apparently - if we are to take literally the first sentence of the text of this ad - there was a certain amount of anxiousness, perhaps the word is anticipation, on the part of Collamer & Patton, or on the part of the public, or perhaps on the part of both, for the opening of the "new daguerrean gallery." This we can sense from the words "are now" in the first sentence:

COLLAMER & PATTON respectfully announce that they are now ready with the best quality of Apparatus, and every facility for taking Pictures in the highest style of the art.

Such precise documentation of the beginning of the firm of Collamer & Patton's daguerreotyping activity enables - at least until conflicting information is uncovered - the city of Carbondale to claim that the third recorded instance of daguerreotyping in northeastern Pennsylvania took place in place in the city of Carbondale. S. S. Benedict, who we know took daguerreotypes in Carbondale in 1844, is without any close challengers, surely the first daguerreotypist in northeastern Pennsylvania. And George B. Chase in Scranton, possibly as early as 1851-1852, is surely the second. We know that Leroy Hancock was working in Honesdale before December 2, 1853, but just how much before we do not know. The Collamer & Pughe ad of June 1, 1853, might just give them precedence over Hancock's activity in Honesdale. Hancock did not open in Scranton until Sept. 15, 1854. And by Sept. 15, 1854, Carbondale could claim that two other daguerreotypists had been active there - William F. Underwood and C. M. Ferry.

Collamer, George W.

Three months after the Collamer & Patton ad was first composed (June 1, 1853), in Volume 5, Number 8 of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, Carbondale City, Luzerne County, Pa., September 23, 1853, p. 3, col. 2, appeared another ad for this same daguerrean gallery, but in this ad no mention is made of Patton:

The New DAGUERREAN GALLERY,
At the corner of Salem and Main-streets is in successful operation.

THE subscriber has constructed a SKY-LIGHT upon an entirely new plan, which is acknowledged by all superior to any other light in Northern Pennsylvania. Children of any age can be taken by this light, with the aid of his ELECTRO MAGNETIC SENSITIVE, as well as adults. You can go to his Gallery without fear of finding one of those "Mushroom Artists" having only a superficial knowledge of Daguerreotyping. Such pretended "Artists" palm off grim, grotesque and fading images, misnamed Pictures, (shocking libels on this beautiful Art and humanity itself as they are,) upon any who are not judges of the real merits of a good Picture. Persons visiting this Gallery, may rely upon being promptly and attentively served by one who has a thorough theoretical and practical knowledge of the Art, backed by long experience; who will give you truthful, soft-toned, life-like and imperishable

P O R T R A I T S, such as have always GIVEN the most perfect satisfaction, and taken in such A WAY

as to please the most fastidious.

Pictures set in Cases, Locketts, Breast Pins, &c., from 75 Cents to Ten Dollars. Daguerreotypes of other Pictures copied with the greatest accuracy. New Pictures set in old Cases. Likenesses taken equally well in cloudy as clear weather, (except small children.)

Instructions given in all the recent improvements in the Art, on reasonable terms.

G. W. COLLAMER.

Carbondale, Sept. 23, 1853.

Patton has left the firm, but G. W. Collamer - so we learn from the opening words of the ad - is making a go of the daguerreotyping business. Proudly he announced that "the new daguerrean gallery, At the corner of Salem and Main-streets is in successful operation." And too, in addition to announcing that he is well trained and highly versatile, Collamer announces that he is willing - for a price - to teach the new art to others: "Instructions given in all the recent improvements in the Art, on reasonable terms."

Before we leave this ad, it is worth noting the date of its composition and the date of its first appearance are the same - September 23, 1853. It is on such evidence as this that we can be certain that the first ad - published on August 5, 1853, but dated internally June 1, 1853 - was published on the date of its composition. This second ad, which first appeared on September 23, 1853, was repeated in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal; I have found it in the October 7, 1853 and January 6, 1854 issues.

Collamer & Pughe

George M. Reynolds, Editor and Proprietor of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, in his column in Volume 5, Number 16 of the paper, Friday morning, December 2, 1853, p. 2, col. 1, took special notice of some recent developments in the daguerreotyping activity of G. W. Collamer:

We perceive by the Honesdale press that our esteemed citizens, Pughe and Collamer, have purchased the Sky-light Gallery formerly occupied by Leroy Hancock, and are prepared to furnish pictures of the good looking people of that Borough. We consider it fortunate for Honesdale to have such an Artist as George W. Collamer locate among them, for he is a "decided character" in his profession, and we doubt not but what the emanations from these gentlemen's Gallery, will have a tendency to elevate the standard of taste in the fine arts, and diffuse a more chaste and correct idea of the beautiful art of Daguerreotyping. We hope the community will improve the opportunity, as it is the intention of these Gentlemen shortly to make a professional tour through the principal cities of Europe. Success attend them.

Their Gallery in this city is located opposite Bronson's Hotel.

These remarks by Reynolds are extraordinarily important for our purpose here of outlining the development of the art of studio photography in northeastern Pennsylvania because they contain two bits of information that are nowhere else available:

1. Hancock was located in Honesdale before he went to Scranton.
2. Collamer & Pughe bought out Hancock's "Sky-light Gallery."

And who is Mr. Lewis Pughe?

Well, if he is the same person as the "L. Pughe" who in 1851 ran a business in the middle of the West side of Main Street, in the block between Salem Avenue and the location where City Hall was later built, then he was a "Merchant Tailor."

In 1858 Lewis Pughe was a school director of Carbondale; in The Advance, Vol. I, No. 49 (May 8, 1858), p. 3, col. 1, the city officers of Carbondale are listed. The school directors listed are these: Lewis Pughe, Anthony Grady, Dan'l Scurry, Archibald Browning, Henry Jadwin, Wm. Brennan. And Lewis Pughe was still alive in 1880, for in the Introduction to 1880, he is twice mentioned:

Of those who have aided in the preparation of the work, or furnished valuable information, the publishers desire to mention. . . Lewis Pughe

The publishers are enabled to present the steel plate portrait of Governor Henry M. Hoyt, of Wilkes-Barre, which appears in this work, through the generous co-operation (as a testimonial of their esteem for Governor Hoyt) of. . . Lewis Pughe. . .

In the editorial columns of the January 6, 1854 (p. 2, col. 2) issue of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 5, Number 20), George W. Reynolds again made special note of daguerreotyping:

Remember that the weather makes no difference in the taking of Daguerreotypes. We have seen some of the finest, and soft-toned specimens of the art, taken in rainy and cloudy weather, at Collamer and Pughe's Gallery. They have discovered a new process which they term "Electro Galvanic Sensitive" which consists in an entirely new combination of chemicals, that produces these soft toned and life like pictures, equal to the specimens on exhibition at the chrysal Palace. They deserve extensive patronage.

With such a person as the editor of the local paper so staunchly behind them, how could Collamer and Pughe fail.

In the fall of 1853 Collamer was advertising that he could do pictures with the aid of a process he called "Electro Magnetic Sensitive." Can this "Electro Galvanic Sensitive" which he now advertises be yet something different from "Electro Magnetic Sensitive"? It is interesting to learn that "soft toned" daguerreotypes were considered desirable, and from this one may well imagine the harsh products which had been - and probably still were - being produced elsewhere.

And finally, just in case the reader might need a reminder of what else - beside daguerreotyping - is taking place in the world in the early 1850s, the two brief notices which appear following Reynolds' remarks (cited immediately above) will give some indication:

As we write, the workmen are engaged in raising the Telegraph poles in front of our office; and from this indication, we presume we shall soon be connected by lightning communication with the 'rest of mankind.' - Lack. Herald

In the United States Court of Philadelphia, in the case of Harriet Beecher Stowe against the publisher in Philadelphia, charged with an infringement of the plaintiff's copyright of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," by publishing a German translation of that work, Judge Grier decided that such translation was not an infringement of the plaintiff's copyright.

In the editorial columns of the February 10, 1854 (p. 2, col. 1) issue of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 5, Number 24) George M. Reynolds continued to point out to his readers the "Skylight Gallery opposite Bronson's hotel":

DAGUERREOTYPES! "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." Mothers! while the flush of childhood is lingering upon the faces of your children, have it transferred by the mysterious fingers of light, in all its wild loveliness to the fadeless daguerreotype, at the Skylight Gallery opposite Bronson's hotel.

Just as from Reynolds' remark previous to this remark we may directly infer that a great many harsh - that is to say not soft-toned - daguerreotypes were being produced by operators other than Collamer & Pughe, so we may infer from the Reynolds remarks cited immediately above that some daguerreotypes taken around that time faded after they were taken.

In the late Spring of 1854, Collamer and Pughe themselves placed an ad (reproduced below) in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (the ad which is reproduced below appeared on a now loose, and undated, sheet of the paper; the closest the sheet may be dated is this: after Volume 5, Number 29, April 7, 1854, and before Volume 5, Number 36, June 16, 1854). With great poignancy the two verses of poetry used as the feature of their ad bespeak a use derived by the living of an image of the dead, a use which anyone who has ever gazed into a face in an old photograph well knows.

In July 1854, William F. Underwood announced - in a display ad, Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 5, No. 41, Aug. 4, 1854, p. 3, col. 1) - that he had purchased the Collamer & Pughe Daguerrean Gallery. The complete text of that ad is as follows:

(Advertisement.)

PICTURES -- DAGUERREOTYPES --- PORTRAITS

Wm. F. Underwood has the pleasure to announce to the Ladies and Gentlemen of Carbondale city and its vicinity, that he has purchased Collamer and Pughe's Daguerrean Gallery, including their "Mammoth Camera," the largest in Northern Pennsylvania, and intends to carry on the business in all its latest improvements. At a great expense he has purchased the sole right for this County of the "Electro Galvanic Sensitive Plates," which give a rich tone and brilliancy to his Pictures. Call and examine his exquisite specimens.

Pictures taken in all weathers, by the aid of his mammoth Camera. Children can be taken in one second. Pictures put in rings, lockets, breast pins, and in old cases. Just received a beautiful assortment of cases. Prices from one dollar upwards.

Underwood's Gallery, opposite Bronson's Hotel, Carbondale. July 1854.

For the Underwood occupancy of the former Collamer & Pughe gallery, see below, Underwood, William F.

It would be interesting to learn from whom Underwood bought the right for the "Electro Galvanic Sensitive Plates." In his remarks in the editorial column of January 6, 1854 (cited above) Reynolds said that Collamer & Pughe "have discovered a new process which they term 'Electro Galvanic Sensitive' which consists in an entirely new combination of chemicals, that produces those soft toned and life like pictures, equal to the specimens on exhibition at the crystal Palace." Is Reynolds here indulging in hyperbole, that is to say, is he over-exaggerating, or possibly repeating the "stretched truth" as he may have heard it. If Collamer & Pughe did invent a "new combination" did they patent their invention?

From later newspaper advertisements and editorials we know that Collamer did not cease daguerreotyping when he left Carbondale, and therefore surely he too continued to use the "Electro Galvanic Sensitive Plates," and so Underwood did not have the sole right.

G. W. Collamer - in partnership with Patton, Collamer & Patton - is first mentioned as a daguerreotypist working in Carbondale in a display ad, dated June 1, 1853. He is recorded in the fall of 1853, and in the spring of 1854 in Carbondale, too, but in July of 1854 William F. Underwood announced (see Underwood, William F., below) that he had "purchased Collamer & Pughe's Daguerrean Gallery." We do not know why G. W. Collamer sold his share of the firm of Collamer & Pughe, nor do we know where G. W. Collamer went at that time. But, from an announcement which appeared in the editorial column of the Carbondale paper, The Advance, of July 16, 1857 (Vol. 1, No. 9, p. 2, col. 3) we learn what Mr. Foedish and Mr. G. Collamer were doing at the time, and - from the same announcement - we get an inkling of what might well have been a common practice among studio photographers of the time.

We have been requested by Mr. Foedish to state that his Ambrotype Saloon will be closed for some time, as he has taken his apparatus to Hawley, so that the people of that locality may have an opportunity of supplying themselves with good likenesses.

Mr. G. Collamer is now at Waverly.

Charles Foedish has gone to the "greener pastures" of Hawley, and presumably, Mr. G. Collamer has for the same reason left Carbondale and gone to Waverly. The mountain has been brought to Mohammed - in order to increase business these men have gone to where the people who might be interested in having likenesses taken are. The tone of the remarks in the announcement seems to say that Mr. Foedish will be back in Carbondale after a while, that he has gone but his move is not permanent. And surely the same kind of arrangement was to be understood in the report about Mr. G. Collamer.

It seems important here to distinguish between this kind of "movement around a point" (a home base and short working residences here and there in the vicinity) and a working life spent continually on the road, in a portable gallery, pulled by horses, constantly going to new places.

One gets the sense that Foedish has set up a fixed gallery in Hawley, and one assumes that Mr. G. W. Collamer has done the same thing in Waverly.

Foedish's stay in Hawley lasted about five weeks (see Foedish, Charles, Hawley) and, as we shall see shortly, G. W. Collamer didn't put down very deep roots in Waverly either.

On July 16, 1857, The Advance reported (see above) that Mr. G. Collamer was then in Waverly.

We may speculate that Mr. G. Collamer spent a month, perhaps the summer, in Waverly, and then moved on to somewhere else. It will be recalled that Mr. Foedish's visit to Hawley to take likenesses there lasted for five weeks, and then he went somewhere else. In December, 1857, Mr. G. Collamer may have been in business in Honesdale, for a photographic firm by the name of Collamer & Condit opened for business there on December 9, 1857. I have not yet been able to determine whether the Collamer of the partnership is our Mr. G. Collamer, but I see no reason to doubt that it is.

Here is the ad which the firm of Collamer & Condit wrote on December 9, 1857, and ran frequently in the Carbondale paper, The Advance, beginning in December of 1857, and continuing at least through July 17, 1858 (this same ad appeared in Vol. 1, No. 30, December 12, 1857, p. 2, col. 7; Vol. 1, No. 31, p. 3, col. 3; Vol. 2, No. 7, July 17, 1858, p. 1, col. 2):

FINE ARTS GALLERY!

COLLAMER & CONDIT would respectfully inform the public that they have opened a New Photograph and Ambrotype Gallery, first door below Hamlin's Store, and directly opposite Col. Seeley's Mansion, where all kinds of Pictures will be taken in the best style of the Art, not inferior to the productions of any Establishment of the kind in the State. Having had a practical experience in all the improved methods of producing Pictures, they feel confident that all who may desire a good picture will not be disappointed at their hands. A large sky and side light has been built for the purpose, upon an improved plan, superior to any other Gallery in Northern Pennsylvania.

PHOTOGRAPHS, MELANOTYPES, AMBROTYPES, FEROTYPES.

In fact, Pictures in accordance with every recent improvement. To all we would say - give us a call, no pains will be spared to render our Gallery attractive in every feature.

Honesdale, Dec. 9, 1857

30-tf

Any doubts about whether the "Collamer" of Collamer & Condit is George W. Collamer, and any doubts about whether this George W. Collamer had a studio in Honesdale after 1858 are quickly dispelled by the following listing in The North-Eastern Counties Business Directory, 1861-1862, p. 14 (Wayne County Business Directory, Daguerreotypists):
COLLAMER G W Main Street Honesdale

We can be certain, moreover, that our Mr. G. W. Collamer whose activities in Carbondale and Waverly we have outlined above is the same Collamer who is mentioned in this notice which appeared in the Carbondale paper, The Advance (Vol. 2, No. 8, July 24, 1858, p. 3, col. 1):

PHOTOGRAPHS.—G. W. COLLAMER is now in our City making those inimitable and imperishable Photographs, and our principal citizens are having colored, plain and mezzotint Portraits made. Lovers of the "Fine Arts" are invited to call at Foedish's Gallery and see the style of picture. Those wishing pictures will bear in mind that Mr. C. will remain but two or three days longer.

But what are we to make of the fact that G. W. Collamer in this notice invites the public to see his work which is on display at Foedish's Gallery. At this time - the summer of 1858 - Charles Foedish's gallery was located "two doors above the Harrison House." (See the detail of the 1873 map of Carbondale, reproduced here, for the location of the Harrison House.) Are Collamer and Foedish old friends, and have they worked out a business relationship whereby Collamer may take likenesses in the Foedish Gallery while he is in town? Or did Collamer have his own gallery in town and have his work on display for the public to see at Foedish's Gallery?

If the G. W. Collamer return visit to Carbondale is a "cameo" appearance - the brief appearance of a star - is the urgency to leave due to the fact that he has to get back to Honesdale and take care of business there.

Many years later, in 1872, Collamer and Condit are again recorded as partners in a photographic business, but this time it is in Wilkes Barre and the names on the masthead are reversed. In the Wilkes Barre section of the classified business directory of the patrons of the 1872 Walling and Gray New Topographical Atlas of the state of Pennsylvania with Descriptions Historical, Scientific, and Statistical... is listed under "Photographers" the following:

Note: Beginning in 1905-1906 there seems to be some contradiction in the directories about the location of the Cramer Carbondale studio. The 1905-1906 directory, for example, on pp. 84 and 253 says "23 N. Main" but on left side lines display ads in the same volume "21 North Main" is given. The same contradiction occurs in the 1907-1908 directory. Curiously, the 1910 directory gives "21 North Main."

The following biography of Adon L. Cramer appeared in the Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania..., 1897, pp. 218-219.

Adon L. Cramer. In the photographic business Mr. Cramer has built up an excellent trade and has gained a reputation as a reliable, efficient artist, thoroughly informed in regard to his chosen occupation, familiar with the most modern methods and possessing the artist taste that fits him for the successful prosecution of his work. He is the proprietor of studios at Nos. 309-311 Lackawanna Avenue, Scranton, No. 21 North Main Street, Carbondale, and North Main Street, Jermyn, but gives his personal attention to the studio in Carbondale and resides in this city, on the corner of Dart Avenue and Laurel Street.

The father of our subject, J. P. Cramer, was born in the town of Greenfield, this county, in 1827, and throughout life followed the occupation of farmer, dying when sixty-two. For his wife he chose Abigail Spencer, who was born in Greenfield Township in 1831, and is now living in Carbondale. They were the parents of five children, namely: Wesley J., a druggist in business in Florida; Emma H., wife of Xerxes Williams, of Greenfield Township; Adon L.; William, deceased; and Herbert S., a photographer residing in Carbondale and engaged in business in Scranton.

On the family homestead in Greenfield Township the subject of this sketch was born March 15, 1859. He attended the common schools in youth and worked on the farm until twenty-three, meeting with success in agricultural pursuits, of which he is still fond. However, a prolonged attack of sciatic rheumatism obliged him to select an occupation that would enable him to avoid exposure. Acting upon medical advice, he gave up farming. A brother urged him to try photography, and he did so, going to Scranton, where he soon learned the business and found himself adapted to the work. He followed the trade in different places until 1882, when he established a gallery in Carbondale and here he has built up a good business.

By his marriage to Marion Kenyon of Greenfield Township, Mr. Cramer has one child, Delbert. In politics he is a Republican, firm in his allegiance to party principles. Since 1880 he has been connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Adon L. Cramer is probably the grandson of the Adon Cramer who placed the following notice in the Northern Pennsylvanian, a Carbondale newspaper, on October 2, 1835 (Vol. IV, No. 31, p. 2, col. 5)

STRAY HEIFER.

Came to the enclosure of the Subscriber, on or about the middle of August last, A BLACK YEARLING HEIFER, without any particular marks about her, by which she may be described.

The owner is desired to come and prove property, pay charges and take her away.

ADON CRAMER.

Greenfield October 20, 1835

We know from the 1897 biography of Adon L. that his father, J. P. Cramer, was born in the town of Greenfield in 1827. If J. P. Cramer was born in 1827 then his father could well have been the "Subscriber" who placed the notice in the paper in 1835. And if the generational distribution of these dates were not enough to argue the case, the recurrence of the unusual name of Adon seems to remove all doubt about our speculation that Adon L. is the grandson of Adon.

The obituary of one of Delbert Cramer's sons, Carl D. Cramer, has recently appeared in the Carbondale (Pa.) News, Wednesday, June 4, 1980, p. 9. From this obituary we learn that "At one time he (Carl D.) was associated with his father (Delbert) and brother (John) in the family photography business in Carbondale."

On September 15, 1854, C. M. Ferry placed a display ad in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, Vol. 5, No. 49, Sept. 29, 1854, p. 2, col. 6) announcing that he had "rented of Wm. F. Underwood, the APPARATUS, ROOMS, &c., which were lately occupied by Messrs. Collamer & Pugh."

DAGUERREAN ROOMS.

THE undersigned would respectfully inform his friends and the public, that he has rented of Wm. F. Underwood, the APPARATUS, ROOMS, &c., which were lately occupied by Messrs. Collamer & Pugh.

Over Watt's store, (Campbell's building) opposite Bronson's Hotel;

And at the rooms aforesaid, he is prepared to give entire satisfaction in the Daguerreotype Line, to those who may honor him with a call.

C. M. FERRY.

Carbondale City, Sept. 15th, 1854.

Charles Marsh Ferry began his photographic career in Tunkhannock (Susquehanna County), Pa. We know this from a display ad which he placed in the Tunkhannock, Pa. newspaper, the North Branch Democrat, on Wednesday, May 17, 1854, p. 3, col. 4. Since this display ad, which we reproduce below, is internally dated March 8, 1854, we may assume that the ad was first run on that day, and from the opening words of the text of the ad we may safely say that Ferry first opened his doors in Tunkhannock for business on March 8, 1854.

The New Daguerrean Gallery, in S. Stark's New Building, below the American Hotel, is now IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION. The Subscriber has constructed a Sky-Light upon an entirely new plan, which is acknowledged by all superior to any light in Northern Pennsylvania. Children of any age can be taken by this light, by the aid of his ELECTRO-GALVANIC SENSITIVE, as well as adults. You can go to this Gallery without fear of finding one of those "Mushroom Artists," having only a superficial knowledge of Daguerreotyping. Such pretended 'artists' palm off grim, grotesque and fading images, misnamed Pictures, (shocking libels on this beautiful art and humanity itself, as they are,) upon any who are not judges of the real merits of a picture. Persons visiting this gallery may rely upon being promptly and attentively served by those who have a thorough theoretical and practical knowledge of the art, backed by long experience; who will give you truthful, soft-toned, life-like and imperishable PORTRAITS, such as have always given the most perfect satisfaction, and taken in such a way as to please the most fastidious. Pictures set in Cases, Lockets, Breast Pins, &c., from 75 cents to ten dollars. Daguerreotypes of other pictures copied with the greatest accuracy. New pictures set in old cases. Likenesses taken equally well in cloudy as clear weather, (except small children.) Instructions given in all the recent improvements in the art, on reasonable terms.

C. M. FERRY.

Tunkhannock, March 8, 1854--tf.

Curiously, with the exception of the opening words of the ad (The New Daguerrean Gallery, in S. Stark's New Building, below the American Hotel, is now IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION.) and the closing words of the ad (C. M. FERRY, Tunkhannock, March 8, 1854--tf.), the text of this C. M. Ferry ad is an exact replica of an ad which G. W. Collamer placed in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal on September 23, 1853 (Vol. 5, Number 8; p. 3, col. 2). See G. W. Collamer, above, where the text of this Collamer ad is also reproduced.

Thanks to Shirley Ferry Bell (Mrs. Thomas A. Bell), great granddaughter of Charles Marsh Ferry, we have recently learned a great deal about Charles Marsh Ferry and his family. The following information about the parents of C. M. Ferry's wife, published by Albert Dexter Rust, Record of the Rust Family, (Waco, Texas: 1891), pp. 325-326, was supplied by Mrs. Bell:

Solomon Rust (born Stonington, CT, Jan. 9, 1791; died Waymart, PA, Jan. 25, 1854) married in Fair Haven, CT., Dec. 17, 1814, Betsey Sanford (born Fair Haven, CT., Nov. 27, 1798; died Poughkeepsie, N.Y., June 15, 1879).

To the couple were born ten children. The eighth and ninth children, Elizabeth Roe Rust, and Sarah Louise Rust, are, respectively, the wife and the sister-in-law, to two of Carbondale's pioneer photographers, Charles Marsh Ferry, and S. S. Benedict. Albert Dexter Rust gives the following information about Elizabeth and Sarah:

viii Elizabeth Roe, b. 24 Oct., 1835; m. in Carbondale, Pa., 11 Apr., 1852, Charles Marsh Ferry; d. in C., 1861. They had:
i Clara Maud, (Ferry) b. 19 June, 1853.
ii William iii Frederick. The father and children removed west soon after the death of the mother. Nothing has been known of him by the rest of the family for years.

ix Sarah Louise, b. 15 June, 1839; m. in Carbondale, Pa., 12 Nov., 1859, Eugene A., son of Hon. S. S. and Rowena (Bartlett) Benedict; she d. 28 Oct., 1873. Their children were all born in Carbondale. They had: i Rena, (Benedict) b. 24 Sept., 1860; d. 13 Dec., 1861. ii Carrie Augusta, b. 15 Mar., 1863; res. with her father in Carbondale, Pa.

In addition to the information about Charles Marsh Ferry given above, we have learned the following about him, from his great granddaughter, Shirley Ferry Bell.

Solomon Rust (who according to the Rust family history and the 1850 Carbondale census used the name Russ in Carbondale) and his wife, Elizabeth Sanford Rust, and the couple's three youngest girls (Elizabeth Roe, Sarah Louise and Carrie Virginia) are all recorded in the 1850 census of Carbondale.

"My grandfather Wm. Henry Ferry was born in Carbondale in 1855, his brother in 1858, also there. Their older sister Clara was born in Salem Corners, Wayne Co. which is now Hamblinton. [For a discussion of the name change, from Hamblinton to Salem Corners to present-day Hamlin, see Northeastern Pennsylvania, I, 4, May 21, 1980, p. 16.] I believe my great-grandfather, Charles Marsh Ferry was also born in PA but I don't know where - in 1828." (letter of April 15, 1980, from Shirley Ferry Bell to Northeastern Pennsylvania)

In the 1860 U. S. Census of Carbondale, Charles Marsh Ferry and his family are listed; C. M. Ferry in 1860 is listed as a wagonmaker. After his wife, Elizabeth, died in 1861, C. M. Ferry left Carbondale and moved to Ohio, where he married Sarah Elizabeth Hilbert, and became a physician. He is recorded as a physician at Crawfordville, Iowa, in 1873. In 1882, he and Sarah are in Reynolds, Nebraska, where he is practicing medicine. He died the end of 1897.

--Hawley

--August 27, 1857 Over Wilson's Auction Rooms

--June 12, 1858 Two Doors above the Harrison House. (Is this the same as "Over Wilson's Auction Rooms"?)

Note: It is difficult to determine just what "Two doors above the Harrison House" might have meant in 1857.

When the 1851 Carbondale map was drawn, Harrison House did not exist, at least not the way it did later - on the 1873 map. In 1873 the Harrison House occupied the site on North Main Street which on the 1851 map is occupied by both "C. Harrison" and "W. R. Baker & Co. Store."

In 1857 was Harrison House located where on the 1851 map the property of "C. Harrison" is indicated. If it was, then what is "Two doors above the Harrison House"? Are we to count vacant lots, or are we to take the indication literally and count doors?

Now for the location of Wilson's Auction Rooms. The 1851 ground-plan map lists three locations that belonged to A. Wilson:

--S. Main Street, west side of block between present-day Sixth Avenue, and "Street No. 7 or Mechanic Street" (on the 1851 map) two buildings alongside of each other marked once "A. Wilson"

--S. Main Street, east side of block between Street No. 7 or Mechanic Street and Street No. 8 or Bridge Street one building marked "A. Wilson"

--Street No. 7 or Mechanic Street, north side of block between S. Main and S. Church one building marked "A. Wilson Shoe Shop"

Any of these three locations might be where "Wilson's Auction Rooms" were located.

--May 7, 1859 (Over A. Watt's Store) Corner of of Main and Dundaff Streets

--Honesdale, there by One door above Hand & Kirtland's Store, (formerly Mr. Carrier's Establishment).

The earliest printed reference I have found concerning Charles Foedish, ambrotypist, is this display ad which he placed in The Advance (Vol. 1, No. 5, June 18, 1857, p. 3, col. 2)

But from the particular words used at two different places in the wording of this ad - "ONLY TWO WEEKS MORE," and "still continues to take" - it is perfectly clear that Charles Foedish was taking ambrotypes in the city of Carbondale before June 4, 1857, the date on which the ad was originally written.

The Foedish display ad reproduced above was published June 18, 1857; three weeks later - July 9, 1857 - Foedish again placed a display ad in The Advance (Vol. 1, No. 8, July 9, 1857, p. 3, col. 7). This ad is identical to the one reproduced above except in the following particulars:

--line 1 here reads: "POSITIVELY BUT ONE WEEK MORE."

--the "A" in line 2 of June 18, 1857 ad is here eliminated.

--the paragraph that begins "For adults a cloudy..." in the June 18, 1857 ad is here eliminated.

The "now or never" urgency of the first ad with this second ad reached a state of finality -- "POSITIVELY BUT ONE WEEK MORE." True to his word in this second ad, Mr. Foedish asked the editors of The Advance to announce in their issue of one week later (Vol. 1, No. 9, July 16, 1857, p. 2, col. 3) that he would be out of town for some time -

We have been requested by Mr. Foedish to state that his Ambrotype Saloon will be closed for some time, as he has taken his apparatus to Hawley, so that the people of that locality may have an opportunity of supplying themselves with good likenesses.

Mr. G. Collamer is now at Waverly.

Charles Foedish remained in Hawley for a little over five weeks, and then he returned to Carbondale. In The Advance of Thursday, August 27, 1857 (Vol. 1, No. 15, p. 2, col. 7; the same ad was repeated in Vol. 1, No. 16, p. 3, col. 3) he placed the following display ad:

AMBROTYPES.

CHARLES FOEDISH would respectfully inform the citizens of Carbondale and vicinity, that he has returned to his old Gallery on Main Street over Wilsons Auction Rooms where he will be happy to receive all of his old friends and new who may favor him with their patronage. Carbondale Aug, 27th

Charles Foedish is mentioned in two different display ads which appeared in the Carbondale paper, The Advance, in the summer of 1858:

He - or rather his gallery, Foedish's Gallery - is also mentioned in a notice which appeared in The Advance of July 24, 1858 (Vol. 2, No. 8, p. 3, col. 1):

Photographs. - G. W. Collamer is now in our City making those inimitable and imperishable Photographs, and our principal citizens are having colored, plain and mezzotint Portraits made. Lovers of the "Fine Arts" are invited to call at Foedish's Gallery and see the style of picture. Those wishing pictures will bear in mind that Mr. C will remain but two or three days longer.

I am at a loss to say precisely what may be read between the lines of the notice, but it seems to me that what it is saying is this:

G. W. Collamer, who worked in Carbondale, then sold his Carbondale gallery, then shows up in Waverly, then possibly opened a gallery in Honesdale, with a partner named Condit, has come back to Carbondale and is working here for a while in the studio of Charles Foedish, a colleague and possibly an old friend.

"All roads lead to Rome," and in the photography business in Carbondale from 1853 to 1860, the "Rome" is "Over Watt's Store, opposite Bronson's Hotel." We have seen how from 1853-1854 three separate photographers - Collamer & Patton, William F. Underwood, and C. M. Ferry - did business from this location. Now, with Charles Foedish we come to the fourth occupant of this same location. At some time after June 12, 1858 - when he still advertised his location as "Two Doors above the Harrison House" - Charles Foedish moved to a new location - "(Over A. Watt's Store) Corner of Main and Dundaff Streets." We know this from the following ad - written May 7, 1859, published in the Herald Advance (Vol. III, No. 33, January 14, 1860, p. 4, col. 3):

This photograph was recently published in the Carbondale (Pa.) News, Wednesday, April 23, 1980, p. 4, with the following caption: "MAIN STREET, Carbondale, during flood, probably in 1922. The last notice I have found concerning Charles Foedish in Carbondale is the one which appears below, from the Carbondale paper, the Weekly Advance (Vol. IV, No. 37, p. 1, col. 2) of February 9, 1861. From this ad we learn that Foedish is still at the new location - "over A. Watt's Store, corner of Main and Dundaff Streets" - but that he now has a new name for his gallery - Excelsior Gallery - EXCELSIOR GALLERY OF PHOTOGRAPHS, AMBROTYPES, And all other Sunlight Pictures. CHARLES FOEDISH STILL CONTINUES TO TAKE PICTURES in the Latest and Best Styles at his Rooms over A. Watt's Store, corner of Main and Dundaff Streets. PICTURES neatly put up in good Cases and Frames at the LOWEST PRICES FOR CASH, and warranted equal to the very best furnished at any other Gallery. STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES taken in the best style. Also, PHOTOGRAPHS taken on paper, and finished in the best manner. All those desiring Good Pictures are invited to call.

Carbondale, Sept. 29, 1860. 18.

The new ambrotype process is first mentioned in the area in 1857, in two display ads: one by the Honesdale firm of Collamer & Condit, and the other by the Carbondale operator, Charles Foedish. It is tempting to assume, therefore, that the ambrotype of Mr. and Mrs. John Watt, loaned by Mrs. Alfred Pascoe to the exhibition held in 1901 in conjunction with the semi-centennial celebrations and listed in the catalogue of the exhibition (no. 182) is the work of Charles Foedish.

Note: A display ad published in the Carbondale paper, The Advance, August 8, 1893, p. 3, col. 6, gives the location of the Foster Photograph Gallery as "Over H. B. Jadwin's Store, Main St."

Charles Melville, Jr., letter to Sheffield Publications, Inc., dated January 16, 1980: "Mr. D. A. Cramer and Foster's were the leading photographers of Carbondale in years past, both on Main Street, where Lijle Shoe Store and Raub's Shoe Store now are."

The following biography of William B. Foster appeared in the Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania..., 1897, pp. 302 & 305. It is particularly informative because it was written during Mr. Foster's lifetime.

The present age has witnessed many improvements in commerce, arts and sciences, but it is doubtful if any line shows greater advancement than has been made in the art of photography. Go into a modern studio and examine with the eye of a connoisseur the pictures upon exhibition, and you will come away with an enhanced admiration for the men who have brought the art up from a crude state to its present condition of perfection. Of Mr. Foster it may be said that he has made a careful study of the work and has introduced all modern improvements into his studio at Carbondale.

The father of our subject, James Fletcher Foster, was born in Manchester, England, in 1835. He obtained his education in the schools and institute of that city, and was engaged in a printing office when a lad, but was afterward apprenticed to learn the trade of a machinist. After serving his time he was examined as to his proficiency for the British Merchant service. Passing satisfactorily, he was ordered out on the East India service, and at once proceeded on a man-of-war to the Orient, serving a period of four years. He returned to England and shortly afterwards came to America, proceeding directly to Scranton, where he had a sister living. In 1865 he married Alice Lindsay, daughter of William Lindsay, of Carbondale. Three children were born of this union, Maggie May, William B., and Bertie, who died in infancy. The wife and mother died July 4, 1871. Some three years afterward he again married, his second wife being Mrs. William Ousey, of Danbury, Conn. She is now living with our subject. J. B. Foster followed the trade of machinist in various parts of the states until his death, which occurred at Carbondale January 26, 1893. The paternal grandfather and grandmother of our subject were William and Sarah (Fletcher) Foster, the latter belonging to the Society of Quakers.

William B. Foster was born in Carbondale, December 12, 1868, and was early thrown upon his own resources, making his own way in the world from boyhood. He was engaged in various occupations until fifteen years of age. It then became his desire to learn the photographic business, and as soon as the way was opened he did so. In spite of obstacles, in spite of limited means, he became successful, and deserves mention among the hard-working, intelligent business men of the city. He started in business for himself, and opened a well equipped studio at the corner of Sixth Avenue and Main Street in 1893, and has built up a good trade, having among his patrons many of the best families of Carbondale.

February 1, 1894, Mr. Foster married Jennie Bernd, of Danbury, Conn. In local politics he is a prominent worker in the Republican party, and a member of the county committee.

William B. Foster may be the "Foster, Manager" who managed the Cramer studio in Olyphant, Pa. See Cramer, Olyphant.

The Carbondale Leader, Wednesday afternoon, March 16, 1898, p. 5

DON'T GO TO KLONDIKE FOR PHOTOGRAPHS. A word of advise from Mr. Foster the high art Photographer corner Main street and Sixth avenue, Carbondale, Pa. In order to introduce my latest beautiful Mezzo Photos I am now prepared to extend to the Public of Carbondale and surrounding towns the greatest and most liberal offer ever introduced in the line of photographic art. I have contracted with my representatives Messrs. Gibson and Deveau and given them full authority to sell the complimentary tickets and to advertise coupons attached to some. They will solicit my trade and show samples of my latest work and everybody should take advantage of this offer as only limited number of tickets are issued and positively none will be sold at my studio and I guarantee to fulfill what my tickets call for. Full line of kodaks, and supplies for sale at studio.

Respectfully Yours,
It
W. B. FOSTER.

One swallow doesn't make a summer, but two swallows do. The first time I came across the name "S. S. Hall" - in William C. Darrah, THE WORLD OF STEREOGRAPHS, 1977, p. 209 ("Hall, S. S. Carbondale") - I assumed that since there is a well-documented photographer in Carbondale in 1873 by the name of Sedgwick S. Hull that "S. S. Hall" was a typographical error and that "S. S. Hall" should be "S. S. Hull."

The second time I came across the name "S. S. Hall" - in The North-Eastern Counties Business Directory, 1861-2, p. 55 (Luzerne County Business Directory, Daguerreotypists), "HALL S S Carbondale" - I immediately remembered that I had once before come across a reference to "S. S. Hall" which I had then assumed was a typographical misspelling of "S. S. Hull."

Now I am not at all sure about what to do, and so I offer the evidence above, and am content to wait until more information-surfaces.

Later, he was "with S. S. Hull, at Carbondale, for four months. . ." For the complete career of Doud, see his name under Waymart, Wayne County, and - after 1900 - Honesdale, Wayne County.

-Richard Edwards, Industries of Pennsylvania, Statistical and Trade Review, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Pittston, Plymouth, Carbondale, Kingston (Philadelphia: Richard Edwards, Editor and Publisher, 1881), p. 328

W. E. KIRBY. - Manufacturer and Dealer in Furniture. No. 413 Church Street.

In the manufacture of furniture a large and extensive business is carried on in Carbondale, the leading manufacturer being Mr. W. E. Kirby, who, for the past nine years has carried on the business at No. 413 Church street, producing work unsurpassed either in style, design or workmanship. He occupies a large building, four stories in height, 37 X 100 feet dimensions, in the sales-rooms of which, on the first and second floors, he displays an attractive assortment in great variety, of neat and tasteful furniture, of modern design and a high class of workmanship, and comprising one of the most comprehensive stocks in the city, consisting of handsome parlor and chamber suits in walnut, mahogany and other popular woods, in all the unique and fashionable designs, upholstered in the highest style of the art. Besides he has a full assortment of dining-room kitchen, and general household furniture; also mirrors and looking-glasses, picture frames, mouldings, brackets, etc., mattresses, bed and bedding, spring beds, etc. In the items of carpets a fine display is made of all the various kinds of Ingrain, Brussels, etc.; also oil cloths, rugs, mats and mattings. In short, everything required in furnishing a house can be obtained with such prices attached as to attract the attention of purchasers. A specialty is made of filling orders for all kinds of furniture to order. Mr. Kirby being thoroughly familiar with the wants of customers, gives him a decided adaptability to the management of the business.

In the workshops five skilled hands are employed, and particular attention is given to the repairing of furniture, upholstering, etc. Since the establishment of this firm by Mr. Kirby, nine years ago, it has met with a decided success, and is not only the leading but the largest house in the business in the Lackawanna Valley. In the undertaking department he has every facility, and furnishes coffins, caskets, and everything required for the sad service of burial.

He has an elegant and fashionable style hearse which he furnishes on all occasions. Mr. W. E. Kirby is originally from Orange county, N.Y., and came to Carbondale in 1865, at which time he conducted a photographic art gallery, which he relinquished to engage in his present enterprise. He was also at one time in business at Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Penna., and during the war served in the Sixth N.Y. Heavy Artillery, and on receiving his discharge immediately came to Carbondale, where he has since resided, and gained hosts of friends and become popular with all classes of the community.

If my reading of this biography, and particularly the last paragraph, is correct, then this is what it says:

- W. E. Kirby conducted a photographic art gallery at Montrose, Susquehanna Co., Pa.
-then joined the Civil War
-and - in 1865 - when the War was over, "immediately came to Carbondale" and continued in his former occupation - that is to say, he opened a photographic art gallery.

Since at the time of the writing of this biography - 1881 - he is a manufacturer and dealer in furniture, and since he was in Carbondale when he relinquished the photographic business "to engage in his present enterprise," then he must have conducted a photographic art gallery in Montrose.

Precisely where his photographic art gallery in Carbondale was located, and precisely when he operated it - other than from 1865 onward - we can not say.

-A carte de visite portrait, of a woman dressed in "Civil War era" costume, in the collection of the author, bears on the back the following printed information:

KIRBY & BROTHERS, Fine ART GALLERY,
Carbondale, Penn.

Clearly this carte de visite portrait must have been taken by W. E. Kirby when he arrived in Carbondale right after the Civil War and opened his photographic art gallery.

Just precisely who his brothers are we do not know, but it may just be one of these "brothers" who we meet in the third "Kirby" reference.

-A large - 6 1/2" X 8 1/2" - portrait on paper of John Gillespie Murray, in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa., is inscribed in pencil in the center of the back:

P. J. Kirby
Carby

Is this "P J Kirby" one of the "Brothers" from the firm of "Kirby & Brothers" who had a Fine Art Gallery in Carbondale?

In the 1872 Walling and Gray New Topographical Atlas of the state of Pennsylvania with Descriptions Historical, Scientific, and Statistical... in the Carbondale section of the classified business directory of the patrons of the atlas is listed "John B. Kirby, Merchant."

Charles Norman Bronson. Photograph, 5" X 3 1/2", embossed on matt lower right: Foster's Art Gallery, Carbondale, Pa. Photograph in the collection of Mrs. Emily Miller, Carbondale, Pa. Copy print by DWP.

Mrs. Norman Bronson (the former Parna Barnes, 1818-1895). Cabinet photograph taken about 1870-1875, when subject was in her early fifties. Photograph in the collection of Mrs. Emily Miller, Carbondale, Pa. Copy print by DWP.

Mrs. Norman Bronson did not live in Carbondale. She and her husband always lived in Sidney, N.Y. In the collection of Mrs. Emily Miller, Carbondale, Pa., this picture of Mrs. Norman Bronson is paired with a picture of Mr. Norman Bronson which was taken by a Norwich photographer. Mrs. Bronson probably came to Carbondale to visit her son, Charles Norman Bronson, who was married in 1870 and who settled in Carbondale soon after that, for one of his children, the sister of Mrs. Miller's grandfather, was born in Carbondale in 1875. Charles Norman Bronson was the founder and owner of the Carbondale Milling Company (later the location of Race Lumberyard, Carbondale), and in 1878, C. N. Bronson joined in partnership with H. G. Phelps to form the firm of Phelps and Bronson. The following rather complete description of this partnership is given in Industries of Pennsylvania Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Pittston, Plymouth, Carbondale, Kingston, Statistical and Trade Review, (Philadelphia: Richard Edwards, Editor and Publisher, 1881), p. 328 (City of Carbondale section):

Henry H. Pierce is not listed.

The Carbondale city directories record two photographers by the name of Pierce who had studios in Carbondale: Edward J. is recorded at 7 Salem Avenue in 1888-1889, and Henry H. who, as we mentioned above, is recorded at 55 Salem Avenue in 1893-1894. I am not able to say whether the two are related but it seems fairly safe to assume that they are.

Henry H. Pierce is mentioned as a photographer in only one Carbondale directory, the 1893-1894 Williams' Lackawanna County Directory. And in the next directory which came out after the one in which Henry H. Pierce is listed, the 1895-1896 directory, Henry H. Pierce is not even listed in the citizens list of Carbondale, so perhaps he moved away from the city at some time after 1893-1894. He does show up again in Carbondale in 1905-1906, but he is not listed as a photographer in the classified business directory; he is listed - in the citizens list - as the proprietor of the Carbondale Cab Co.

As we have noted above, there are no surviving photographs known to the author which can be absolutely certainly attributed to Edward J. Pierce. That is to say, there are no extant photographs known to the author which bear the printed name and address of Edward J. Pierce. Quite the opposite is, however, true for Henry H. Pierce. There are many many cabinet photographs printed with the name Henry H. Pierce which have survived. The author has in his collection an "overgrown carte de visite with a fancy edge" printed at the base of the front "H. H. Pierce, 55 Salem Avenue, CARBONDALE, PA.," and the author has in his collection four cabinet photographs (in two formats, both plain backed) which are marked at the base of the front with these addresses:

Pierce HP (in monogram) Salem Ave
Carbondale, PA

and Pierce HP (in monogram) Carbondale,
Pa

Now, for the more difficult part - four different formats of cabinet photographs, all plain backed, marked at the base of the front in the following manners:

1. Pierce, Leading Photographer,
5 Market Street, Carbondale, Pa.
2. Pierce, No. 5 Market Street
Carbondale, Pa.
3. Pierce, Carbondale, Pa.
4. Pierce, Extra 329 Main Street,
Finish Carbondale, Pa.

Which of the two Pierces did these, Edward J. or Henry H.? On only one of the cabinet examples is there any external evidence; an example of format 3 is inscribed in pen on the back: "Merry Christmas, 1888." Is this a picture by Edward J.? It might be, since in the 1888-89 directory Edward J. is listed as a photographer, and Henry H. is not listed at all. The clothes worn by the sitters in the examples of formats numbers 1 and 2 are as old as, perhaps older than, those worn by the "Merry Christmas, 1888" example. Are the examples of formats numbers 1 and 2 then by Edward J.? Moreover, there is very good evidence that the photograph of Mrs. Norman Bronson (illustrated here) was taken between 1870 and 1875; the base of the front of the Mrs. Bronson cabinet photograph is printed with a variation of format number 1:

Pierce 5 Market-St.
Leading Photographer Carbondale, Pa.

Was Edward J. Pierce the photographer who photographed Mrs. Bronson?

And where is Market Street. I have not seen Market Street indicated on any of the many Carbondale maps I have studied. Since we know for certain that Edward J. and Henry H. were both at one time in business on Salem Avenue, it is tempting to assume that "Market Street" is another name for Salem Avenue. Salem Avenue, as it is now called, has over the years been given a great many names, among them Dundaff Street, and Street No. 5. But could "Market Street" be another name for Main Street. Surely "Market Street" was one or the other, either present-day Main or present-day Salem. One bit of evidence speaks for the "Main Street" side of the argument, and that evidence is this: in 1871 the Carbondale photographer S. Y. Richards was located at "No. 5 Main Street, A few doors below the Key Stone Hotel." Now, since in surveying several decades of nineteenth-century studio photography one frequently observes that any given photography studio was often occupied by a succession of different photographers, it seems reasonable to speculate that "5 Market Street" and "5 Market-St" and "No. 5 Market Street" are synonymous with the location given by S. Y. Richards in 1871 - "No. 5 Main Street, A few doors below the Key Stone Hotel."

But what about format No. 4 - 329 Main Street?

If "Market Street" was what is now called "Salem Avenue," then No. 5 Market Street must have been located near the intersection of Salem Avenue and River Street - Dundaff Street.

Richards, S. Y., 333 Main

Although S. Y. Richards is not listed in any city or county directories after 1875 - he is not in The Lackawanna County Business Directory, 1879-80, classified business directory, photographers, p. 122 - there is some evidence that he was working in Carbondale after 1875. And that evidence is this - a carte de visite portrait of Mary Emma Squire Loomis (reproduced in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Vol. I, Number 1, p. 1) bearing on the back the name and the address of Richards ("S. Y. Richards, Artist, Key Stone Block, over Fowler's Drug Store, Carbondale, Pa.") and - in her own handwriting - the name of the woman portrayed and the date the picture was taken ("Emma Squire Loomis About 1880").

BUT, S. Y. Richards opened a photographic gallery in Pittston in 1877 and was still there in 1881, and from the sound of the biography of him (given under S. Y. Richards, in the Pittston section), taken when he was conducting business in Pittston, he was firmly placed there - "since he has been in business in Pittston (he) has secured a large, substantial and liberal patronage."

Curiously, this biography makes no mention of his Carbondale years. The only part of the biography which we can relate to Carbondale - and we can do this because we know that he was in Carbondale before going to Pittston - is this sentence:

He was born near Danville, Montour Co., and served a regular apprenticeship in the profession and since has been in business in Pittston has secured a large, substantial, and liberal patronage.

Did S. Y. Richards learn the photography business from somebody in Carbondale?

See Collamer, Carbondale, for the Collamer phase of the history of the gallery "opposite Bronson's Hotel, Carbondale"; the precise location in Carbondale of this gallery is given there.

Less than six months after he had announced in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal that he had just purchased the former Collamer & Fughe Gallery located "opposite Bronson's Hotel," William F. Underwood announced in the same newspaper (Vol. 6, No. 2, December 8, 1854, p. 3, col. 1) that he wanted to sell the same daguerrean gallery.

Underwood's "daguerrean gallery for sale" display ad was repeated again in the same paper in subsequent issues—it appears again in Vol. 6, No. 5, January 12, 1855, p. 3, col. 6)—but he apparently did not find an immediate buyer for his daguerrean gallery and apparently he himself changed his plans about emigration to Kansas, for beginning in March of 1855 he ran an ad in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (The internal date within the ad is March 22, 1855; the impression of this ad which is reproduced below was published in Vol. 6, No. 18, April 20, 1855, p. 3, col. 6. The ad appeared as late as Vol. 6, No. 23, June 1, 1855, p. 4, col. 4.), an ad in which he no longer mentions that the daguerrean gallery is for sale:

By the fall of this same year - 1854 - William F. Underwood had succeeded in renting his "daguerrean gallery." This we know from a display ad placed in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 5, No. 49, September 29, 1854, p. 2, col. 6), by the renter - C. M. Ferry.

31. Wixson's Art Studio

first documented record: pre-August 31, 1881
last documented record:
location of studio:
unknown

Two carte de visite portraits which are each printed at the base of the front with this text - "From Wixson's Art Studio" - are inserted in a large - 13 1/4" X 15" - wedding certificate - dated Aug. 31, 1881 - in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa. I have not been able to identify the location of Wixson's Art Studio, but since both of the portrayed came from the Carbondale area - Eliza Holgate, the bride, was from Carbondale, and William Russell, the groom, was from Jermyn - Wixson's Art Studio stands a good chance of being local.

The story about how the wedding certificate came into the collection of the Russell Homestead is interesting and may briefly be sketched here.

The Russell Homestead was established by James Russell in 1843, and one of his sons, his youngest son, was William Russell. William Russell was married to Ora Esmarilda Loomis on April 10, 1907. (Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

- A Portrait of Theron Orasmus Loomis 1848-1911 and Mary Emma Squire 1854-1948 of Clinton Township, Wayne County, and Carbondale, Lackawanna County, Pa. - is a portrait of Ora Russell's parents. The William Russell of the wedding certificate from August 31, 1881, is not the same William Russell who married Ora Esmarilda Loomis. The dates are completely wrong, and even if there were no dates recorded, the appearance of the William Russell in the 1881 wedding certificate is nothing like the appearance of the William Russell, the son of James Russell.

The certificate was many years ago - perhaps in 1963 or perhaps before that time - placed in a drawer between the upper and lower section of a bookcase which stood for years - perhaps from as early as 1850, when the original owner of the bookcase, John G. Murray, occupied 35 River Street, Carbondale. The bookcase and the book collection of John G. Murray which it contained stood in the same location at 35 River Street for many years - family tradition has it that the bookcase always stood in that same spot. During those years, the ground floor of 35 River Street on more than one occasion was partially filled with water from the overflowing of the Lackawanna River, which ran but a few feet from the back of the house, and throughout the endless series of floods which swept down the Lackawanna Valley in the springtime, the bookcase and the books and the wedding certificate survived. When 35 River Street was sold and the furniture divided up among the heirs, the bookcase and its contents came to the Russell Homestead, and many years after that, S. Robert Powell and Donald W. Powell were standing before the bookcase and inspecting some of the old books contained therein, when - in an inquisitive moment - S. Robert wondered if the middle portion of the bookcase contained a drawer, and, sure enough, a little tug on the edge revealed that it did, and there at the bottom of the drawer lay the wedding certificate from August 31, 1881. Someone, possibly Eleanor Pritchard Jones, possibly one of William Russell's sisters, placed the wedding certificate there. The details of when it was placed there and by whom are lost. We may imagine what happened. Someone came across the certificate and thought that it was the William Russell, son of James Russell, and the certificate found its way to 35 River Street. The fact that it was not William Russell, son of James Russell, but another William Russell, must have been wondered at and smiled at by all who were shown the document.

For another object found in that middle drawer of the John Murray bookcase - a portrait of John Murray himself - see the Carbondale photographer Kirby, above.

Henry C. Yarrington, photographer, 312 Main Street, was born in Dundaff, Pa., in 1842; came to Carbondale in 1865, and married Lucy Stowell, of Wellsboro, Pa. He served in the 142nd Pa. volunteers from 1862, to June, 1865.

The 1880 biography of Henry C. Yarrington says that he came to Carbondale in 1865; he is first mentioned as a photographer in Carbondale in 1875 - in partnership with a man named Spencer - Spencer & Yarrington, 310 Main (See Spencer & Yarrington, above). In the following year, 1875-1876, H. C. Yarrington is listed in business alone at the building next door to the business location of Spencer & Yarrington, 312 Main, and in the same 1875-1876 directory neither the partnership of Spencer & Yarrington, 310 Main, nor Spencer, at any location in Carbondale, is given. What happened to Spencer? Was it from Spencer that H. C. Yarrington learned the trade, or, if you prefer, the art of photography?

Shortly after H. C. Yarrington set up in the photography business in Carbondale he must have taken the carte de visite portrait of Rev. William B. Grow which is now in the collection of Rev. William P. Lewis, Scranton, Pa. The carte de visite is without a printed address on the base of the front, but is printed at the center of the back with this address:

H. C. YARRINGTON, Photographer, Carbondale, Pa. At the top of the back this carte de visite is inscribed "Rev. Wm. B. Grow." Rev. Grow's pastorate at Carbondale's Berean Baptist Church we have discussed in detail in a previous issue of this quarterly (Vol. 1, No. 2, p. 12). Rev. Grow came to Carbondale in 1865, and the Yarrington carte de visite portrait must have been taken of Rev. Grow shortly after Yarrington set up in business in Carbondale, for Rev. Grow in the Yarrington carte is much younger than he is in the portrait of him in his mature years, which appears on p. 12, Vol. 1, No. 2, of this quarterly.

An H. C. Yarrington carte de visite portrait of another Berean Baptist minister has survived.

A large - 13 1/4" X 15" - wedding certificate in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa., contains three carte de visite portraits which appear from behind oval windows of the bride (Eliza Holgate, Carbondale, Lackawanna Co., Pennsylvania), of the groom (William Russell, Jermyn, Lackawanna Co., Pennsylvania), and of the minister (C. Wilson Smith). C. Wilson Smith was a Baptist minister in Carbondale, Pa.; for a discussion of his pastorate, see NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Vol. 1, No. 2 (The History of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Pennsylvania 18407), pp. 12-13. The couple were married on August 31, 1881. The back of the carte de visite portraits of the bride and groom are blank, but the base of each of their cards is printed thusly - "From Wixson's Art Studio"; the minister's card is printed on the back: "H. C. Yarrington, Photographer, Carbondale, Pa." Yarrington was still working in August, 1881.

For the story about where and when the wedding certificate was found, see Wixson's Art Studio, above.

A carte de visite bust-length portrait of an unidentified man, in the collection of Rev. William P. Lewis, Scranton, Pa., is printed at the center of the back with this address:

WLM. S. CORWIN,
PHOTOGRAPHER,
Olyphant,
Luzerne Co., Pa.

Since Olyphant is in present-day Lackawanna County, and since Lackawanna County was formed out of Luzerne County on August 13, 1878, this carte de visite portrait, which was taken when Olyphant was still in Luzerne County, was taken prior to the establishment of Lackawanna County.

Ruth Hawkins (Mrs. Stephens). Photograph, 3 7/8" X 5 1/2", in the collection of Mrs. Ruth Stephens, Jermy, Pa; matt embossed bottom center: L. V. Burdick, Jermy, Pa.; copy print by DWP. Mrs. Stephens grew up in Jermy, Pa., and was a good friend of Thelma Burdick, daughter of La Verne Burdick. Mrs. Stephens was photographed many times by Burdick and is today able to describe the circumstances surrounding the particular occasion portrayed in these Burdick photographs, circumstances which would be unknown to anyone except one who had access behind the scenes.

This portrait of La Verne A. Burdick was published by Dwight J. Stoddard in Prominent Men Scranton and Vicinity..., 1906, p. 190 (no. 760); copy print by DWP.

Thelma Burdick and Helen Burdick, two of the three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. La Verne Burdick. AZO Post Card photograph, trimmed to 4 3/4" X 3 7/16", in the collection of Mrs. Ruth Stephens, Jermy, Pa; copy print by DWP. This photograph of two of Mr. Burdick's children is typical of the informal and experimental photographs taken by Mr. Burdick of the members of his family and of the Hawkins children.

G. Aufrecht began his career as a photographer as a member of L. R. Evans & Co., 209 Lackawanna Avenue, Scranton, Pa. We know this from the information printed on the front and the back of a cabinet photograph in the collection of Rev. William P. Lewis, Scranton, Pa. This cabinet photograph is inscribed on the back with the name of the sitter, "Catherine Driesbach, wife of Wilbur Gardner, 1806-1881," and is printed in the center of the back with this address:

L. R. Evans & Co.
209 Lackawanna Avenue
Scranton, Pa.
and is printed at the base of the front with this address:
L. R. Evans Scranton, Pa. G. Aufrecht

Since L. R. Evans is last recorded at 209 Lackawanna Avenue in 1880, and is first recorded at 421 Lackawanna Avenue in 1882, we may say that the period when Aufrecht was with Evans at 209 Lackawanna was before 1882. After Evans went to 421, Aufrecht continued to operate as a photographer at 209.

Rooms in Lewis' Building, CORNER LACKAWANNA AND PENN AVENUE. Also, Rooms over BRAINARD'S NEW BUILDING, Opposite KENT & WISES' Tobacco Store.

On September 15, 1854, Leroy Hancock (see above), daguerreotypist, had his studio in the Lewis building: "Rooms over Mr. Lewis' Store, corner of Lackawanna Avenue and the Plank Road, Scranton." Did Brownell take over the former Hancock studio, or were the two men located on different floors in the same building? Since Hancock is not documented after 1859-1860, perhaps Brownell took over the Hancock location?

Mr. B. will always be on hand to serve his friends with a WELL SELECTED STOCK OF FRAMES, Gilt, Rosewood, Black Walnut. Rustic, Union, Oval, Metal, Passepartouts, cart de Visites, Albums, Stereoscopic Views, &c.

From information contained in these two notices, we see that Brownell not only moved his studio - from 302 Lackawanna ave and 104 Penn ave to 224 Lackawanna Avenue - but also changed his residence - from Hyde Park to the site of his new studio, 224 Lackawanna Avenue.

Brownell's gallery at 224 Lackawanna Ave. was later taken over by I. G. Owen, see below.

These notices from 1867-1868 are the last that we find Brownell listed in the Scranton city directories.

Under the "Miscellaneous" section of the Carbondale Business Notices in the D. G. Beers, Atlas of Luzerne County..., 1873, p. 43, is found the following reference:

Brownell, D. K. . . Lumberman. Photograph Gallery Main St.

Is this the same D. K. Brownell? It would seem as though it is. D. K. Brownell is not recorded in Carbondale in any other instance. See his name in the Carbondale section.

In 1861-1862, when Brownell first makes his appearance as a daguerreotypist in northeastern Pennsylvania, he is recorded at two locations: Harford (Susquehanna County) and Scranton (Luzerne County). In 1865-1866, and in 1867-1868 he is recorded only in Scranton: from this we may assume that he was born or trained, perhaps both born and trained, in Susquehanna County and then moved to "the big city" - Scranton.

Although the precise connection has yet to be worked out, it seems fairly safe to assume that D. K. Brownell was a member of the prominent Susquehanna County family by the name of Brownell. Rhamanthus M. Stocker's Centennial History of Susquehanna County, Pennsylvania..., 1887, Chapter LI (Dum-daff borough; pp. 806-813) records three members of the Brownell family who figured prominently in the early history of the borough of Dum-daff: Henry Brownell, Benjamin Brownell, and Benjamin Brownell, Jr.

Carte de visite portraits by D. K. Brownell are known to exist in at least four different formats, all with plain fronts, and with the following addresses printed on the back:

1. D. K. Brownell, Photographer, Scranton, Penn.
2. D. K. Brownell, Photographer, Scranton, Pa.
3. D. K. Brownell, Photographer, Scranton, Pa. (text surrounded by a horizontally-oriented florid cartouche)
4. D. K. Brownell, Photographer, Scranton, Pa. (text surrounded by a vertically-oriented cartouche, at the top of which are two cupids, one holding a portrait of a woman, the other standing at a studio camera)

Jewell (Frank) & Chase (George B.), photographers, 209 Lacka. ave., h. 222 do.

In his description of the earliest business buildings erected on Lackawanna Avenue, Col. Frederick L. Hitchcock, in his History of Scranton and its People (Vol. 1, 1914, p. 132), describes the location of the "Daguerreotype Gallery" of George B. Chase, Scranton's first daguerreotypist. In this text, given here, Col. Hitchcock spells the name of the man who built the building in two different ways.

In 1851-1852 Dr. John Sherrerd erected a three-story brick building on the southwest corner of Lackawanna and Washington avenues. It was the handsomest building yet erected, and compared favorably with many structures of more modern date. Its first floor was occupied by Dr. Sherrerd as a drug store, the second floor contained the first "Daguerreotype Gallery" in the valley, conducted by Mr. George B. Chase, and "on the third floor was held the first select school of the then scattered village."

Since we may safely deduct that the building was completed in 1852, then we may also conclude that George B. Chase was installed on the second floor at least by 1852.

In 1859-1860, the borough of Scranton (Scranton was not incorporated as a city until 1866) issued the first borough-wide directory, and in this directory two daguerreotypists are listed in the classified business directory (p. 57): Leroy Hancock (see below) and Chase's Gallery:

CHASE'S GALLERY, ambrotypes, ambrographs, melainotypes, photographs, plain and colored, and all other sun pictures made in superior style. Rooms cor Lackawanna and Wyoming av nr the Wyoming House.

The citizens list of this same directory (p. 31) makes it clear that the Chase of Chase's Gallery is G. B. Chase:

CHASE G B, photographer, Lackawanna cor Wyoming, h alley bet Mifflin and Franklin

The first documented daguerreotypist working in northeastern Pennsylvania is S. S. Benedict, who is recorded in Carbondale in 1844. If we assume that George B. Chase was working as a daguerreotypist in Scranton by, at the latest, 1852, the year the Sherrered building was completed, then George B. Chase is the second documented daguerreotypist working in northeastern Pennsylvania. But right on his heels and in the year 1852, however, are:

- Leroy Hancock in Honesdale, who was working as a daguerreotypist there before December 2, 1853
- Pughe & Collamer, who shortly before December 2, 1853 had purchased the "Sky-Light Gallery" formerly occupied by Leroy Hancock in Honesdale
- Leroy Hancock, who announced on September 15, 1854, that he had opened a "Daguerrean Establishment" at Scranton in "rooms over Mr. LEWIS' Store, corner of Lackawanna Avenue and the Plank Road."

In 1861, the borough of Scranton issued its second borough-wide directory, and George B. Chase is the only daguerreotypist listed in the classified business directory. In addition to still doing all of the many types of photographs he advertised in 1859-1860, Chase now adds a new one to his list - ivorytypes:

CHASE'S GALLERY, ivorytypes, ambrotypes, ambrographs, melainotypes, photographs, plain and colored, and all other sun pictures made in superior style. Rooms cor Lackawanna and Wyoming av nr the Wyoming House

In the citizens list of this same 1861 directory, Chase is listed precisely as he was in the 1859-1860 directory:

CHASE G B, photographer, Lackawanna cor Wyoming, h alley bet Mifflin and Franklin

I have not seen any directory for the borough of Scranton for the years 1862, 1863, and 1864, and I am not even certain whether such directories were even published.

Curiously, no mention of Chase or of his gallery is made in either the citizens list (p. 18) nor in the classified business directory (pp. 69-70) of M. W. Lant's The Scranton Directory, For 1865-66, although four other photographers are: D. K. Brownell, Charles Derman, Wm. H. Schurch and F. H. Simpson. Perhaps Chase's absence from Scranton in 1865-1866 may suggest that he had gone to fight in the Civil War. Interestingly enough, it is in this 1865-1866 directory that photographers are first listed as "Photographers" in the classified business directory. In the 1859-1860 directory there were two daguerreotypists and no photographers listed; in the 1861 directory there was one daguerreotypist and no photographers listed; in the 1865-1866 directory there are four photographers and no daguerreotypists listed. And, finally, concerning the terms "daguerreotypist" and "photographer," it should be here noted that even though in 1859-1860 and in 1861 in the classified business directory that Chase is listed as a daguerreotypist, in the citizens list in both directories he is termed a "photographer."

G. B. Chase many not have been mentioned in the 1865-1866 Scranton directory, but he re-appears with a splash in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton For 1867 and 1868. He appears twice: once, among the list of citizens (p. 149), with a new home address, and - for the first time - with a specific street number and story indication for his studio -

CHASE G B, photographer 329 Lackawanna av, 3d floor, h Monroe av. and once, in a full-page ad (p. 150) on the page immediately following his listing among the citizens: The Place to Get GOOD PICTURES is at CHASE'S GALLERY. Humphrey's Photographic Journal in speaking of Chase's Photographs, said of them: NO BETTER Are seen in BROADWAY. ONE OF THE BEST LIGHTS IN THE COUNTRY, And all Work Finished in the BEST STYLE OF THE ART. Gallery Cor. Lackawanna and Wyoming Aves.

In the Scranton Directory 1870-71 George B. Chase is not mentioned among the citizens (p. 94), nor among the photographers (p. 497), but Frank Jewell is listed as a photographer working at 329 Lackawanna Avenue, the address of the Chase Gallery in 1867-1868.

The Scranton Directory, 1870-71

p. 497 (classified business directory, photographers)
Jewell Frank, 329 Lackawanna ave

What happened to Chase? Did Jewell buy him out?

Perhaps what happened is this. Chase was getting old (he is first documented in 1851/1852) and perhaps he was not doing much work by 1870-1871, and perhaps he took into his establishment the bright and energetic Frank Jewell, and perhaps that is why in 1871 Chase no longer lists himself as a photographer and why Jewell in 1871 does list himself as a photographer at the address of the Chase Gallery. This hypothesis is significantly substantiated by the text of a display ad which appeared in The Morning Republican (Established November 1, 1867), Scranton, Pa., Tuesday, April 2, 1872, p. 4, col. 5 (classified business directory, photographer) (The same ad also appeared the following month; Tuesday, May 28, 1872, p. 4, col. 8):

CHASE'S GALLERY, Frank Jewell, Photographer, 209 Lackawanna Avenue, Scranton, Pa. The most extensive, best patronized and only really first-class gallery in this section. The "Rembrandt" picture was first introduced in this vicinity at this establishment and we are now making them better than ever. All the New Styles Made as soon as introduced. A long experience at the business enables us to compete successfully with similar establishments in the larger cities. Work Warranted First-Class in Every Respect.

nov28d6wly
The above display ad begins in this way - "Chase's Gallery, Frank Jewell, Photographer." Are we not to assume from this method of stating the situation that Jewell was an operator in the gallery owned by Chase. Also noteworthy is the fact that Chase's Gallery is in April of 1872 in a new location from where it was in 1867-1868.

The last and only other reference to G. B. Chase that I have found other than those already cited is found in The Scranton Directory, 1873, p. 215
Jewell (Frank) & Chase (George B.), photographers, 209 Lacka. ave., h. 222 do

And what are we to make of this entry in the 1873 directory. It seems pretty clear what happened. Jewell is now a partner, perhaps even more than a half-partner, because he gets first billing in the partnership title. And, the partnership, Jewell & Chase, is in business at the location which the year before was advertised as "Chase's Gallery, Frank Jewell, Photographer." Which of the two - Jewell or Chase - was living at "h 222 do" the 1873 directory does not make clear. If Chase is living at that address then he has changed his residence from his previous Monroe av. address. In 1871 Frank Jewell lived at the Lacka. Valley House.

Curiously, even though Chase is classified as a daguerreotypist in the classified directories of 1859-1860 and 1861, the text of the entry in both directories does not mention daguerreotypes among the kinds of pictures which Chase advertises that he can do.

Chase advertised that he could do "ivorytypes, ambrotypes, ambrographs, melainotypes, photographs, plain and colored, and all other sun pictures." Thirteen carte de visite portraits taken by George B. Chase, with seven different printed backs are known to exist.

Formats 1-3 are 3-line addresses; formats 4, 6 and 7 are 5-line addresses; format 5 is a 4-line address. Among formats 4-7 the differences are a matter of different type. Format 5 exists both with and without a revenue stamp on the back; formats 6 and 7 exist only with a revenue stamp on the back.

Revenue Stamps

Since between September 1864 and August 1866, American photographers had to affix a tax stamp on the back of all photographs they produced - the carte de visite fashion reached such heights in America in the 1860's that the federal government voted to materially add to the national income by placing a small tax on each photograph - the formats with revenue stamps may be securely dated to this two-year period.

Format 5: one example is known to the author without a revenue stamp; it is inscribed at the base of the front: "A Merry Christmas & happy New Year N. E. Crosby" and inscribed at the top of the back, in a different hand, "Mary Tuttle" one example is known to the author with a 3c Inter. Revenue For<sup>4</sup> Exchange stamp

Format 6: two examples of this format are known to the author, both of which have the 3c Inter. Revenue Proprietary stamp

Format 7: two examples of this format are known to the author, both of which have the 3c Inter. Revenue Proprietary stamp

JEWELL, Photographer, Chase's Gallery

Four different formats of carte de visite portraits printed either at the base of the front or at the center of the back with the address "Frank Jewell, Photographer, Chase's Gallery" are known to exist, and one cabinet photograph - of Mrs. C. S. S. Platt (Mrs. J. C.), in the collection of the Lackawanna County Historical Society, Scranton - has come to light, and it is printed at the base of the front with the following address:

JEWELL, Photographer, SCRANTON, PA.
Chase's Gallery.

Mrs. J. C. Platt and her family were no strangers to the Chase Gallery. Three of the thirteen carte de visite portraits mentioned above are of the Platts: they are all printed on the back with the Chase address, and they are each inscribed at the top of the back, in the same hand: "J. C. Platt," "Mrs. J. C. Platt," and "Ella Platt." The portrait of Ella bears a 3c Inter. Revenue For<sup>4</sup> Exchange stamp, and was therefore taken between September 1864 and August 1866.

As we have said, Chase is not mentioned in the directories after 1873, the year of the partnership, but Jewell, as we shall see below, continued to work in Scranton for at least the next 26 years.

In 1897 a biography of Adon L. Cramer, a brother of Herbert S. Cramer, was published - this biography is reproduced in full under Adon L. Cramer, Carbondale - and in it we learn that Herbert S. resided in Carbondale, but was engaged in business in Scranton. In addition to Herbert's studio in Scranton, and Adon's studios in Carbondale, Jermyn and Scranton, there was yet another Cramer studio - in Olyphant. I am unable to say which of the two brothers established the Cramer studio in Olyphant (see the Olyphant section). For some details about the Cramer family see the biography of Adon L. Cramer.

11. Dean

first documented record:
last documented record: before 1867-1868
location of studio:

The only reference so far uncovered by this author to a Scranton photographer by the name of Dean is in the fine print at the bottom of a display ad which William H. Schurch placed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868, p. 219:

Persons wishing duplicates from the old negatives made by Hope, Kellogg, Dean, Derman & Hermans, and Johnson, can get them at a reduced price, at my studio.

On the basis of this fine print, it seems safe to assume that Dean - as well as the others listed - had either died or gone out of business by 1867-1868.

12. Derman, Charles B.

first documented record: 1865-1866
last documented record: 1865-1866
location of studio:

The only references I have found to Charles Derman are in M. W. Lant's The Scranton Directory, For 1865-66: there he is mentioned three times:

- p. 22 (citizens directory)

No PICTURE will leave the Gallery unless it be a good one. Frames of every description constantly on hand.

Charles B. Derman is not listed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868.

See Derman & Heermans, below.

A single example of the work of Charles B. Derman is known to the author - a carte de visite portrait of Dr. B. H. Throop with his wife and two children. This group portrait is printed at the center of the back with the following address:

C. B. Derman,
Photographer,
Scranton, Pa.

The card is inscribed at the top: DR B. H. Throop & Family.

At the bottom of the back of the carte de visite is a 2c U. S. Inter. Rev. stamp. Since revenue stamps were required by law between September 1864 and August 1866, we can be sure that this group portrait was taken within this two-year period.

In 1879-1880 Frank Jewell, the Scranton photographer, is first recorded at Throop's Block on Wyoming Avenue. Was Dr. B. H. Throop the Throop who built the block on Wyoming Avenue? Was it a member of Dr. Throop's family?

13. Derman & Heermans

See Derman, Charles B.
Heermans, Lewis W.
Heermans, Eugene A.

first documented record: between September 1864 and August 1866
last documented record: before 1867-1868
location of studio: Scranton

In the Russell Homestead family photograph archive is an unidentified carte de visite portrait of a seated man and the back of the photograph bears a U.S. 3c Inter. Revenue Telegraph stamp, and the name and address of the organization which took the photograph:

DERMAN & HEERMANS,
PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTISTS,
Scranton, Pa.

The "Derman" of the partnership must surely be our Charles B. Derman. The precise identity of "Heermans" is not so easy to determine, since there were two "Heermans" photographers active in Scranton - Eugene A. and Lewis W.

The carte de visite fashion reached such heights in America in the 1860's that the federal government voted to materially add to the national income by placing a small tax on each photograph produced by the studio photographers. "Between September 1864 and August 1866 Americans had to affix a tax stamp on the back of all photographs, ranging in value from 2 to 5 cents according to the price of the photograph." (Gernsheim, Chapter 24, p. 301). Because of the tax stamp on the back of this Derman & Heermans carte de visite portrait, we are provided with proof that:

1. the photographic partnership of Derman & Heermans was active between September 1864 and August 1866
2. the carte de visite portrait of an unidentified man was taken between September 1864 and August 1866

There is abundant evidence to suggest that Lewis W. might be the one, for Lewis W. was in the habit of forming partnerships: in 1873 he is in business with Robert S. Shoemaker - Heermans & Shoemaker; and in 1875 he is in business with William Phillips - Heermans & Phillips.

Even though it can not be said with certainty which of the two Heermans photographers - Eugene A. or Lewis W. - was the one who was in partnership with Derman, there is good evidence to suggest that the firm of Derman & Heermans had ceased to exist by 1867-1868. And that evidence is this - the fine print at the base of a display ad which William H. Schurch, a Scranton photographer, placed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868, p. 219:

Persons wishing duplicates from the old negatives made by Hope, Kellogg, Dean, Derman & Hermans, and Johnson, can get them at a reduced price, at my studio.

What is not so easy to explain is why the Derman & Hermans (clearly a misspelling of Derman & Heermans) negatives did not stay with the Heermans, whichever one it was who was the partner with Charles B. Derman.

A photograph of Daniel Jay Reese in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa., is marked at the bottom of the mount:

435 Spruce St DeWitt Scranton, Pa.

See also DeWitt, Pittston, Pa.
When was the Pittston period?

DeWitt's major center of activity was Scranton, but he was active in Pittston, and possibly also in Wilkes-Barre. The evidence for the Wilkes-Barre period is found in a display ad placed by the Wilkes-Barre Portrait Company in the Wilkes-Barre City Directory, 1894, p. 560. In the ad we learn that the Wilkes-Barre Portrait Company can do "Duplicates from DeWitt & Mortensen's Negatives." No other record of DeWitt and Mortensen in Wilkes-Barre has yet come to light. Could the DeWitt negatives in the possession of the Wilkes-Barre Portrait Company possibly be those from DeWitt's Pittston period?

DeWitt's successor:

See Fritsch.

The author has in his collection a cabinet photograph bearing at the base of the front the following address:

DE WITT, successor to 435 Spruce St.,

If I read the above correctly, it says this: Fritsch is the successor to DeWitt.

DeWitt did have a studio at 435 Spruce St.

In 1897 a biography of Henry Frey, a Scranton photographer whose work we will come to shortly, was published, and in it we learn that in 1883 Henry Frey bought the L. R. Evans studio. Here is what the biography of Frey says:

In 1883 he (Henry Frey) purchased from L. R.
Evans his (Frey's) present place, and after carrying on the two galleries (Frey also had bought the former Frank Jewell studio, located at 209 Lackawanna Avenue) for three years, he closed out the older (the former Frank Jewell studio), combining it with the one at No. 421 Lackawanna Avenue. Here he occupies a whole floor, having a reception room, operating room, laboratory, and a printing room on the top floor."

Thus, we have the reason why L. R. Evans disappears from the scene after 1882. And, if we can assume that the facilities on the top floor of 421 Lackawanna Avenue that belonged to Henry Frey in 1897 were the same - or roughly the same - facilities that belonged to L. R. Evans in 1883, then we have a pretty nice description of the set-up that L. R.
Evans had at 421 Lackawanna Avenue.

A cabinet card in the collection of the author is printed on the back with the following information:
Evans Photographic Art Studio
48 and 50 Court St.,
Binghamton, N. Y.
And Arcade, Scranton, Pa.
There is a copyright date on the back of the cabinet card: ? 1889 (or 1899)

L. R. Evans & Co.

While L. R. Evans was still at 209 Lackawanna Avenue he formed a company, L. R. Evans & Co. This we know from the printed address on the back of a cabinet photograph in the collection of Rev. William P. Lewis, Scranton, Pa. The cabinet photograph is inscribed on the top of the back with the name of the sitter: "Catherine Driesbach, wife of Wilbur Gardner, 1806-1881," and printed in the center of the back with the following address:
L. R. Evans & Co.
209 Lackawanna Avenue,
Scranton, Pa.

The base of the front of this cabinet card is printed with this address:
L. R. Evans Scranton, Pa. G. Aufrecht

Since L. R. Evans is last recorded at 209 Lackawanna Avenue in 1880, and is first recorded at 421 Lackawanna Avenue in 1882, we may say that the period when Aufrecht was with Evans at 209 Lackawanna was before 1882. After Evans went to 421, Aufrecht continued to operate as a photographer at 209.

first documented record: in Scranton, August, 1874 (For the details of his photographic activity before this date, see the biography of him, reproduced below, which was published in 1897.)

Note: The display ad, the text of which is given below, in Williams' Lackawanna County Directory, 1893-4. (p. xiii) says that the Frey studio at 421 Lackawanna Avenue was "Est. 1876."

last documented record: still working in 1904 location of studio:
--August, 1874 to approximately August, 1875: an assistant in the gallery of Mr. Jewell.

"In August, 1874, Mr. Frey came to Scranton and for a year worked in Mr. Jewell's gallery, after which he bought out that gentleman and continued the photograph gallery on the corner of Main and Jackson." (Frey biography, published in 1897, reproduced in its entirety below.)

Now, where was Mr. Jewell's gallery in August, 1874? It was the Hyde Park Gallery, located in Hyde Park, at the corner of Main and Jackson. For more of a discussion of the location of Frank Jewell's gallery in August, 1874, see Jewell, above.

--August, 1875 - 1883

Thanks to the Frey biography, we know precisely where his studios were located and when.

"In 1883 he (Frey) purchased from L. R. Evans (whose gallery was located at 421 Lackawanna Avenue) his (Frey's) present place, and after carrying on the two galleries for three years, he closed out the older, combining it with the one at 421 Lackawanna Avenue. Here he occupies a whole floor, having a reception room, operating room, laboratory, and a printing room on the top floor."

--1880, p. 438 N (Genealogical and Personal Record, Scranton and Dunmore)

Henry Frey, photographic artist, corner of Main and Jackson streets, Hyde Park, was born in Switzerland, June 4th, 1844.

--Richard Edwards, Industries of Pennsylvania, Statistical and Trade Review..., 1881, p. 306.

HENRY FREY--Photograph Artist, Main and Jackson Sts., Hyde Park.

At the establishment of Mr. Henry Frey can be found every facility for the production of a first-class photograph, or picture of any kind. The gallery is situated in the second story of the large building on the corner of Main and Jackson streets, and is as elegantly fitted up as any gallery in the city. Mr. Frey not only takes photographs and other pictures in the best style of the art, but he also copies and enlarges pictures and makes views equal to any that can possibly be produced. He is a native of Switzerland, but has resided in the United States since 1869. He studied photography in Memphis, Tenn., and Baltimore, Md., and located in Scranton in 1874. The gallery now owned by him was established in 1870, by Mr. E. A. Heermans, and purchased by Mr. Frey in 1875. It is known as the Hyde Park Photograph Gallery. Those desiring pictures of any kind or size, will find Mr. Frey studios to please them, and they cannot fail to be satisfied with the artistic work done by him.

--Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania..., 1897, pp. 199-200

Among the arts that contribute to the happiness of mankind there are none more valuable than photography. By means of it we are enabled to possess likenesses of dear ones, from whom the grave has parted us and whose portraits therefore are cherished with the deepest affection as links in memory's chain, binding us to the past. Through it, too, we trace the history of our lives or those of our children back through the different ages of babyhood. In modern times the art of photography has been greatly developed, through the labors of men in different parts of the world, until now it has almost reached the stage of perfection. Doubtless among the photographers of Scranton there is no one more devoted to this art or better informed with regard to it, than is the subject of this article. Without disparaging the work of other artists, it may with justice be said that as a photographer his work is unexcelled by any one in the city.

A native of Zurich, Switzerland, Mr. Frey is the son of Conrad and Anna (Neracher) Frey, who were born in the canton of Zurich and lived upon a farm there; the former is deceased, but the latter is still living, being at this writing eighty-one years of age. She is a member of the Reformed Church, to which her husband also belonged. Of their three sons and three daughters, all of whom survive, Henry is fourth in order of birth and the only one in America. He received his education in a gymnasium, after which he clerked in a cotton factory. Coming to the United States in 1869, he proceeded westward to Illinois and spent six months on a farm in Highland. Thence he went south to Mississippi and for a year engaged in raising cotton, but not liking the work or the climate, he went to Memphis, Tenn., and for two years was clerk in a furnishing store. It was while there that he studied photography, in which from the first he was deeply interested. On attaining a knowledge of the work, he journeyed through Mississippi as a traveling artist for a year, and then went to Baltimore, where he perfected himself in general photography.

In August, 1874, Mr. Frey came to Scranton and for a year worked in Mr. Jewell's gallery, after which he bought out that gentleman and continued the photograph gallery on the corner of Main and Jackson. In 1883 he purchased from L. R. Evans his present place, and after carrying on the two galleries for three years, he closed the older, combining it with the one at No. 421 Lackawanna Avenue. Here he occupies a whole floor, having a reception room, operating room, laboratory, and a printing room on the top floor. The entire work he superintends himself, having three or four assistants. All negatives are preserved, and he now has over thirty thousand on hand. He has cameras of different sizes up to 14 X 17, and can make a photograph almost life size. In addition to photography, he does work in crayons, pastels, oil and water colors, porcelain and india ink.

The marriage of Mr. Frey, which took place in Scranton, united him with Miss Louisa Blatter, who was born in Jeffersonville, Sullivan County, N.Y., and they reside at No. 519 Pine Street. Fraternally Mr. Frey is associated with the Knights of Pythias; Scranton Gruetli Verein (Swiss Society), of which he has been treasurer; Liederkranz, Turn Verein, Lackawanna Society of History and Science, and American Photographers Association, some of the meetings of which he has attended. In national politics he affiliates with the Republicans and in religious connections is a member of the Mifflin Avenue German Lutheran Church.

Who, one wonders, were the "three or four assistants" working in Frey's gallery at 421 Lackawanna Avenue in 1897?

Thomas Murphy, JUBILEE HISTORY Commemorative of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Creation of LACKAWANNA COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA... 1928, p. 1041, gives the following biography of Bernard F. Golden:

BERNARD F. GOLDEN, well known in Scranton as a successful photographer, with studio at 215 Washington Avenue, is a native of Lackawanna County. He was born at Dummore, the son of Anthony and Mariah (Barrett) Golden.

Anthony Golden, deceased, was a native of Ireland. He was among the early settlers of Dummore, where he was employed in the coal mines. Mr. Golden is deceased and his wife, who was born at Dummore, died in 1923. They are buried in St. Mary's Cemetery, Dummore. Mr. and Mrs. Golden were the parents of the following children: Michael J., deceased; A. F., lives in Scranton; John E., insurance, lives in Scranton; Thomas, plumber, lives at Dummore; Anna, lives with her brother, Bernard F., in Scranton; Harry, lives in New York City; Margaret, lives in Scranton; Frank E., lives in Scranton; and Bernard F., the subject of this sketch.

The boyhood of Bernard F. Golden was spent at Dummore and in early youth he was employed in the coal mines. He later took up the study of photography and when 20 years old opened his first studio at Olyphant, where he continued in business until 1915. He has since been located in Scranton, where he ranks among the capable men in his profession. At the Photographers' Convention held in 1915 at Indianapolis, Ind., the convention in Buffalo, N.Y., and at the 45th annual convention of the Photographers Association of America held in New York City in 1927, Mr. Golden's exhibits were awarded honors. In fact at every convention where his work has been exhibited he has received honors.

Mr. Golden is a Democrat and holds membership in the Catholic Church and lives with his sisters at 1509 Linden Street, Scranton.

GOOD PHOTOGRAPHY, Natural Pose. Fine Finish. Babies a Specialty. at GRIFFIN'S GALLERY, Cor. Lack'a & Wyoming aves., Scranton, Pa. (From the Hyde Park Courier-Progress,) Merit Attracts. The writer enjoyed a very pleasant surprise in his visit to the photographic parlors of artist Griffin, over Courtright's old shoe store, corner Lackawanna and Wyoming avenues. The interior has been renovated, presenting a most tasty and artistic appearance. Mr. Griffin's fame in his chosen profession has been growing rapidly of late. A glance showed the cause. He does good work, artistic work, and Hyde Park people have discovered the fact, judging by the large number on this side whose photographs are to be seen there. The number of excellent pictures of babies and children on every side shows also that Mr. Griffin has given this great feature of work much study and that he is eminently successful in it. His crayon work is also fine and his prices are strikingly low, from $7 up to $20, any of which is fit to adorn the handsomest parlor.

Leroy Hancock had a daguerrean gallery in Honesdale before he is first recorded in Scranton. The first printed record of Hancock in Scranton that I have found is dated September 15, 1854, but in the preceding year - and possibly before that - he was active in Honesdale. Here is the evidence. George M. Reynolds Editor and Proprietor of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, in his column in Volume 5, Number 16, of the paper, Friday morning, December 2, 1853, p. 2, col. 1, took special notice of some recent developments in the daguerreotyping activity of Carbondale's G. W. Collamer, and it is in these remarks that we learn of the presence of Hancock as a daguerreotypist in Honesdale before December 2, 1853.

We perceive by the Honesdale Press that our esteemed citizens Pugh & Collamer, have purchased the Sky-light Gallery formerly occupied by Leroy Hancock, and are prepared to furnish pictures of the good looking people of that Borough. We consider it fortunate for Honesdale to have such an Artist as George W. Collamer locate among them, for he is a "decided character" in his profession, and we doubt not but what the emanations from these gentlemen's Gallery, will have a tendency to elevate the standard of taste in the fine arts, and diffuse a more chaste and correct idea of the beautiful art of Daguerreotyping.

The first record in Scranton of Hancock is the following ad from the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal, Vol. 5, No. 48 (Sept. 22, 1854, p. 1, col. 1):

DAGUERREOTYPES The largest and most commodious SKY-LIGHT Daguerrean Establishment in Northern Pennsylvania, at Scranton. The Subscriber having located permanently, respectfully invites the citizens of Scranton and vicinity to pay him a visit. We are familiar with all the modern improvements in the art, and of the different styles, viz: the CRAYON, the WHITE CRAYON, the HILLOTYP, and the old style of pictures. We would recommend the Crayon Daguerreotype--(it being patented, no other Artist can take them in this part of the country.) We have a QUICK Instrument, calculated for taking children, and no person will be required to set longer than TEN SECONDS. Open every day in the week, Sunday excepted, from 8 o'clock in the morning, until 6 o'clock in the evening. Pictures cheap, and warranted. ROOMS over Mr. LEWIS' Store, corner of Lackawanna Avenue and the Plank Road, Scranton. Prices from $1.00 to $3.00. LEROY HANCOCK.
Scranton, Sept. 15th, 1854 47-3w.

In the January 12, 1855 (p. 3, col. 6) issue of the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 6, No. 5) - in a display ad which was written and first published on November 24, 1854 - Hancock announced that he had just come back from New York where he had acquired a "large and splendid assortment of the latest improvements in Daguerreotype Cases and Lockets":

Keep up with the Times! HAVING lately returned from New York with a large and splendid assortment of the latest improvements in Daguerreotype Cases and Lockets, we are now prepared to put up Pictures in as good a style as can be done in the city. At HANCOCK'S Sky-Light Gallery, near the Depot, Scranton, Pa.
Scranton, Nov. 24th, 1854 1-3w

On at least two occasions in January of 1855, Hancock placed the following ad in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal (Vol. 6, No. 4, January 5, 1855, p. 3, col. 1 and Vol. 6, No. 5, January 12, 1855, p. 3, col. 2):

DAGUERREOTYPES. HANCOCK'S Sky-Light Daguerrean Gallery, the largest and most convenient in Northern Pennsylvania with SUITS of ROOMS for the special convenience of visitors. We have two large Instruments, one quick for taking Children and single pictures; Children taken in Five Seconds. Another whole Instrument, the largest ever brought into this part of the country, for taking Groups and large Pictures. Groups from Five to Twenty-five on the same plate. Pictures warranted and taken in all kinds of weather. Prices from $1.00 to $5.00. Gallery near the Depot, Scranton, Pa.

Hancock continued to advertise in the Carbondale paper in 1856; the following ad is found in the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal of January 4, 1856 (Vol. 6, No. 51, p. 3, col. 1):
HANCOCK'S Celebrated Sky-Light Daguerrean Gallery Permanently located at Scranton. WHERE he may be found at all times, with an extensive assortment of Fancy and Plain Cases, Rose Wood and Mahogany Frames, all sizes; Lockets and Breast Pins filled to the size of a three cent piece; he has LARGE ROOMS expressly fitted up for the comfort of visitors and customers; he respectfully invites one and all to pay him a visit, and will warrant entire satisfaction. Prices $1.00, 1.25, 1.75, 2.00, 2.50 3.00, 4.00, and $5.00. LEROY HANCOCK.
Scranton, Jan. 4, 1855. 51-3m.

On May 1, 1857, George M. Reynolds sold his newspaper, the Carbondale Transcript and Lackawanna Journal to R. H. Willoughby and the new owner changed the name of the newspaper to the Advance (1880, p. 445). Hancock continued to advertise in this now retitled Carbondale paper. In the Saturday morning, May 22, 1858 issue of The Advance (Vol. I, No. 51), the editor, S. S. Benedict, took special notice of the Hancock ad in the New Advertisements section of the editor's column (p. 2, col. 3):

L. Hancock, a well known and accomplished artist at Scranton, advertises his popular Gallery at that place. Pictures at half price.

The ad which appeared on p. 3, col. 1, of the same issue - and in many issues of The Advance in the summer of 1858 - is this:

HANCOCK'S GALLERY. Scranton, Penn'a., Where you can procure the BEST and CHEAPEST Pictures in Luzerne County. Prices Reduced One Half! Good Pictures put up in good cases for Fifty Cents, &c., &c. "A nimble Sixpence is better than a slow Shilling" L HANCOCK, Artist.

Note: The date as given above - 1958 - is as it appears in the paper. It should, of course, be 1858.

A display ad frequently used by De Witt in the late 1880's - early 1890's. This particular example appeared in the Williams' Scranton Directory for the year 1893, p. v.; xerographic copy print.

In the earliest of the directories of the borough of Scranton - the Scranton directory of 1859-1860 - two daguerreotypists are mentioned in the business directory (p. 57)

G. B. Chase (see above), and LeRoy Hancock:
Hancock, Le Roy, Penn cor Lackawanna

In the list of citizens, Hancock is again mentioned (p. 36), and this time his home address is given:

Hancock, LeRoy, daguerreotypist, Penn cor
Lackawanna, n. Hyde Park

Hancock is not listed as a daguerreotypist in any of the city directories of Scranton after this time, although in the 1861 Scranton directory Hancock is (p. 33) listed among the citizens and he is still living in Hyde Park. The only daguerreotypist listed in the classified section of the 1861 Scranton directory is G. B. Chase. Hancock is neither listed as a daguerreotypist nor as a citizen in the M. W. Lant Scranton Directory, for 1865-66, nor in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton For 1867 and 1868.

Leroy Hancock is listed as a daguerreotypist in only one directory of Scranton, and yet - thanks to the numerous newspaper notices and advertisements which have come to light - we know quite a bit about his photographic career. This instance of Leroy Hancock is eloquent enough testimony to the tremendous importance of the contemporary newspapers in historical research.

Eugene A. Heermans is not listed as a photographer in any of the classified business directories after 1873.

Lewis W. (also given as A.) Heermans, photographer (see below), is surely related to Eugene A. Heermans, but they maintained separate studios.

From a biography of Henry Frey, published in Industries of Pennsylvania,..., 1881, p. 306, we learn two quite important facts about the E. A. Heermans gallery at the corner of Main and Jackson Streets, Hyde Park:

—that the gallery was located on the second floor of the building —that the gallery was established in 1870

The biography is about "HENRY FREY - Photograph Artist, Main and Jackson Sts., Hyde Park"; here are the relevant sentences:

The gallery is situated in the second story of the large building on the corner of Main and Jackson streets,... The gallery now owned by him (Mr. Frey) was established in 1870, by Mr. E. A. Heermans, and purchased by Mr. Frey in 1875. It is known as the Hyde Park Photograph Gallery.

For a discussion of the possible fate of Hyde Park Gallery after E. A. Heermans either died or went out of business, see the discussion of the third studio of Frank Jewell, below.

Eugene A. Heermans was one of the prominent and representative citizens whose biography appeared in Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania,..., 1897, pp. 534, 537. In this biography, reproduced here, we learn—among other things—that he was a member of one of the most distinguished pioneer families of Lackawanna County, and that after a brief career as a photographer he became a medical doctor.

EUGENE A. HEERMANS, M. D., of Scranton, is a member of one of the pioneer families of Lackawanna County, his paternal grandfather having been one of the early settlers in old Providence, while his maternal grandfather, Benjamin Slocum, was one of the original settlers of Slocum's Hollow. His father, Edmond Heermans, was born in this county, and chose as his wife Miss Sarah M. Slocum, a native of Scranton. To their union there were born two children, but Eugene A. is the only one who lived to maturity.

The subject of this sketch was born in Scranton, in a house near the present site of the Lackawanna Iron & Steel blast furnace. He was educated in the public schools, for some time attending the high school of Hyde Park, and later graduated from Eastman's Business College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His boyhood years were passed principally in Scranton, though for some nine years he resided with his father near Waverly, N.Y. On completing his education he secured a position as bookkeeper, which he held for some time, but afterward engaged in the photographic business in Scranton for several years. In the meantime he chose the medical profession as his life work and entered upon its study with Dr. A. Davis, of Hyde Park. Further knowledge of the science was gained by attendance at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College in New York, from which he graduated in 1875, with the degree of M.D.

Returning to Scranton, Dr. Heermans opened an office on the west side and has since practiced here. In the spring of 1888 he went to Europe and traveled through the British Isles, after which, in the fall of the same year, he entered King William's University at Berlin, where he took a post-graduate course for one year. With his mind broadened by contact with the master minds of Europe and his medical knowledge enlarged by study under the most favorable circumstances, he returned to Scranton in 1889, and has since devoted his attention to professional work, having his office at No. 949 Scranton Street. For some time he was a member of the medical staff of Lackawanna Hospital.

In political views Dr. Heermans adheres to the principles for which the Republican party stands. He is identified with the Lackawanna County Medical Society, and for several years served as its secretary. Fraternally, he is past officer of Hyde Park Lodge, F. & A. M.; also a member of Lackawanna Chapter, R. A. M.; Coeur de Lion Commandery No. 17, K. T.; and Bloomsburg Consistory, thirty-second degree. In 1866 he married Miss Sarah C. Finch. They became the parents of two children, Lizzie May, who died in infancy, and Lizzie Adele, who keeps house for her father.

Carte de visite portraits by E. A. Heermans are known to exist in at least three different formats, all with plain fronts, and with the following printed information on the backs:

32 Lack'a ave

In Webb's Scranton City Directory, 1875—the Lackawanna Avenue number for the Heermans studio is given both as "32" and "33." Since The Scranton Directory, 1873, in two places gives the avenue number as "32" it seems safe to assume that the "33" is a typographical error.

Note: I am not entirely sure that Lewis W. Heermans and Lewis H. Heermans are the same person, but since 3 out of the 4 times an initial is mentioned, it is given as "W," we may safely assume that the one appearance of "H" is a typographical error.

Hensel,
Scranton, PA,
Carlisle,

are known to the author. One was taken about 1914-1915, and the other was taken in 1916. Whether the Hensel who had the studio in Scranton and Carlisle was Ludolph Hensel, one of the two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ludolph Hensel, or someone entirely other than the Hensels of Hawley, the evidence is insufficient to say. We do know, however, from the 1927 biography of L. Hensel (see Hensel in the Hawley section of Wayne County), that one of the sons of Mr. and Mrs. L. Hensel, Gustave, was living in Scranton in 1927.

A Scranton photographer by the name of Hope is known to the author on the basis of three sources:
1. Some fine print at the bottom of a display ad which William H. Schurch placed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868, p. 219. The fine print is this:

Persons wishing duplicates from the old negatives made by Hope, Kellogg, Dean, Derron & Hermans, and Johnson, can get them at a reduced price, at my studio.

On the basis of this fine print, it seems safe to assume that Hope - and the others listed - had either died or gone out of business by 1867-1868.

An announcement in the Carbondale Leader of October 25, 1873 announced that J. A. Clark of Scranton was preparing a work, a book to be sold by subscription, to be entitled thusly: The Wyoming Valley, Upper Waters of the Susquehanna and the Lackawanna Coal Region, Including Views of the Natural Scenery of Northern Pennsylvania, Photographically Illustrated by Wm. H. Schurch. Two years later the book was published, and the title was slightly changed - The Wyoming Valley, Upper Waters of the Susquehanna, and the Lackawanna Coal-Region, including views of the natural scenery of northern Pennsylvania, From the Indian Occupancy to the Year 1875. Photographically Illustrated. Edited by J. A. Clark. Scranton, Pa.: J. A. Clark, Publisher. 1875

In the published work the promised "Thirty Large, Cabinet size Photographs" did appear, but nowhere in the published volume is to be found the name Wm. H. Schurch. And what is more surprising is the fact that the only photograph in the volume that does have a credit line mentioning a photographer, is one, facing p. 204, of John Jermy, Founder of the Town of Jermy, and the credit line says this: "S. S. Hull, Photo. Scranton, Pa."

What happened to Schurch? And where did Hull come from. Are we to assume that this portrait of John Jermy is the only one in the volume taken by Hull, and that Schurch took the rest? See below, under William H. Schurch, for more discussion of the Schurch contribution to this book by Clark.

Frank Jewell is not listed among the photographers in 1904 North-Eastern Pennsylvania.

Frank Jewell's career as a photographer in Scranton spanned 29 years, from 1870-1871 until 1899, and further research may reveal that he was active even longer than 29 years. He is certainly one of the major studio photographers in Scranton, and during his lifetime, studio photography reached unprecedented heights in professionalism and popularity.

Frank Jewell began his photographic career in Scranton as an operator in G. B. Chase's Gallery at 329 Lackawanna Avenue, in 1870-1871. By 1872 Jewell had assumed a prominent position in the Chase Gallery, then located at 209 Lackawanna Avenue. In the following year, 1873, Jewell apparently had assumed the leading position in the relationship because among the photographers listed in the 1873 Scranton city directory we find the partnership listed in this way: Jewell & Chase, 209 Lacka. ave. This 1873 entry is the last mention of G. B. Chase in the Scranton city directories. For more specific details about the business relationship between G. B. Chase and Frank Jewell in the years 1870-1872 to 1873, see G. B. Chase, above.

Jewell at the Hyde Park Gallery 1874-1875

Though there is no directory documentation to indicate that Jewell ever occupied the Hyde Park Gallery, we can be certain that he did do business there at least from August, 1874 to August, 1875 because of the fact that the 1897 Henry Frey biography says that "In August, 1874, Mr. Frey came to Scranton and for a year worked in Mr. Jewell's gallery, after which he bought out that gentleman and continued the photograph gallery at the corner of Main and Jackson."

"after which he bought out that gentleman and continued the photograph gallery on the corner of Main and Jackson": what did Frey buy out, the Jewell business (that is to say, the equipment) or the Jewell location (the building)? Did Frey buy both? Was Jewell located at Hyde Park Gallery and did Frey buy building and equipment? Let us assume that he did.

Absolute proof that Jewell worked at some point in his career in Hyde Park is provided by a carte de visite portrait of an unidentified young man, in the collection of the author. This carte is printed at the base of the front in the following manner:

Frank Jewell Hyde Park, Pa.

Jewell after Hyde Park Gallery, and before Throop's Block, Wyoming Avenue

There is strong evidence to suggest that Frank Jewell left Scranton at some time after 1874-1875, the Hyde Park period, and before 1877, when he is first recorded in business on Wyoming Avenue, and that evidence is provided by The Sunbeam, a quarterly "Devoted to the elevation of photography to its proper place among the arts" (from the masthead), founded, published and largely written by Frank Jewell. In the first issue of this quarterly, Volume 1, Number 1, February, 1877, on p. 2, in a brief article entitled "Our Business," we hear Jewell speak about his photographic business, and in this speaking the fact that Jewell has been out of Scranton comes out:

Notwithstanding the fact that the times have been unusually hard ever since our return to Scranton there has been a gradual increase in our business, with very flattering prospects of an immense trade at no very distant day. Indeed, our business, now is nearly as good as it was before we sold our gallery on Lackawanna avenue, and there seems to be more demand for artistic work than ever before. We are, therefore, much encouraged in our business prospects, and are determined that every effort shall be put forth to make work of as high a standard, artistically and otherwise, as can be made, and that no pains shall be spared to make every customer pleased with their pictures.

Where did he do? Why did he go away? Was he working in some other city in the region? I don't think so. Did he go to some place like New York or Philadelphia?

Before I get too far-fetched in my speculation about where he went and why, let it be said here that perhaps he is being literal when he said "return to Scranton." Hyde Park is today considered a section of Scranton. Was Hyde Park in Jewell's day considered "out of Scranton"?

And what are the "hard times" Jewell talks about? Are they his "hard times" or is there some sort of "depression" in the area?

Notwithstanding the fact that the times have been unusually hard ever since our return to Scranton...

On page 4 of the same issue of The Sunbeam the "hard times" note is again struck in a Jewell "one-liner": We are still making those large portraits at half price during the hard times. Now is the time to procure one cheap.

When Jewell is next mentioned in the directories - in 1879 - he is listed alone, not in partnership with Chase, and at a new location from the one at which the partnership was located. Jewell's brand new address is the Throop Block on Wyoming Avenue.

A carte de visite portrait of Dr. B. H. Throop, with his wife and two children, was taken between September 1864 and August 1866 by the Scranton photographer, C. B. Derman. Was Dr. B. H. Throop the Throop who built the block on Wyoming Avenue? Was it a member of Dr. Throop's family?

The whole question of where Frank Jewell's place of business was located after 1873 and before 1879-1880 is extremely important because it has a direct bearing on our knowledge about three aspects of studio photography in Scranton in the period 1873-1878:

- What happened to 209 Lackawanna Avenue after 1873?
- Did Frank Jewell buy out the former studio of E. A. Heermans after 1873?
- Where was Jewell located in August, 1874, when Henry Frey came to Scranton and worked in his gallery for a year?

Curiously, two city directories published in this period - Webb's Scranton City Directory, 1875-, and Webb's Scranton City Directory 1876-7 - do not include Frank Jewell among the photographers they list in their classified business directory, and we know (from the published biography of Henry Frey, see below) that Jewell was working in Scranton from August, 1874 to August, 1875, or thereabouts.

The 1876-1877 Webb Directory is a curious one. Only two photographers are listed in the classified business directory, while the 1875 directory lists 6 photographers, and Lant's Scranton City Directory 1879-80, also lists 6 photographers. One, therefore, can not help but remark about the fact that Webb in 1876-1877 lists but two photographers.

209 Lackawanna Avenue is where the business firm of Jewell & Chase (see above, under George B. Chase) was located in 1873.

There is some question about where Jewell's gallery was located after 1873, the year when he was in partnership with Chase at 209, until 1879-1880, when he is listed in the classified business directory of Scranton as working in Throop's Block, Wyoming Avenue, corner Spruce. He may have continued working at 209.

The evidence in support of this hypothesis is this: From a display ad placed by Sedgwick S. Hull in Webb's Scranton City Directory, 1875- (facing p. 120, given above, under Hull) we know that in 1875 Hull's address was 209 Lackawanna Avenue. Beneath his name - in this same display ad - Hull includes the following information: (Successor to Frank Jewell, and formerly of Hull & Condit, Wilkes Barre.)

What does "successor to Frank Jewell" mean? The most logical explanation is this: Hull took over the Jewell business, the Jewell business that was located at 209. But there is evidence which would seem to indicate that Jewell was - by 1874 - in business not at 209 but at the corner of Main and Jackson in Hyde Park.

That evidence is this: In 1897 the biography of Henry Frey, Scranton photographer, was included in Portrait and Biographical Record of Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania..., 1897, pp. 199-200, and two sentences from that biography have a direct bearing on whether 209 was where Jewell was located in 1874-1875. These are the two sentences: In August, 1874, Mr. Frey came to Scranton and for a year worked in Mr. Jewell's gallery, after which he bought out that gentleman and continued the photograph gallery on the corner of Main and Jackson. In 1883 he purchased from L. R. Evans his (Frey's) present place, and after carrying on the two galleries for three years, he closed out the older, combining it with the one at No. 421 Lackawanna Avenue.

Does not this first sentence say that Jewell's gallery was at the corner of Main and Jackson and that after Frey bought out Jewell that Frey continued the photograph gallery at the corner of Main and Jackson.

If this is what the first sentence is saying - and I think it is - then we know more about what happened to E. A. Heermans' studio at Main, corner of Jackson Street, Hyde Park, after 1873, when E. A. Heermans is last recorded working at "Hyde Park Gallery," as the studio was called. After Heermans went out of business (or died), Frank Jewell took over the Hyde Park Gallery, at the corner of Main Avenue and Jackson Street, and it was there that Jewell was in business when, in August, 1874, Henry Frey came to Scranton.

But if this is the case - if Jewell took over the Heermans' Hyde Park Gallery after the photographic partnership of Jewell & Chase at 209 Lackawanna Avenue came to an end - how then are we to account for the fact that Hull - located at 209 - in 1875 billed himself as the "successor to Frank Jewell"?

Maybe Hull was the successor to Jewell at 209 - albeit a successor to the premises - after the period of time in which 209 was vacant after Jewell left 209 and went to Hyde Park, and not the immediate successor to Jewell's actual business. If Jewell left 209 and went to Hyde Park Gallery then there is no problem with having Frey being his assistant there, and then Frey buying out Jewell at Hyde Park.

Richard Edwards, Industries of Pennsylvania, Statistical and Trade Review, Wilkesbarre, Scranton..., 1881, p. 306

Henry Frey, Photograph Artist, Main and Jackson Sts., Hyde Park

The gallery is situated in the second story of the large building on the corner of Main and Jackson streets,...

The gallery now owned by him was established in 1870, by Mr. E. A. Heermans, and purchased by Mr. Frey in 1875. It is known as the Hyde Park Gallery

What about Jewell's being there after Heermans? Edwards (1881) makes no mention of Jewell at the location.

Frank Jewell's interest in promoting the art of photography was no passing matter. He himself founded, and in February, 1877, published Volume 1, Number 1, of The Sunbeam. Immediately below the title on page 1 of this 4-page, small-format (1 sheet of paper, 12 1/4" X 18", folded in half, making 4 printed pages) newspaper, Jewell clearly states the purpose of his newspaper: "Devoted to the elevation of photography to its proper place among the arts."

Contents of Volume 1, Number 1

1. The three columns of page 1, and the first column of page 2 are an article entitled "Come, Let Us Reason Together," and it is written by "Frank Jewell, The leading Photographer." The article is a manual for those who are about to have their picture taken. Here is the first paragraph:

I desire to say a few words, in a kindly way, to those who anticipate having their photographs taken, in order that the intercourse between you and the photographer may be pleasant and agreeable, and result in a successful and pleasing picture.

The text is subdivided into the following sections: suggestions, when and how to come, appointments, the toilet, position, expression, our pets, facts, business, views

2. Page 2, column 2. Here we learn details concerning publication, intended content, advertising information, etc. This information is interesting that we may reproduce here four paragraphs:

"THE SUNBEAM" will be published once every three months by Frank Jewell, a practical photographic artist, and is devoted entirely to Photography and its elevation, and the education of the people in art. Each number will contain articles on art as applied to photography both original and selected as well as any other matter pertaining to photography, that will interest the reader, and make it an instructive and entertaining paper, and it shall be our aim that each succeeding number shall be more interesting than the preceding one.

Issued from Frank Jewell's Gallery, Throop's Block, Wyoming avenue, Scranton, Pa.

A limited number of select advertisements will be inserted at reasonable rates. Subscription, 50 cents per year; 25 cents six months - not necessarily in advance.

We would be glad to receive communications from any photographers, or others, on any subject pertaining to art that would be interesting to the public generally.

3. The remaining 4 1/2 columns of pages 2-3 contain notices and brief articles, written by Frank Jewell, and a selected article entitled "The Study and Practice of Photography," originally published in the Philadelphia Photographer.

4. Page 4 is a page of display advertisements.

The Sunbeam, Volume 1, Number 1, is a self-portrait of Frank Jewell. In it we are given a very detailed statement of Jewell's approach to and his thoughts about the art of photography. And he is quite frank, too, about his business affairs as we have seen in his remarks, entitled "Our Business," cited above.

45. Johnson

See also STEREOGRAPHERS, Vol. I, No. 4, pp. 22-23, NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

first documented record: 1860
last documented record: before 1867-1868
location of studio:
1860 Scranton, Pa.

Two photographs - impressions of each in the collection of Cy Grosvenor, Elmira, N. Y. and the Lackawanna County Historical Society, Scranton - showing views of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's railroad in Carbondale - bear the following printed address at the lower right:

Johnson, Photographer, Scranton, Pa.
Was Johnson in the employ of the D. & H. Canal Co?

In the family photograph collection at the Russell Homestead is a carte de visite portrait of Nathan Griswold (reproduced in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, Vol. I, No. 1, p. 4) printed on the back with the name of Johnson:

JOHNSON
Scranton, Pa.

No. ....

No initial is given on the imprint on the back of the photograph of Nathan Griswold nor is an initial given in the credit line at the base of each of the D. & H. Canal Co. photographs. The D. & H. Canal Co. photographs are both dated - in ink - "1860." Nathan Griswold was born in 1832 and he in this picture could well be in his twenties or early thirties and so we may speculate that all three of these photographs are more or less contemporary. The last word on this will have to wait until the identify of this (or these) Johnson(s) is further established.

The identity of Johnson, the Scranton photographer, has recently been further articulated. Another piece of the puzzle has been found - in the fine print at the base of a display ad which the Scranton photographer, William H. Schurch, placed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868, p. 219: Persons wishing duplicates from the old negatives made by Hope, Kellogg, Dean, Derman & Hermans, and Johnson, can bet them at a reduced price, at my studio.

On the basis of this fine print, it seems safe to assume that Johnson - and the others listed - had either died or gone out of business by 1867-1868.

46. Kellogg's Union Gallery

first documented record:
last documented record: before 1867-1868
location of studio:

A Scranton photographer by the name of Kellogg is known to the author on the basis of (A) three cartes de visite - one, a full-length standing carte de visite portrait of a young man wearing a Civil War uniform, inscribed on the back, "Capt. Bentley," in the collection of the Wayne County Historical Society, Honesdale. This carte de visite has printed in the center of the back a logo consisting of an eagle flying to the right, fictively carrying in its beak a long furling ribbon. The ribbon bears the following text:

KELLOGG'S
UNION

A fine biography and a portrait of Captain George F. Bentley are given on p. 145 of Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County, Second Edition, 1902 two, a carte de visite of a seated woman in "Civil War era" dress, printed on the back with the following address:

KELLOGG'S
UNION PHOTOGRAPH ROOMS,
SCRANTON, PA.

three, a carte de visite of a standing woman with her left hand on the back of a parlor chair, printed on the back with the same address as the carte de visite immediately above; and (B) some fine print at the bottom of a display ad which William H. Schurch placed in Andrew B. Galatian's History of the City of Scranton... For 1867 and 1868, p. 219. The fine print is this:

Persons wishing duplicates from the old negatives made by Hope, Kellogg, Dean, Derman & Hermans, and Johnson, can get them at a reduced price, at my studio.

On the basis of this fine print, it seems safe to assume that Kellogg - and the others listed - had either died or gone out of business by 1867-1868.

52. Millar (G. V.) & Co.

first documented record: active 1911-1912
last documented record:
location of studio:

Three post cards in the collection of the author bear on the back the printed address and/or stamp of G. V. Millar & Co.

--G. V. Millar & Co, Scranton
Published for C. E. Woodmansee. 10103
--G. V. Millar & Co., publishers, Scranton, Pa.
--G. V. Millar & Co., Scranton, Pa.

Each of the three post cards is a different view of Equinunk, Pa. They are three separate photographs used as post cards. Did Millar take the photographs or just print the cards?

G. V. Millar & Co., Scranton, Pa., also produced a great quantity of post card views of Varden, Pa. At one time, when the W. R. Shaffer store, Varden, Pa. was still in operation, a great number of different G. V. Millar & Co. post card views of Varden and the immediate vicinity could be purchased at the W. R. Shaffer store. The Reed family, South Canaan, has in their collection a large number of Millar post card views of that area. When asked, on May 3, 1980, what date he would give as the approximate date of the Millar cards of the Varden area, Kurt Reed replied: "We always figured from what they showed that it would be from the 1890's to the turn of the century that they were taken, but we could never pinpoint it precisely." Kurt Reed noted that Millar post card views have an easily identifiable grey tone about them, and showed to this author some sheets of Varden stationery which was once sold in the W. R. Shaffer store, Varden. This Varden stationery has on it excellent reproductions of the same G. V. Millar & Co. Varden post card views, but the stationery does not have the G. V. Millar & Co. imprint on it. Were it not for the fact that the photographs on the stationery and the identified post card views are so clearly identical, we would never guess that G. V. Millar & Co., Scranton, produced the Varden stationery.

See Harry W. Miller, below.

53. Millard, D. B.

first documented record: 1879-1880
last documented record: 1888-1889
location of studio:
--1879-1880 over Post Office Wyoming ave
Beginning with the ads from 1883 this "over Post Office Wyoming ave" is also called 33 Wyoming Avenue.
--1884, 1886, 1888-1889 103 Wyoming ave
Over Courtwright's Shoe Store, at the Cor.. Lackawanna & Wyoming Aves. Entrance on Wyoming, Scranton, Pa.
--314 Lackawanna Avenue
The author has in his collection four cabinet photographs - in three different styles - with the above address on them, and they are identified like this:

D. B. Millard, 314 Lackawanna Avenue,
Scranton, Pa.
Millard's, 314 Lackawanna Avenue,
Scranton, Penn.
Millard's, 314 Lackawanna Avenue,
Scranton, Penn.
Millard's Gallery, 314 Lackawanna Avenue,
Scranton, Pa.

Presumably all four are by D. B. Millard. The only bit of conflicting information is that in 1893-1894 Edward A. Millard's former - and perhaps he is still active - gallery at 225 Lackawanna Avenue is specifically called "Millard's Gallery."

It is surprising that Millard, who so frequently in the city directories from 1879 to 1885 is always listed and on four of these times he placed a display ad, is not mentioned in the directories after 1888-1889.

54. Miller, Harry W.

first documented record: 1910
last documented record:
location of studio:

A large - 9 7/9" X 7 5/8" - mounted photograph in the collection of the Russell Homestead, Carbondale, Pa., is inscribed on the back in the following way: Photographed by Harry W Miller in nineteen hundred and ten at 161 Lincoln Ave. Carbondale, Pa. The party is composed of the following
No. 1 George Munson
2 Mrs. George Munson
3 Theron Loomis
4 Mrs. Loomis
5 Hilon Squires
6 Paul Krauser
7 Mrs. Krauser
8 Will Russell
9 Mrs. Russell
10 Edna Loomis

Seated 1 to r: 2, 7 4
standing, 1 to r: 1, 9, 8, 6, 5, 10, 3

This Harry W. Miller might be some connection with the firm of G. V. Millar & Co. (above). The dates correspond perfectly: the group portrait was taken in 1910, and of the three post cards in the collection of the author, one is postmarked 1912, and another is postmarked 1911. And, all three of the post card portraits are taken in Equinunk, Pa., which would clearly indicate that the firm of "G. V. Millar & Co." travelled about taking pictures. The disparity between "Miller" in the inscription and "Millar" is perfectly understandable; Miller is the more common spelling of the word and if one only heard the name spoken, then one would surely spell it Miller, and not the less-common Millar.

The picture was obviously taken to demonstrate the Squire children, who are given the most prominent positions:

Adeline, Harriet and Mary Emma are seated in front, and their brother, Hilon, stands prominently behind them.
While standing in the back are the in-laws: husbands, children, child's mate.

This biography of James B. Schriever was published in Col. Frederick L. Hitchcock's HISTORY OF SCRANTON AND ITS PEOPLE..., Volume II, 1914, pp. 337-338.

Probably no science has offered a wider expanse for exploration and unique discovery than photography.
In the appliances invented, methods devised and processes discovered, a new art has been given to the world, an art of fact, not of fancy, beautiful with the beauty of nature, not of the imagination, a portrayal of things as they are, not as they might be. A leader in the revolution that has brought all this to pass, one of the most active workers for perfect photography, and a successful artist in every branch of his profession is James B. Schriever.

He is a son of German parents, his father, Jacob Schriever, having been born in Berlin, Germany, in 1814, whence he came to Baltimore, Maryland, later moving to Emporium, Pennsylvania. In the latter place he engaged in wholesale grocery dealing, and was so busied at the time of his death in 1877. He married Veronica Schmondt. They had: Maria, Elizabeth, Gertrude, James B., of whom further; Julia.

James B. Schriever was born in Brookville, Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, April 30, 1868. His education was obtained in the public schools and completed by a course in a business college, after which, at the age of nineteen years, he entered the photograph business in Kane, Pennsylvania, later moving to Emporium, in the same state, where he still conducted his operations, and in which place he married.
In 1900 he came to Scranton and opened a studio at
No. 110 Wyoming avenue, where he has continued to the present time, and conducts a business far in advance of any of a like nature in this city. In the equipment of this studio nothing has been left undone to make it the most complete possible. This, combined with Mr. Schriever's artistic ability, has drawn to him a well merited class of trade from the best people of the city. The negatives he has been able to make under the conditions include nearly every person of prominence in the city of Scranton, and also those in the surrounding country, and the reputation which he enjoys justly places him at the head of his profession in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Mr. Schriever has not confined his interests and works in photography to his studio, but has compiled and published a complete photographic encyclopedia of ten volumes, endorsed and approved by testimonials from the government and from universities. The only practical work on every thing photographic ever published. Realizing that associations are one of the best means for the dissemination of knowledge and information in any line of endeavor, he has ever supported such institutions as would advance his art, and is at the present time (1914) president of the Professional Photographers Society of Pennsylvania, members thereof representing three states, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and the District of Columbia. In March 1913, this organization numbered sixty-six members, and while only a beginning was of little practical value. Since Mr. Schriever became connected with it new life has been infused into its arteries, and largely through his efforts the membership has been increased until the total list numbers over eight hundred. Through this association he has probably done more to further the higher possibilities of photography than any other exponent of the art in this locality, and has begun to make possible great achievements in the way of public exhibitions and other demonstrations of like nature. That he is striving in a good cause, and that there is a wonderful future for advanced photography is shown by its introduction into many educational institutions and other organizations of a social and instructive nature. In the coalition of photographers and a sympathetic union for the common good lies the true hope of the most potent results, while in the education of the public tastes will the seed of future popularity be planted. It is along both these lines that Mr. Schriever has been active, and although his relation with such movements covers a period of but fourteen years, in that time he has accomplished much of real value, and perpetual effect. Besides holding membership in several social organizations and in those whose members are restricted to those of his profession, he belongs to the Business Men's Commercial Association.

Mr. Schriever married, at Emporium, Pennsylvania,
Katie, daughter of Charles Zarps. Mr. and Mrs.
Schriever are the parents of one daughter, Irene.

William H. Schurch is frequently listed in the city directories in the decade from 1865-1875, and on several occasions he placed display ads in the city directories. The instances where I have found him mentioned are these:

scopic Photographs, &c. Daguerreotypes and Am-brotypes Copied and Enlarged.

The above Schurch ad is found directly below a Brownell ad of exactly the same size. This practice of placing the display ads for various photographers in close proximity to each other is quite standard in the display ad pages of the city directories. And there is a variation on this practice: on the pages in the directories in which a certain photographer is listed among the citizens, frequently will be found another photographer's display ad. Such a practice can hardly have been accidental. Surely such propitious placement was meant to tempt the user of the directory with an alternative to the photographer whose name he was looking up.

Such cut-throat placement was surely arranged for by the advertisers, although perhaps such placement may have - for a price - been suggested to the client by the directory compiler and publisher.

Note:

The "fine part" in the display ads of the county and city directories sometimes contains the most astounding information. Take the example of this display ad. The last two sentences are in very small type at the very bottom of the ad, and were clearly not the most significant part of Schurch's complete menu of goods and services available. But look at what the last sentence says: "Persons wishing duplicates from the old negatives made by Hope, Kellogg, Dean, Derman & Hermans, and Johnson, can get them at a reduced price, at my studio."

Schurch bought the old negatives from the five photographers he lists. In my work on regional photographers I have not come across the names
Hope and Dean, I have only ever seen the name Kellogg in print once, Derman (which should be Derman) & Hermans (which should be Heermans) are not new to me but the firm is by no means widely known, and the photographic remains of Johnson are very scarce.

The parts are payable on delivery, the Carrier or Agent not being allowed to give credit.

PUBLISHER'S CARD

This forthcoming History of the Wyoming Valley, Upper Waters of the Susquehanna, and the Lackawanna Coal Region, which is to be photographically illustrated, will, in its reading matter also, as near as can be, by the ability of the editor, be a perfect photograph of the entire region, as named--not a history simply of the early days of the Valley, the Volume burdened with Indian names and derivations, but as before expressed a perfect photograph of Northeastern Pennsylvania, the pioneer in the perspective, the grand industries, mammoth enterprises, and natural beauties in the foreground. The pen will accompany the camera, in its tour around this section of the State, merely serving as an aid, to elaborate where the obstacles cut off the view, and to finish up incomplete prints. J. A. Clark

This advertisement is extremely important for our study of the work of William H. Schurch for were it not for this advertisement we would never know that the original photographs pasted into each copy of the published book were by him, since Schurch's name is nowhere mentioned in the title, nor is it mentioned in the preface - hanna, and the Lackawanna Coal-Region, including views of the natural scenery of northern Pennsylvania, From the Indian Occupancy to the Year 1875.

Photographically illustrated. Edited by J. A.
Clark. Scranton, Pa.: J. A. Clark, Publisher.
1875

PREFACE.

The chapters forming this volume were published in parts, and designed to cover the region embraced in the title from the Indian occupancy to the year 1875. The only merit it seeks to claim is that of a photographic view of the territory, the pioneer history in the perspective,--the grand industries, mammoth enterprises, and natural beauties in the foreground. It was the province of the pen merely to accompany the camera, serving to elaborate where obstacles cut off the view, and to retouch incomplete points. The task has been an arduous one, and like Goethe's star "without haste, but without rest,"

Scranton, May, 1875.

What does the Photo-Relief Printing Co. have to do with the photograph. Did Schurch take the original photograph and did Photo-Relief Printing Co. mechanically print the particular photograph? Is this particular photograph the only one in the book which the Photo-Relief Printing Co. mechanically mass-produced?

The problems of the authorship of the individual photographs aside, the work by J. A. Clark is an extremely important example of a stage in the history of book illustration. The book contains original photographs pasted-in (dubbed-in) each copy of the printed book. In a sense, each copy of the book is hand-made. In the days before photography the same process was used to include woodcuts and engravings in printed books. Naturally, the photographs, or the woodcuts or engravings, had to be produced separately and individually inserted (either by being pasted-in or, if the paper on which the original was produced were large enough, bound in with the other pages of the book).

Basically any method adapted to a printing press requires the transfer of a photographic image to a sensitized surface in such a manner that it will accept ink and then transfer the ink to paper. The idea is as old as photography itself. A daguerreotype could be etched with nitric acid and used as an intaglio plate from which a number of positive prints could be pulled. Many methods of photosensitizing the surfaces of stone, metal, wood block for engraving and other materials were devised before 1865. Alphonse Poitevin (1855) used bichromated gelatin which hardened under light to sensitize a variety of surfaces. J. A. Cutting and L. H. Branford (Boston, 1858) patented a similar process in the United States. These "colliotype" methods were improved in many ways so that by 1870 a dozen variants were used for printing pictures and illustrations for books.

No one today would have to be convinced of the great reliance we place on photographs as an integral part of books, but when Clark did his book, just over a hundred years ago, the book was one of the first of its kind. Twenty-seven years later the Honesdale publisher, Benj. F. Haines published a volume on Wayne County - Centennial and Illustrated Wayne County..., Second Edition, 1902 - with hundreds of photographs distributed throughout the text, and on the first page following the introduction (p. V), the author states in no uncertain terms the great importance the visual image plays in the volume:

Cartes de visite by Schurch are known to the author in two formats, both with a plain front, and both with the same elaborate cartouche surrounding the address given on the back. The address given in each format is different:

he had just purchased the daguerrean gallery which belonged to Collamer & Patton. We do not know why Collamer sold out, but an announcement which appeared in the editorial columns of the Carbondale paper, The Advance, of July 16, 1857 (Vol. 1, No. 9, p. 2, col. 3) reports the following:
We have been requested by Mr. Foedish to state that his Ambrotype Saloon will be closed for some time, as he has taken his apparatus to Hawley, so that the people of that locality may have an opportunity of supplying themselves with good likenesses.
Mr. G. Collamer is now at Waverly.

Are we to assume that Mr. G. Collamer is doing in Waverly what Mr. Foedish is doing in Hawley?
Certainly we are. The only snag in so assuming is this: what is he doing for equipment if he sold his gallery and equipment to Underwood?
And we know - from Underwood's announcement - that he (Collamer) has sold to Underwood the gallery and the equipment.

Wm. F. Underwood has the pleasure to announce to the Ladies and Gentlemen of Carbondale city and its vicinity, that he has purchased Collamer and Pugh's Daguerrean Gallery, including their "Mammoth Camera," the largest in Northern Pennsylvania, and intends to carry on the business in all its latest improvements.
At a great expense he has purchased the sole right for this County of the "Electro Galvanic Sensitive Plates," which give a rich tone and brilliantcy to his Pictures. Call and examine his exquisite specimens.

See Collamer, George W., in the Carbondale section, for Collamer's pre-Waverly career and for references to Collamer's post-Waverly activity.

ARTISTS, PAINTERS AND PICTURES

Terminology and classification in the nineteenth-century directories.

Marked differences occur between nineteenth-century terminology and classification and that in practice today.
In order to avoid any confusion in using city and county directories and at the same time to present a preliminary survey of trades and professions which exist on the fringes of studio photography, the following directory is offered. The material presented in this directory is what came my way as I was engaged in my main pursuit - the identity, location of studio, and years of working activity of studio photographers. No attempt was made in the preparation of this directory to be systematic or to be comprehensive.

By way of explanation:

At first, that is to say, in the days before photography,
ARTISTS were the men and women who did oil paintings and prints (engravings, lithographs, woodcuts, silhouettes).

But when PHOTOGRAPHERS came onto the scene, they - no doubt because they too immortalized the human likeness in the same way that ARTISTS did - also were referred to as ARTISTS.

And many PHOTOGRAPHERS did in fact do arty work - touch ups - on their photographs (blemish removing and handcolouring).

PICTURES generally mean oil paintings, and sometimes PHOTOGRAPHERS sold picture frames, frames which could be used for PHOTOGRAPHS or for oil paintings or for prints.

And some PHOTOGRAPHERS also practiced the profession of painting in oil paint, and they were thus in two ways ARTISTS (they were double ARTISTS): ARTISTS because they painted in oils, and ARTISTS because PHOTO-GRAPHERS were also considered ARTISTS. Another way to say this would be this - some PHOTOGRAPHERS were also PORTRAIT PAINTERS or LANDSCAPE PAINTERS.

So, PHOTOGRAPHERS frequently are referred to - and refer to themselves - as ARTISTS, but oil painters never refer to themselves as PAINTERS. They refer to themselves as ARTISTS. And naturally, oil painters never refer to themselves as PHOTOGRAPHERS. Or, to say this in still another way, a person called an ARTIST might be a PHOTOGRAPHER or he might be an oil painter or he might be both, and a person referred to as a PHOTOGRAPHER might also be referred to as an ARTIST, but a person referred to as an oil painter might only be called an ARTIST, he may never be referred to as a PHOTOGRAPHER.

And PHOTOGRAPHY SUPPLIES were sometimes sold in ART SHOPS, and some PHOTOGRAPHERS sometimes ran ART SHOPS.

PAINTERS are HOUSE PAINTERS and SIGN PAINTERS and CARRIAGE PAINTERS. Today the term PAINTER is widely used in art circles to refer to ARTISTS whose medium is oil paint. In the old days - before photography - a PAINTER was never a person who worked in oil paint and painted portraits.

ARTISTS

A preliminary survey of nineteenth-century artists of northeastern Pennsylvania.

These men and women painted portraits and landscapes in oil paint.

Unidentified Artists

- Jno. Pettigrew collection pictures of Irish saints and heroes.

Historical Souvenir of Carbondale, Penn'a. ("Published on the occasion of the Semi-Centennial Celebration of its Incorporation as a City. Sept.
1, 2, 3 and 4th, 1901.) p. 41, "Some Early Settlers"
In early times near where the Leader building now stands was the dwelling of Jno. Pettigrew, a sturdy Scotchman and leader of his people here. A lot or two below stood the hotel of John Coyle, who like his neighbor, was the king and leader of the Irish. His house was a reservoir of pictures and data of Irish saints and heroes. In every celebration John Coyle was a prime mover. He was before the days of photographs and all efforts to obtain a picture of this prominent citizen [for this, the 1901 book] failed.

JOHN HENRY KEMP

This portrait of John Henry Kemp was published by Dwight J. Stoddard in Prominent Men Scranton and Vicinity...., 1906, p. 89 (no. 355). Copy print by DWP.

Mr. George Starkey, the sculptor, of Scranton, paid Mr. A. Perkins a visit on Wednesday, and also made us a friendly call. Mr. Starkey is at present at work on a very fine piece of statuary which is to cost $3,000, and which is to be placed at the grave of Mr. Ira Tripp's daughter who died some time since. Mr. Starkey is a very conscientious artist, and his work is becoming to be well appreciated by the intelligent people of Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. His bust of the late Judge Conyngham is a master piece of art. Mr. Starkey has spent several years in Florence and Munich, and the knowledge and experience which he gained in those centres of the highest development of the fine arts has served him well. He passionately loves his noble profession, and bids fair to be recognized, at no very distant day, as one of the very few first-class sculptors which the country possesses.

Note: E. & H. T. Anthony & Co.

James D. Horan (Matthew Brady Historian with a Camera, (New York: Bonanza Books), 1955, pp.
14-16) provides a convenient introduction to the Anthonys.

Edward Anthony was a civil engineer working on the Croton Reservoir. One of his fellow engineers on the project was James Renwick, son of Professor James Renwick of Columbia University, one of the commissioners engaged in determining the Maine - New Brunswick boundary.
"Probably aware of Anthony's interest in photography young Renwick told his father and Professor Renwick "hired" Anthony to take a series of daguerreotypes showing the territory which was the subject of dispute between Canada and the United States. . . Upon his return from the northern expedition Anthony opened his daguerreotype gallery at 308 Broadway. . . After a few years he took in his brother Henry as a partner. He became the actual photographer in the studio, while Edward Anthony conducted a photographic supply business. Soon E. Anthony (later Ansco) was the largest photographic supply house in America."

LUZERNE COUNTY

Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties

On August 13, 1878, a large portion of Luzerne County became independently organized as Lackawanna County, and therefore all pre-1878 publications dealing with what is now Lackawanna County should - strictly speaking - be found here, in this Luzerne County section. But, for the sake of keeping the situation as uncomplicated as possible, they are not found here, but there - under Lackawanna County. Let the reader keep this fact in mind when he is dealing with the material for Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties.

Note: Phillips worked for at least 20 years (about 1933-1953) in the preparation of what was to be an encyclopedic history of Wilkes-Barre. He died before his manuscript could be published. This typed manuscript, of several thousand pages in length, collates an enormous amount of information about Wilkes-Barre drawn from the earliest newspapers and city directories and from the author's first-hand experience. Many of the primary sources used by Phillips were destroyed in the Wilkes-Barre flood of 1972.

LACKAWANNA COUNTY

Lackawanna and Luzerne Counties

On August 13, 1878, a large portion of Luzerne County became independently organized as Lackawanna County, and therefore all pre-1878 publications dealing with what is now Lackawanna County should - strictly speaking - be found in the Luzerne County section. But, for the sake of keeping the situation as uncomplicated as possible, they are found here, not there - under Luzerne County. Let the reader keep this fact in mind with the material for Lackawanna and Luzerne Counties.

A. history, atlases and maps, descriptions, biography

1. county-wide

The 1850 Census of Pennsylvania: Luzerne County Pearce. Annals of Luzerne, 1866.

Beers, D. G. Atlas of Luzerne County Pennsylvania From actual Surveys by and under the Direction of D. G. Beers, Eng. by Worley & Bracher, 320 Chestnut St.; Printed by E. Bourquin, 320 Chestnut St. (Philadelphia: A. Pomeroy and Co., 320 Chestnut St., 1873). Since in 1873 what in 1878 became Lackawanna County was still part of Luzerne County, this atlas is an important source material for the area which ultimately became Lackawanna County.

Clark, J. A., Editor. The Wyoming Valley, Upper Coal-Region, including views of the natural scenery of northern Pennsylvania, from the Indian Occupancy to the Year 1875. (complete reference given under Luzerne County)

CARBONDALE

Durfee, J. R. Reminiscences of Carbondale, Dundaff and Providence Forty Years Past. (Philadelphia: Miller's Bible Publishing House, 1875). This book was originally a series of letters written by J. R. Durfee and published in the Carbondale Advance, a newspaper, prior to November 1, 1874. The chapters of the 1875 book were serialized in the Carbondale (Pa.) News in 1971 (the second and third installments appeared on July 15 and July 22). Although this book contains much information that is useful, the reader is advised that the volume is riddled with factual errors and should, therefore, be used with extreme caution. One example of Durfee's accuracy will suffice: the ministers of the Berean Baptist Church of Carbondale, Daniel E. Bowen, Henry Curtis, Frederick Glanville, and John Emory Gault, become, in Durfee's Chapter XXIII--Church Records, "David E. Bowen, Henry Curliiss, Frederick Glauville, John Emory Gault."

Cramer 1975," and one in a private collection in Carbondale.

1873 De Beers

In 1890 another bird's eye view of Carbondale was published. This 1890 view is taken from a point slightly farther down the valley. The view in the 1890 print is from high in the air behind the Episcopal Church. The details of the 1890 print are these: Carbondale, Pennsylvania, 1890. Printed lower left: "Drawn by T. M. Fowler, Morrisville, Pa."; printed lower right: "Published by T. M. Fowler & James B. Moyer"; printed lower center: "A. E. Downs, Lith. Boston." The only copy of this large (about 3' X 4') print known to the author is a framed one in a private collection in Carbondale.

PHELPS & BRONSON.—Flour, Feed, Butter, Eggs, Cheese, &c., No. 334 Main St., near Wall St.

The business of handling flour, butter, eggs, &c., on an extensive scale, is well represented in Carbondale by the firm of Phelps & Bronson, who have been engaged in it since 1878, and were located at No. 10 Wall Street, but in the summer of 1881 removed to their present spacious and commodious quarters at No. 334 Main Street, having dimensions of 20 X 80 feet. These gentlemen deal largely in flour of the best known and most popular brands; also butter, eggs, cheese, feed, &c. and control a substantial trade, and also ship to New York consignments receiving the best market rates and make prompt returns.

The members of the firm are H. G. Phelps, of Sidney Plains, N.Y., and C. N. Bronson, of Carbondale, who are gentlemen well known in this vicinity as careful and reliable business men. They conduct the largest jobbing trade in their particular line of business in Carbondale, and are courteous and polite to every one, and popular with all who have dealings with them.

We have met above — in our discussion of Collamer in Carbondale — W. W. Bronson, the proprietor of the Railway Hotel. As far as Mrs. Emily Miller is able to say, this W. W. Bronson, and her grandfather, Charles Norman Bronson, were not related, although Mrs. Miller today remembers hearing when she was a little girl that her grandfather would travel to Union Dale — in those days quite a little excursion from Carbondale — to visit "Old Billy Bronson," as W. W. Bronson was called in his later days. Old Billy Bronson and Charles Norman Bronson both grew up (and were possibly both born) along the Connecticut River and during the Union Dale visits they would discuss the old days (their boyhood) in Connecticut.

Bronson Place:

Bronson Place is no more. It used to connect North Church Street and Terrace Street, Carbondale. The Charles Norman Bronson home used to be located at the corner of Bronson Place and North Church Street. Bronson Place is now the parking lot of the Frank Zazzera grocery store.

The above map is a copy by the author after the map that is given facing page 168 in Volume II of Glenn E. Griswold's The Griswold Family England - America, wherein (p. 166) is the following information about the Michael Griswold property on New Street: "He [Michael Griswold I] had a home and two acres on New Street, which street was abandoned 1660, so that his home was located as shown by the illustration facing on what is now Garden Street." In Volume III (p. 191) of Glenn E. Griswold's The Griswold Family England - America is the following information about the Michael Griswold property on New Street: "Michael owned considerable land, and his home lot which he gave to his wife Ann, then to his son Michael. There must have been a dwelling house with it, probably the original structure of the present Michael Griswold house, facing on Garden Street and later remodeled by his son Michael. This homelot was originally considered to have been on New Street just southwest of the present house, but later abandoned, and this bears out the contention that the present house and property was Michael's homelot."

I. George Griswold

The Griswolds of Clinton Township, Wayne County, Pennsylvania, are descendants of the English Griswolds who were established at Solihull, Warwickshire, England prior to 1400. The following account of the Griswold family in England is given by Ruth Lee Griswold (pp. 9-10):

The history of the Griswold family in this country [America] finds its source, as does that of most of the old families of New England, in Old England, and a brief sketch of the Griswold family in England from its earliest record, to the settlement of this country will afford a background for the generations that have carried on the name in this new land.

"The English Griswolds were an ancient county family established at Solihull, Warwickshire, England, prior to 1400: The name being generally written as Greswold but without doubt the "e" in the first syllable had the Latin sound as "i" short for it was often written Griswold or Gryswold and sometimes with a final "e." The family had a pedigree and were entitled to a coat of Arms, viz: Arg. a fesse gu. betw. two greyhounds current Sa. 1

They were descended from a John Griswold who came from Kenilworth about the middle of the 14th century, married and settled in Solihull, later acquiring Langdon Hall; and by Burke, the family is called Griswold of Kenilworth and Solihull.

The same authority goes on to say, "The family was of local distinction; they held county offices, were summoned by the Sheriff with the other gentlemen of the county to be present at the proclamation of Acts of Parliament and sworn to defend them. They sought and obtained wives from the local families, and an alliance with their daughters was considered honorable... They were not of the nobility, but belonged to the middle class landed gentry, that devout, patient, and, above all, valiant race, which has contributed so much to make England for centuries the foremost of nations."

The Family of Griswold descended from Humphrey Griswold of Greet, Lord of the Manor, are mentioned in English history as an honorable family in the sixteenth century. The Griswold family came into possession of the Malvern Estates about 1600 and have continued to be in possession of them thru all the changes of English law for over three hundred years. "It is a stately manor house in the style of Inigo Jones, set in the midst of a large park surrounded by a moat; and over the stone gateway is carved the family crest."

The English records show the Malvern Estate and Coat of Arms in 1659 belonging to Humphrey Griswold of Malvern Hall, who died in 1671. His brother, Rev. Henry Griswold, who succeeded him, died about 1720. His eldest son Humphrey succeeded to the title and held it until his death in 1772, leaving it to his brother Henry. When

From the Editor:

This issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA is the second portrait of a representative family from Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA, written by Silas Robert Powell, to be published in this historical quarterly. The first of these portraits--of Theron Orsenus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire--was published in Volume I, Number 1 (August 15, 1979). The present portrait is of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden and their ancestors and descendants.

The results of further historical research undertaken by Powell on Clinton Township will be published in the November 18, 1981 issue (Volume III, Number 2) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, wherein will be presented detailed information on, among others, the following pioneer families of Clinton Township (Norton, Grennell, North, West, Gaylord, Peck, Mc Mullen, Loomis, Ledyard, Bunting, Saunders, Davenport, Arnold) and the following, among others, pioneer ministers of the Clinton Center Baptist Church (Elijah Peck, John Smitzer, Horace Jones, Chas. H. Hubbard, Alex. Smith, Charles A. Fox, Henry Curtis, Geo. V. Walling, Joseph Curren, James Spencer, D. P. Purdon, B. B. Bunting, J. R. Remsen, James Rainey).

We would like, at this time, to bring to the attention of our readers the following news: The building in Honesdale, PA, which served as the land office of Jason Torrey, who surveyed Honesdale and most of the surrounding area in the 1830s, will be demolished unless the necessary funds can be raised by February 1, 1981 to move and renovate this architecturally important building--the first commercial brick building in Honesdale and one of that city's oldest structures (built circa 1830).

For more information on how you can help save the Torrey Land Office, write to either of the following persons, c/o The Wayne County Historical Society, Box 446, Honesdale, PA 18431:

Charles Hames, President of The Wayne County Historical Society

Byron White, Chairman of the Fund Raising Committee.

The next issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume II, Number 3) will be a history of Maplewood Cemetery, Carbondale, PA. That issue, which will contain a list of the names of the over 7,000 persons interred in that cemetery (date of death, date of burial, cause of death, age, and nationality will be given for each of those persons), will be published on February 18, 1981.

Silas Robert Powell

he died he left an only daughter, Anne. The title then passed to Rev. Matthew Griswold, Justice of the Peace for the County of Warwick. When he died in 1778 he left a daughter, Mary Griswold of Malvern Hall, who married David Lewis, Esq. They left no male heirs but three daughters: Magdalene married the fourth Earl of Dysart; Anne Maria married the fifth Earl of Dysart; and Eliza died unmarried. But the father of these girls—David Lewis Esq., had by a second marriage a son Henry Griswold Lewis of Malvern Hall, who inherited the Malvern estate and Arms of Griswold. He married Charlotte Bridgeman, daughter of Lord Bradford, who died without issue.

The estate then passed to Lieutenant Colonel Edmund Meysey Griswold of the English Army, who held it until his death January 6th, 1833. The title then passed by a former marriage to his Uncle Henry Griswold of Malvern Hall, second son of the Rev. Henry Wigley M. A. of Pensham, Worcestershire County. About a month after the death of Col. Griswold, on February 8th, 1833, Henry Griswold assumed by sign manual the surname and arms of Griswold instead of his family name of Wigley. His descendants were still in possession of Malvern Hall when Stephen M. Griswold prepared his record of the Griswold family in 1872, from which source I gathered some of the foregoing material.

The specific line of descent of the Griswolds of Clinton Township, Wayne County, from the English Griswolds who were established at Solihull, Warwickshire, prior to 1400 is, however, unclear. This is a consequence of what Adeline Bartlett Allyn describes as the "malicious conduct of Abraham Bronson." In Black Hall Traditions and Reminiscences, Allyn gives an account of Matthew Griswold (b. 1620, settled in Windsor, Saybrook and Lyme, Connecticut; a brother of Michael Griswold of Wethersfield, Connecticut—the Griswold from whom the Griswolds of Clinton Township, Wayne County are descended) and his descendants. In that work, Allyn states (pp. 29-30):

We have told, in enumerating the children of Matthew Griswold, 1st, and Annah Wolcott, that their youngest daughter, Martha, married Lieut. Abraham Bronson, or Bronson. Now we will relate the story of how he conferred a great and irreparable injury to the family of Griswold, and deprived us of our rights in England, and all proofs of the English connections and origins.

We give the copy of an affidavit before William Ely, Justice of the peace, Nov. 15, 1699, by Henry Mervin, "that Bronson told him that he had a trunk of writings that were his father-in-law's which he said would vex his brother-in-law Matthew Griswold very much. I [Mervin] told him [Bronson] that I [Mervin] had heard so--and I [Mervin] told him that I believed that there were some weighty concerns in those papers for money, either in this country or in England; he [Bronson] answered that there were some great concerns in them, and these were some papers that Griswold [Bronson's wife's brother] never knew of and never should." This concealment of title deeds to property was complained of to the General Court by Matthew Griswold in 1700.

Had these papers been found and recorded they would undoubtedly have thrown some light on the English ancestry of the Griswolds.

Matthew Griswold's loss of deeds was fatal to his claims in England. Hence, owing to the blind malice of Abraham Bronson, the English property was irretrievably lost, and with it all the family history connected with the transmission.

It is a mystery which has never been solved nor can any clue be found to it. What was the character of Bronson? What angered him against his brother-in-law, his wife's eldest brother and the head of the family? How the family papers came into his possession no one knows and probably no one ever will, in this world.

It is from Michael Griswold of Wethersfield, Connecticut, that the Griswolds of Clinton Township, Wayne County, are descended. In Black Hall Traditions and Reminiscences, Adeline Bartlett Allyn lists Michael Griswold as one of the five sons of George Griswold of Kenilworth, England. She states (pp. 17-18):

From a record in the State Library of Connecticut, at the Capital in Hartford, I find a record as follows:

- "George Griswold of Kenilworth, England, had five sons born in England.
1. Thomas remained in England
2. Michael b. 1597, settled in Wethersfield Conn.
3. Edward b. 1607, settled in Windsor Conn. 1639
4. Francis, settled in Cambridge Mass.
5. Matthew b. 1620 settled in Windsor, Saybrook and Lyme Conn. This is Matthew, 1st.

II. Michael Griswold (1)<sup>2</sup>

That Michael Griswold is a son of George Griswold of Kenilworth, England, and that he, Michael, is a brother of Edward and Matthew Griswold are not universally accepted facts. In Volume II of The Griswold Family England—America, Glenn E. Griswold makes, for example, the following remarks regarding the relationship between Michael, Edward and Matthew Griswold (p. 166):

Much argument, speculation, and conjecture has been spread upon the records as to whether any relationship existed between Michael, Edward and Matthew Griswold. Extensive search has been made through the years and the compiler of this record has added to that search without result. It has been generally thought they were brothers but at the present time no authentic proof has been found to determine this question or to support that theory. In fact, the records and circumstances rather tend to the contrary. Edward and Matthew were much alike in figure, ability, disposition, and business acumen; while Michael was very much unlike the general make up of the other two.

Search has been going forward in England to determine this and other questions but thus far nothing has been found.

The following rather comprehensive summary of the published and unpublished opinions regarding the relationship of Michael, Edward and Matthew Griswold is given by Ruth Lee Griswold in A Narrative of the Griswold Family From Thomas Griswold, Esq. re of Wethersfield and Guilford 1695 (pp. 10-11):

The Connecticut Griswolds are descended from the brothers Edward and Matthew who came to Windsor in 1639, and from Michael, possibly another brother, who came to Wethersfield.

There has been no positive proof offered of the relationship of these three, but the Rev. F. W. Chapman, whose extensive research in Griswold Genealogy was never published, is quoted as having written, "I have documentary evidence that he was a brother of Edward and Matthew; also of Francis, who settled in Cambridge, Mass., and died without male heirs." 3.

In this same connection Mr. B. Howell Griswold of Baltimore supplied the following note from papers of the late Rev. F. W. Chapman whose "genealogical labors will long preserve his name in memory." He said: "Michael Griswold of Wethersfield was undoubtedly a brother of Edward Griswold of Windsor and of Matthew of Lyme. He afterward removed to Killingworth and was one of the founders of that town. Isaac, a son of Michael, also settled at Killingworth and in a conveyance of land speaks of his Uncle Edward of the same place." To this Mr. B. H. Griswold adds, "I have not located the conveyance of land referred to in Mr. Chapman's statement. His son stated when I bought his father's manuscript that some important papers had been abstracted by a borrower and the copy may have been one of the missing papers." This statement seems to have been made in good faith.

Said Frank Farnsworth Starr on this subject "... Of the early Griswold family, Edward of Windsor, 1639-40, Matthew of Windsor and Saybrook 1639-40, Michael of Wethersfield 1640, Francis Griswell, Greshold or Gresshould of Cambridge and Charlestown 1639, it is claimed that Edward and Matthew were brothers but whether proof is positive I do not know. Michael is also claimed as brother and of Francis I am not informed. ["Savage gives these different spellings of the name--Griswell, Grisill, Grisold, Gresold, Greshould, Griswold.

Mrs. E. E. Salisbury wrote in 1889 to Judge Adams—"In regard to Michael Griswold, Mr. Salisbury and I have for years been searching for the ancestry of Edward and Matthew, sons of George of Kenilworth (Co. Warwick, Eng.). The early records there are destroyed and the English family is extinct. Matthew owned a house and land which he left in the occupation of his brother Thomas. The education of the brothers and their high public and private status in the country give evidence that they belonged to the gentry of England but we can trace their pedigree no further."

Stiles in his history of Ancient Wethersfield quotes these two opinions and favors the latter.

Whether or not Michael, Edward and Matthew Griswold are siblings, whether or not Thomas and Francis Griswold are siblings of Michael, Edward and Matthew Griswold, a good deal of information is known about Michael Griswold, the first ancestor of the Griswolds of Clinton Township to arrive in America. The following information about Michael Griswold is reported by Glenn E. Griswold in Volume II of his history of the Griswold family (p. 166):

Michael came to New England; mason by trade and yeoman in rank. Owned lands in Wethersfield as early as 1640. Was the only freeman of the name in Wethersfield in 1659. Served as constable, assessor and appraiser of land. He was never prominent and apparently did not seek to be, and did not reach the success in life that came to Edward and Matthew. He evidently had the confidence of his neighbors; a steady individual, content to ply his trade, yet ever ready to assist in the community welfare. He was associated with Emanuel Buck in business for a time. Had a home and two acres on New Street, which street was abandoned 1660, so that his home was located as shown by the illustration facing [see p. 1] on what is now Garden Street.

General Court record, Feb. 23, 1659, he was freed from training but was to maintain watch and ward. John Riley in his will, May 13, 1674, Hartford probate records, mentions "my cousin Michael Griswold."

In Volume III of his history of the Griswold family, Glenn E. Griswold reports the following information about Michael Griswold (p. 191):

Michael was one of the earliest settlers of Wethersfield, or Watertown, as originally called; it was under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and the towns from which they sprang. The name was changed to Wethersfield about 1636. It was also under the jurisdiction of the church in Watertown, Mass., until such time as the settlers organized their own church in Wethersfield.

One session at least of the General Court was held in Watertown, on the Connecticut River, and it is interesting to note that at this session administration was granted on the estate of the murdered Oldham who led the first group of settlers to Wethersfield.

The exact time of Michael Griswold's arrival there is not known, but from subsequent data we believe he probably arrived with Emanuel Buck and John Riley. The records show a close intimacy between these men, and Michael is called a kinsman of Emanuel Buck. It is also shown that they were owners of land in common and associated in business together.

The will of John Riley 1674 mentions his brother Emanuel Buck; his brother John Belding; and his cousin Michael Griswold.

Michael owned considerable land, and his home lot which he gave to his wife Ann, then to his son Michael. There must have been a dwelling house with it, probably the original structure of the present Michael Griswold house, facing on Garden Street and later remodeled by his son Michael. This homelot was originally considered to have been on New Street just southwest of the present house, but later abandoned, and this bears out the contention that the present house and property was Michael's homelot.

Michael evidently held the respect of his neighbors. He was one of a committee to obtain a minister for their church 1665. Also served as constable, a post considered of great importance in those days. Also held the office of assessor and appraiser of lands.

It is not known who was the wife of Michael, but as there was such close association of Michael and Emanuel Buck, it would not be surprising if we found that she was the sister of Emanuel, had we the records from England showing this Buck family.

Michael Griswold and his wife, Ann, were the parents of nine children. Glenn E. Griswold gives the following information about the children of Michael and Ann Griswold in Volume II of his history of the Griswold family (p. 167):<sup>4</sup>

Their children recorded in Wethersfield:

- 2 Thomas, b. Oct. 22, 1646.
- 3 Hester, b. May 8, 1648
- 4 Mary, b. Jan. 28, 1650
- 5 Michael, b. Feb. 14, 1652; d. inf.
- 6 Abigail, b. June 8, 1655.
- 7 Isaac, b. Sept. 1658.
- 8 Jacob, b. Apr. 15, 1660.
- 9 Sarah, b. Sept. 1662
- 10 Michael, b. Mar. 7, 1666/7.

Wethersfield, Conn. records; Stiles Ancient Wethersfield, II, 166; Conn. Colony records, Vol. I, 3, 44; II, 195, 198, 520.

Michael Griswold died on September 26, 1684. The following information about the estate of Michael Griswold is reported by Ruth Lee Griswold (pp. 13-14):

When he [Michael Griswold] died on Sept. 26, 1684 the inventory of his estate was taken by Samuel Talcott, Samuel Butler and Timothy Hide. He left an estate of £ 628-01-00 giving to his wife Ann the life use of his home lot, then to go to his son Michael. To his oldest son Thomas he gave the house where Thomas then lived, with the barn and 1 1/2 acres of land; with other pieces of land also. To his son Isaac he left half of the homestead bought of Luke Hitchcock, together with other lands. To his third son Jacob among other lands sixteen acres at "Two-Stone Brook" now Griswoldville, which was land given him by the Town in 1674, which with other land bought by Jacob has remained in the Griswold family to this day. This will probably drawn by Gershom Bulkely is recorded in Vol V p. 205 Hartford Probate Court Records, and his wife Ann was appointed by him as Executrix. In the event of her death before his he appointed "My oldest surviving son to be executor." A codicil was dated Sept. 22, 1684, Witness--John Buttolph, Eleazer Kimberly, Proven Dec. 18, 1684.

Ruth Lee Griswold reports, in addition, the following information about Michael Griswold in her history of the Griswold family published in 1931 (p. 13):

All this leads us to Michael Griswold who settled in Wethersfield and owned land there as early as 1640. He was the only "freeman" of that name in Wethersfield in 1659.

His cattle ear-mark is recorded; and he paid a fence tax in 1647.

He was constable, assessor and appraiser of lands.

He was a mason by trade, a yeoman in civil rank.

His house in Black Lane is still--part of it--in existence. His son Michael probably built the present house tho some attribute it to his later years.

He was born in England and was probably a young man when he came to this new land of adventure; also probably marrying after his arrival. His wife's name was Ann--the family name still being either utterly lacking or one of doubt.

As constable in Wethersfield, Michael Griswold was, as Ruth Lee Griswold reports, twice slandered by a one Katheran Harrison (p. 14):

It was during the period of the witchcraft craze that a Katheran Harrison accused of witchcraft wrote a petition to the court setting forth her sufferings. It is not perhaps surprising, but it is surely interesting to note that in her sense of wrong she should tell Michael Griswold that he "would hang her tho by so doing he damned a thousand souls; and as for his own soul it was damned long ago." For this Michael brought two suits for slander, and Katheran was adjudged to pay him 25 pounds and costs in one case and 15 pounds and costs in another.

III. Thomas Griswold (2)

Thomas Griswold is the oldest child of Michael and Ann Griswold. He was born on October 22, 1646 in Wethersfield, Connecticut. On November 28, 1672 he married Mary Howard who, we learn from Volume II of Glenn E. Griswold's history of the Griswold family, is the daughter of Henry and Sarah (Stone) Howard. Thomas and Mary Griswold were the parents of six children, about whom Glenn E. Griswold reports the following information (p. 167):

Children recorded in Wethersfield:

- 11 Thomas, b. Jan. 11, 1673.
- 12 Jacob, b. Feb. 5, 1675.
- 13 Isaac, b. Aug. 20, 1678 (Non compos).
- 14 Martha, b. 1682; d. 1684
- 15 Michael, b. Jan. 28, 1680
- 16 Samuel, b. Dec. 15, 1684

Wethersfield, Conn. records; Savage Gen. Dict., II, 471; Stiles Ancient Wethersfield, II, 395, 439.

Glenn E. Griswold gives the following information about Mary (Howard) Griswold's father, Henry Howard (p. 167): "Henry Howard was of Hartford and later of Wethersfield, Conn. Never was particularly prominent but a substantial citizen."

Mary (Howard) Griswold died on October 29, 1718, at the age of 71. She is interred in Wethersfield Cemetery, and the inscription on her tombstone reads as follows: "Here lies the body of Mary the wife of Thomas Griswold who dept<sup>d</sup> this life Oct. the 29th, 1718, ae 71 years." Glenn E. Griswold reports (p. 167) that Mary (Howard) Griswold is mentioned in her father's will, Hartford, Conn. probate, Vol. VIII, 1.

Ruth Lee Griswold gives the following information about Thomas Griswold (p. 14):

Thomas was a surveyor of highways 1675, constable 1690. His wife who died Oct. 29, 1718 ae 71 yrs. was the daughter of Henry Howard (Hayward) mentioned by Savage as of Hartford but later of Wethersfield where he married Sarah Stone, Sept. 28, 1648 (possibly a sister of Rev. Samuel Stone), and where all his children were born.

Thomas Griswold died on October 28, 1718.

V. John Griswold (88)

John Griswold is the eleventh child of Samuel and Mary (Francis) Griswold. Very little is known about John Griswold. It is known that he was born on June 23, 1721, in Wethersfield, Connecticut, and that he inherited property in Wethersfield from his father, Samuel (see paragraphs 6, 10 and 13 of Samuel Griswold's will, above). John Griswold's wife's name is not yet known.

It is known, in addition, that John Griswold (88) and his wife were the parents of John Griswold (375A), who was born on October 15, 1754, and who, in October 1790 in Sandisfield, Massachusetts, married Elizabeth Crittenden. In his history of the Griswold family in England and America (Volume III, p. 206), Glenn E. Griswold lists John Griswold (375A) as the son of John Griswold (88), as follows:

VI. John Griswold (375A)

John Griswold was born on October 15, 1754 in Norwich, Massachusetts. At the age of 18 he served in the Revolutionary War. Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis gives the following information about the military service of John Griswold in her 1955 book, Ancestry of Ora Loomis Russell [and] Edna Loomis Loomis [and] Descendants of Ora Loomis Russell (p. 81):

"[John Griswold] Appears with rank of Private on Muster and Pay Roll of Capt. Amos Rathbun's Co., Maj. Caleb Hyde's detachment of militia. Enlisted July 6, 1777; Discharged July 26, 1777. Time of service 19 days. Company marched to re-inforce Northern Army and was discharged 97 miles from home." Vol. 22; 124. "Appears with rank of Private on Muster and Pay Roll of Capt. Rathbun's Co., John Brown's (Colonel) detachment of militia. Enlisted Sept. 21, 1777; Discharged Oct. 14, 1777. Service 24 days. Company marched by request of General Gates." Vol. 3: 112 (Commonwealth of Mass. Office of the Sec., - Revolutionary War Service of John Griswold).

In Volume III of his history of the Griswold family, Glenn E. Griswold gives the following information about the military service of John Griswold (p. 206): "John served in the Revolution 1776; 1777, 4 mo. Capt. Murray, Col. Williams, and with Capt. John Catlin."

In Sandisfield, Massachusetts, in October 1790, John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden were married. "Removed to Bristol, Schoharie county, N. Y. Lived there about five years; then to Canaan, Wayne county, PA" (Glenn E. Griswold, III, p. 207). In his History of Wayne County, Phineas G. Goodrich gives the following information about the geographical movements of the John Griswold family (p. 325):

In the fall of 1813, John Griswold Sr., and some of his family came from Torrey lake, and put up a log-cabin on land adjoining that of Rufus Grinnell, and in January following, moved his family down on an ox-sled.

On September 6, 1920, the following history of the John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold family was read at Pioneer Day, Clinton Township, Wayne County:

HISTORY OF GRISWOLD'S PIONEER DAY

History of John and Elizabeth Griswold read at the Pioneer Observance, Clinton Centre, Monday, September 6, 1920.

We have come here to show our appreciation to a famous and illustrious pioneer of our country. Famous, in that he was one of those sturdy pioneers that founded our country - Illustrious, for the honesty and integrity he has left to posterity. So today we have come here to dedicate this monument to his memory.

He was born in Granville, Hampshire County, Mass., 1754 and died October 16, 1843. In Oct. 1790 or '91, he was married to Elizabeth Crittenden at Sandisfield, Mass.

At the age of eighteen, July 8th, 1777, he enlisted in the Continental Army in Rathbun's Co., Major Caleb Hyde's detachment of Militia. They marched to re-inforce the Northern Army. Again in the same Co., he was under the command of General Gates, and was honorably discharged for his service. And right we have to think that John Griswold belonged to those heroes that purchased liberty, although, he was not killed on the battle field.

About 1810 or '11, John Griswold and his family left their home in Mass. Their first stop was made at Butternut Plains, along the Hudson, but after spending some time there, they came to what is now known as Niagara and later they settled on the old Gaylord place in Clinton [specifically, in Aldenville; the Gaylord place later became the Remsen Homestead; the Gaylord-Remsen Homestead in Aldenville is presently the James Minor place] and began to clear the land. They were informed that this land belonged to someone else, so they moved on and settled on the farm now owned by Mr. Grunski. They reached here 110 years ago.

Their log cabin was built at the foot of the mountain where the old road was situated. They immediately set to work, clearing the land and setting out an orchard. The old road mentioned was the one traveled by Gen. Wayne. Some years later, John Griswold, with the help of his son Summer, built a new home.

He was also prominent in religious matters, being for many years a deacon in the Baptist Church. John Griswold, was a man of medium height, dignified bearing and a prominent person in his community. His wife was short of stature, with all the essentials of a pioneer. She was blind the last thirty years of her life. She lived to be a little past ninety.

The family moved from Mass. to Penna. with their possessions, in a heavy two-wheeled cart, drawn by four year-old steers. The mother rode the horse and the little colt followed. In the wilderness, they set to work to build their log cabin and to clear the land for crops. The trees at that time, were considered worthless and were burned. The pioneers often found the trees difficult to cut on account of their great size.

The wild animals still roamed through the forest and the early settlers had many encounters with these. Some families, having sheep took turns during the night watching from the windows of their log cabins to protect them from the wolves and bears, which might be searching for an early breakfast.

IV. Samuel Griswold (16)

Samuel Griswold is the youngest child of Thomas and Mary (Howard) Griswold. He was born on December 15, 1684 in Wethersfield, Connecticut. On March 11, 1708, in Wethersfield, he married Mary Francis--b. May 26, 1689, daughter of Sgt. John and Mercy (Crittenden) Francis. Glenn E. Griswold reports, in Volume II of his history of the Griswold family, the following information about the family of Mary Francis (p. 181):

Sgt. John Francis was a man of considerable importance and consideration. Served as sergeant with the Colonial Troops. His estate, Hartford probate, Vol. VIII, 95, mentions Mary, wife of Samuel Griswold and daughter of said deceased.

From Glenn E. Griswold (Vol. II, p. 181), in addition, we learn that Samuel Griswold removed to Guilford about 1695, and that he there owned a farm in the Black Rock district.

Samuel and Mary (Francis) Griswold were the parents of fifteen children (Glenn E. Griswold, II, p. 181):

- 78 Mercy, b. July 27, bapt. Aug. 27, 1708.
- 79 Samuel, b. Feb. 7, bapt. 12th, 1709/10.
- 80 Lucy, bapt. Nov. 11, 1710; d. Feb. 17, 1712.
- 81 Jared, bapt. Jan. 11, 1712.
- 82 Lucy, bapt. Dec. 12, 1712.
- 83 David, bapt. Jan. 8, 1712/13.
- 84 Lucy, b. Dec. 8, 1714.
- 85 Nehemiah, b. Aug. 12, 1716.
- 86 Jeremiah, b. Feb. 8, bapt. 9th, 1717.
- 87 Moses, b. Nov. 2, 1719.
- 88 John, b. June 23, 1721. No other information.
- 89 Mary, b. June 25, 1723.
- 90 Manus, b. Sept. 4, 1727.
- 91 Aaron, bapt. Apr. 6, 1729.
- 92 Sarah, bapt. June 22, 1731.

Samuel Griswold's will is reprinted in Volume II of Glenn E. Griswold's history of the Griswold family. The complete text of that very interesting historical document is as follows (pp. 181-183):

I, Samuel Griswold, of Guilford, in the county of New Haven, in the Colony of Connecticut, altho I am now sick and weake, and expect to move out of this world in a short time, yet since through Divine Favour I have my reason, therefore think it my duty to make my will and settle my affairs.

But principally and first of all I recommend my soul into the hands of my merciful creator hoping for a glorious resurrection.

I will and bequeath to my loving wife Mary Griswold the use and improvement of the one third part of all my buildings and lands during the term of her natural life and I give and grant to my said wife to be at her own free dispose the third part of my moveable estate.

My will is that what grain & provision that I leave shall be for the use of my family and not be inventoried and my will is that my executor thereafter named shall sell my old oxen and so much of the price

One day the three sons of John Griswold, Horace, aged 11 with his two younger brothers, Sumner and Sedate, were out playing in the forest, when they chanced to see an animal sunning itself by a fallen log. The boys discovered the animal was a panther and departed, in haste, for home.

Everyone was busy about the log cabin. The good housewife, spent her spare moments in spinning the wool and flax and weaving it into cloth. The family clothing and the household linen depended upon her nimble fingers. Some of the trees of the forest supplied them with coloring matter, such as walnut. Much ingenuity was shown in the weaving of their fine linens. Designs were sometimes woven in their tablecloths.

The early settlers found nature a bountiful provider in the line of fish and wild game. As soon as the land was ready they sowed the grain and planted the crops they needed for their own use. The sap of the maple trees, supplied them with sugar. The old sugar barrel belonging to John Griswold, is in good condition today and is owned by F. H. Curtis. The old canteen, another relic carried by John Griswold in the Revolutionary War, is at the home of Augusta Curtis. The silver knee buckle and powder flask are owned by William Griswold of Pine City, New York.

John Griswold took on horse-back the first grist of wheat which he raised and started for Wilkes-Barre, to have it ground. The first night he camped on the forks of a river, near the present site of Scranton. He caught enough fish for supper and breakfast. While eating his supper, he heard a slight noise and saw three deer coming toward the river. Then he shot the first one, a nice fat yearling. He dressed it and hung it on a limb of a tree near by.

The next morning, he continued his way to Wilkes-Barre. When the wheat was ground he started on his homeward journey, camping at the place where he left his deer in the morning. He strapped one of the hind quarters on the horse's back and departed for home. He reached home toward evening, where the anxious family were watching and waiting for his delayed return.

The names of his sons were as follows: John, Francis, Orin, Sumner, Horace and Sedate. His descendants are many and are found in all parts of the United States.

Whether or not we ever trace our English forebears, we may be sure that these Old New England ancestors were men who lived for the ideals of justice and right, and were among those who came across the ocean in the pursuit of the principles that make life worth living, and that they were worthy of being kept fresh in the minds of their posterity.

John Griswold died on October 16, 1843, at the age of 89. Elizabeth Crittenden died on September 14, 1851, at the age of 90. Both are interred in Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery. Their graves are marked by two stones:

1. a natural flint conglomerate stone from the Moosic Mountain west of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, standing on a concrete foundation, to which is attached a bronze plaque with the following inscription:

"Monument Committee reported the tablet for the monument on its way and plans were made for having it placed on monument by Labor Day when fitting exercises would be held."

Minutes of the Griswold Reunion 1922

September 4, 1922

The Griswold Monument, with bronze plaque attached, is officially dedicated at Clinton Center's Pioneer Day, September 4, 1922. The following notice about that Pioneer Day celebration was published in The Wayne Independent:

CLINTON CENTER'S PIONEER DAY

The Pioneer or "Old Home Day" was observed as usual at the Clinton Baptist church with a good attendance. While it was rainy in the morning, it cleared and was beautiful sunshiny weather to gladden the large number present.

The fine dinner served by the ladies of the church was the greatest attraction from twelve o'clock, until all were supplied.

The first event of the day was the dedication of a newly erected conglomerate stone monument with a bronze tablet, in memory of John Griswold, a Revolutionary soldier, and ancestor of the Griswold families of Clinton. A very suitable address was given by George Curtis, whose mother, Mrs. Louisa Griswold Curtis, was a granddaughter of John Griswold. Mr. Curtis dwelt on the intense loyalty and patriotism of the American soldier, which not only made it possible for our country to obtain its independence in 1776, but in the several wars, 1812, Mexican, the Rebellion, Spanish-American and the so recent world contest, has been so efficient in support of the principles of freedom, that we are renowned as "the land of the free and the home of the brave."

From the cemetery, repairing to the church, exercises were interspersed by choir singing, under the enthusiastic leadership of Arthur Curtis, which always adds so much to the pleasure of the celebration. An address of welcome was given by Rev. F. A. Childs, pastor of the Aldenville and Clinton Baptist churches. The president referred to those who have passed on since the last meeting, especially, Myron Norton, who has been one of the most active members of the organization. Singing, Shall We Meet at the River?

Resolutions were passed that expressions of regret be sent to Rev. James Rainey, a former loved and respected pastor, Sheldon Norton, the originator of "Old Home Day" and to Mrs. Laura Loomis, expressing our sorrow that they were unable to be present, and tendering our good wishes for the future; also to Rev. George S. Wendell and Mrs. Wendell, with our sympathy in the trials they are enduring in the severe illness of their daughter.

The present officers were re-elected: E. M. Peck, president; Wm. P. Rude [should read "Wm. E. Rude"], vice president, Arthur Curtis and W. P. [sic] Rude for Clinton church; G. H. Knapp and George Gaylord, Aldenville church; E. H. Ledyard and G. H. Gaylord, Maple Grove; Claude Stanton, South Clinton, M. H. Gager and M. A. Loomis, Waymart church, for committee of general work of the organization.

Rev. James Pope, pastor of the South Clinton Baptist church, spoke of the sterling qualities possessed by the early settlers, and the loving memory in which they should and are held. Numerous recitations by Mrs. Margaret Rensen Rude were very pleasant reminders of former favors she has rendered. Rev. Frank A. Stanton, pastor of the Berean Baptist church of Carbondale, gave an address, especially emphasizing the necessity of being loyal and obedient to the laws of a country that has done so much for the uplift of the whole world. A couple of recitations by Emmons L. Peck were very pleasing.

The president had an old tin lantern, round and pointed at the top, full of punched holes, to let out the dim light of a "tallow dip," which is owned by Sheldon Norton. He also read the composition, "The old Tin Lantern, Battered, Rusty and Worn," written by Mr. Norton, which illustrated the place it had in the early days, when but little light was had. One of the most pleasing meetings in memory of the early settlers of Clinton was closed by prayer and benediction by Rev. Mr. Stanton.

The third reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold was held at Grange Hall, Clinton, Wayne Co., Pa., August 21, 1907.

After a most elaborate dinner, the company assembled in the hall to enjoy the excellent program arranged by the committees. Many praises were heard in their favor. The assembly adjourned before a business meeting was called, and therefore no new committees, roll call or any other business matter was attended to.

The committee on by-laws submitted the following for ratification and it was moved and seconded that they should become the by-laws of the association.

By-laws of the Griswold Re-Union.

—Preamble— The object of this Reunion shall be for a general good and friendly meeting; not only this but that Relatives, Friends and neighbors may get in a closer friendship to each other.

That relatives both near and far may not be lost sight of and forgotten.

That the reunion here may make us mindful of the great reunion which is to take place in Heaven.

1910

The sixth annual reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold was held at the Moosic Grange Hall Aug. 17, 1910.

After a dinner, which showed the skill of the woman of this family, a ball game took place. This ended after a few innings with a large score for the unmarried men.

The president, John Griswold, called the meeting to order. All joined in singing "America." Prayer led by Geo. Curtis followed. The minutes of last meeting read and adopted. Then came the election of officers.

President M. J. Griswold

V Pres. A. H. Curtis

Secretary Claude Arnold

Treasurer Nathan Griswold (re-elected)

The newly elected president was called to the chair and the new officers now took charge of the meeting. Roll call followed.

By a motion the Sec'y was instructed to rearrange the roll by families and keep the visitors separate from the family roll.

As the Entertainment Committee had not prepared a program a volunteer program followed. Ralph Terry delighted the audience with a recitation. C. J. and Miss Ina Stiles sang and so pleased those present that they were called back.

The report of the Com. on Births, Deaths and Marriages was read and accepted. On motion the same committee was re-appointed. The Pres. then appointed the Entertainment Com. consisting of Charles Corey, Leah Stiles, and Edna Loomis. A motion was made to include the old committee Flora Loomis Irene Curtis and Pearl Arnold. A motion was made that the Pres. appoint a com. with himself as chairman to write a history of the family. Pres. appointed Sec. Francis Curtis and Irene Curtis to assist him. The Pres then asked to be given time to think about whom he would put on the table com before he appointed that com. On motion this was granted him.

After quite a discussion a motion was carried giving the Pres. and his assistants the power to give to the Grange for the use of their hall what they thought would be right.

The collection was then taken which amounted to $6.38. Other bills ordered paid.

After singing "Till we meet again" all dispersed to their homes to meet again the third Wednesday in Aug. 1911 at Moosic Grange Hall.

Claude Arnold Sec'y

The Pres. later appointed Mrs. I. W. Cowperthwaite, Mrs. L. H. Arnold and Mrs. Frank Curtis table committee.

Claude Arnold Sec'y.

The seventh annual reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold was held at the Moosic Grange Hall Aug. 16, 1911.

After a dinner which would give credit to any community all gathered in the hall and conducted the business of the day. After the reading and approval of the minutes the roll was called. One hundred and three answered to their names and there were six visitors present. We were then led in prayer by Rev. James Rainey. Next came singing by the family. All the bills presented were then ordered paid. A discussion then took place about next year's reunion. A motion was made and carried that we celebrate the 100th anniversary of the coming of John Griswold into Clinton by a day and evening session, that the evening session be open to the public, that the entertainment be in the evening, and that both dinner and supper be served.

A motion was made and carried that an inscription be placed on the tomb of John Griswold showing that he was a Revolutionary soldier. This our president volunteered to do.

The Pres. then appointed the following committees: Entertainment Miss Augusta Curtis Charlie Corey and Miss Flora Loomis. Table Mrs. Jennie Gaylord Mrs. A. H. Curtis and Mrs. W. E. Rude. The committee on Births, Deaths, and Marriages reported two deaths, two births. There were no marriages.

Then came the entertainment. Rena Berman gave a very pleasing recitation and the Corey trio furnished an amusing number. C. J. Stiles, Mrs. Milo Gardner, and Mrs. Albert Corey then sang "Silver Threads among the Gold." A dialog by Wacht and Beatrice Curtis followed. Russel Loomis sang and Irene Curtis and Amanda Curtis gave an instrumental duet.

Then came an adjournment to meet the third Wed. in Aug. 1912.

The eighth annual reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold and the 100th anniversary of his coming and settling in Clinton, Wayne Co. was held at the Moosic Grange Hall Aug. 21, 1912.

After a grand dinner served by the ladies and a ball game all assembled in the Hall. The meeting was called to order by the President M. J. Griswold. America was sung and Rev. Stephen Treat lead in prayer. The minutes of last year read and approved followed by roll call. Then the reports of the Committees on Births Deaths and Marriages and History were read and adopted. The com. on History of Family did much work which showed in their report. As it was quite lengthy two members of Com. Miss Irene Curtis and Francis Curtis took turns in reading it. At the conclusion of the reading of the report a rising vote of thanks was extended to the Com. A coll. of $11.30 was then taken which was followed by election of officers for next two years resulting as follows

President G. A. Curtis

V. Pres F. C. Griswold

Secretary Claude Arnold

Treasurer Vance Griswold

A few remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Knight. A cornet solo rendered by Charles Corey was followed by more remarks by Rev. Stephen Treat. The afternoon session then closed.

Bills of 4.68 presented by Table Com. and $1.00 for use of Grange Hall ordered paid, at evening services.

After supper descendants and friends met in the Hall to do business and enjoy a program provided by the committee.

The 68th annual reunion of the John and Elizabeth Griswold family met at the Maple Grove church Wednesday, Aug. 21, for a ham and covered dish dinner. After doing justice to the food, all assembled in the auditorium for a business meeting.

The meeting was called to order by President Gertrude Schaffer. All joined in singing "America." Prayer was offered by the Rev. Anderson. Minutes of 1973 were approved. Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dwight Rude; vice president, Fred Oliver; secretary, Carrie Loomis; treasurer, Edith Gardner. Committees: Table, Gertrude Schaffer, Margaretta Loomis, Gertrude Snyder, Verna Varcoe. Births, deaths, marriages: Edith Gardner, La Vange Arnold. Program: Cheryl Black, Margaret Rude.

The program was then given. Song, "America, The Beautiful." Skit by Cheryl Black and Leslie. Duet by Mrs. Anderson and Margaret Rude. Remarks by the Rev. Anderson and the Rev. Crossman. Jokes by Henry Bayless, Fred Oliver, Verna Varcoe, Dwight Rude. Song, "God Be With You." Benediction by the Rev. Crossman.

The family will meet again on the third Wednesday in August, 1975, at the same place.

—Carrie C. Loomis, secretary.

REUNION

Griswold family

The 69th annual reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold met at the Moosic Grange on Wednesday, August 20, for a covered dish dinner. 38 members of the family and guests partook of a meal, after which they assembled for a business meeting.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Dwight Rude. All joined in singing "America." Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dwight Anderson. Minutes of 1974 were read and accepted. With the exception of the secretary, all officers and committees will hold office for another year. Margaret Rude was elected as secretary for one year to fill the term of Mrs. Carrie Loomis, who died March 16, 1975. A tribute was paid to Carrie Loomis, who served as secretary for 40 years.

During the program various members reminisced concerning history of the family. Some told humorous things that occurred at former reunions. They were entertained by four great-granddaughters of Walter and Laura Rude - Mary Tyler, Jill, Amy and Laura Schermerhorn. They sang two songs. Kimberly Ann Peterlin, a great granddaughter of Mervin and Carrie Loomis, danced.

Remarks were made by Josephine Corey Downey, Minna Oliver Blair, Alice Curtis Williams, Fred Oliver, the Rev. Anderson, Dwight Rude. A poem was read by Henry Bayliss. Benediction by the Rev. Anderson. The family will meet again on the third Wednesday of August 1976, at the Moosic Grange Hall.

—Margaret Rude, secretary.

REUNIONS Griswold Reunion

The 70th reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold met at the Moosic Grange Hall on Wednesday, Aug. 18, for a covered dish dinner. Thirty-five members of the family and guests partook of a sumptuous meal, after which they assembled for a business meeting and entertainment.

The meeting was called to order by President Dwight Rude. All joined in singing "America." A prayer was offered by the Rev. G. Fay Crossman. Minutes of the 1975 reunion were accepted as read. The treasurer reported a balance of $17.99. Collection was $18.65, bills $15, leaving a balance of $21.64. With the exception of vice president, all officers will function for another year. Leslie LaBarre was elected as vice president; Dwight Rude, president; Margaret Rude, secretary; Edith Gardner, treasurer.

The following committees were formed: Table, Bernice Dolan, Gertrude Snyder, Mildred LaBarre; Births, deaths and marriages, Edith Gardner, Gertrude Shaffer, Verna Varcoe; Program, Alice Williams, Mary Schermerhorn, Ann Tyler.

Alice Curtis Williams took charge of the program. She read the history of John Griswold as given at a Pioneer Day celebration in the early 1920s. Mary Tyler, Jill, Amy and Laura Schermerhorn, the great granddaughters of Walter and Laura Rude, sang a number of songs. They were beautifully dressed in bicentennial costumes.

After reminiscing, Rev. Crossman gave a short talk before he dismissed the group with the benediction.

The family will meet again on the third Wednesday of August, 1977, at the Moosic Grange Hall.

REUNION

Griswold family

The 71st family reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold met at the Moosic Grange Hall on Wednesday, Aug. 17, for a covered dish dinner. In spite of a downpour at dinner time, 19 family members enjoyed a most delicious meal at tables tastefully decorated by Doris Howell.

Vice-president Leslie LaBarre presided at the business meeting which followed the meal. After prayer by the Rev. G. Fay Crossman, Mrs. Crossman accompanied the singing of the first hymn. Minutes of 1976 were approved as read. The treasurer reported a balance of $21.64. Collection of $15 was received and bills of $16 were ordered paid. All business resulted in a return to office of Dwight Rude, president; Leslie LaBarre, vice-president; Margaret Rude, secretary, and Edith Gardner, treasurer.

The table committee for the ensuing year consists of Bernice Dolan, Mildred LaBarre and Gertrude Snyder. Each person is asked to bring own table service to the next reunion. One member of each family is asked to report on his own family concerning births, deaths and marriages, with Edith Gardner acting as chairman. Alice Curtis Williams was appointed as program chairman for 1978.

A program was prepared by Alice Williams, who read the history of the Griswold family. This was followed by readings and poems by Beatrice Bartholomay, Gertrude Schaffer, Myrtle Curtis, Crystal Cook Gummoe, Dorothy Olver and Verna Varcoe.

A few remarks were made by the Rev. Crossman followed by the following words for Henry Bayless: "Louisa and I have been attending this reunion for 65 years. It is tough to grow old and the only way I know to prevent it is to die young. Some day you folks will know what I mean. We thank God every day for our good health and at the ages of 88 and 91 that we are able to take care of ourselves and eat a good reunion dinner."

Get well cards will be sent to Leah Wright and Dwight Rude.

The conclusion was a benediction by the Rev. Crossman, followed by the singing of "God Be With You 'Til We Meet Again."

Griswold family

The 72nd annual reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold met at the Moosic Grange Hall on Wednesday, Aug. 16, for a covered dish dinner, with 14 family members present. Bernice Dolan and Gertrude Snyder served on the table committee.

After the dinner, Dwight Rude, president, presided at the business meeting, which was opened with prayer by the Rev. G. Fay Crossman. Minutes of 1977 were approved. Treasurer reported balance of $16.85 after collection was taken and bills of $16.15 were presented. Beatrice Bartholomay was elected vice president to fill the unexpired term of Leslie LaBarre, who died recently. Secretary was instructed to send card of sympathy to his family. Other officers and committees are to serve another year. Dwight Rude invited the reunion to meet at Ridge Farm, the Rude homestead, in 1979. Each person is to bring covered dish and own table service.

A program was presented by Alice Williams, program chairman. Edith Gardner read a history of the family. This was followed by readings and poems by Beatrice Bartholomay and Dorothy Olver. Rev. Crossman gave a reading "Cohen on the Telephone." Alice Williams, who has been teaching herself to play the violin, presented a history of the violin. Remarks were made by the Powell brothers, who have been accumulating old family portraits. It was interesting to look them over. Some could be named, others not.

Meeting was closed with benediction by Rev. Crossman.

Griswold family holds reunion

Twenty-eight descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold met at the home of Margaret and Dwight Rude, Ridge Farm, Waymart, RD on Aug. 15.

A delicious covered dish dinner was followed by the business meeting. Officers elected include: Dwight Rude, president; Beatrice Bartholomay, vice president; Margaret Rude, secretary; Edith Gardner, treasurer; Mildred LaBarre, Gertrude Snyder and Bernice Dolan will serve on the table committee.

Of very special interest to the group was the issuance of the very first issue of the newspaper, "Northeastern Pennsylvania."

An historical quarterly published on the third Wednesday of August, November, February, and May by Sheffield Publications, Inc., Northeastern Pennsylvania was created by S. Robert Powell and Donald Powell for one purpose: To record and disseminate a comprehensive portrait of northeastern Pennsylvania—past and present.

The first issue of Northeastern Pennsylvania contains reproductions of many photographs of people, homes, autograph entries, poems and maps, as well as factual information about the descendants of Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire. This family was chosen because they are good examples of representative citizens of northeastern Pennsylvania who came of age in rural America in the 1870's and 1880's.

Theron Loomis was a descendant of John and Elizabeth Griswold: Robert and Donald (the creators of Northeastern Pennsylvania) are both descendants of them.

The members of the Griswold Reunion were indeed honored that the first edition of Northeastern Pennsylvania was issued on their reunion day. They were also honored in that the family of one of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold was the featured article in this edition.

GRISWOLD REUNION

The Ridge Farm, home of Dwight and Margaret Rude, Waymart RD 1, was the locale of the 74th annual reunion of the descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold on Aug. 20, 1980. 29 members and friends of the family partook of a covered dish dinner.

During the business meeting the present officers were requested to hold their titles for the upcoming year. They are: Dwight Rude, president; Margaret Rude, secretary; Beatrice Bartholomay, vice president; and Edith Gardner, treasurer. Mildred LaBarre, Gertrude Snyder and Dorothy Olver were named as the table committee; Robert Powell, Donald Powell and Alice Curtis Lund, the program committee; Doris Howell and Verna Varcoe, recording committee of marriages, births and deaths. It was voted to have the next meeting at Ridge Farm on the third Wednesday of August, 1981.

With all business concluded, the program was held. It was presented by Robert Powell and proved to be a most interesting historical enlight[en]ment. Some inclusions of the program were the minutes of the organizational meeting that established the Griswold reunion on March 22, 1906, at the Moosic Grange Hall with a list of 77 in attendance. Officers elected were John Griswold, president; Fred Griswold, vice president; Theron Loomis, secretary; and Nathan Griswold, treasurer.

Minutes of the 1906 reunion, held Aug. 15, 1906, at the Moosic Grange Hall has 109 in attendance. Minutes of the 1907 reunion, held Aug. 21, 1907 contained the "By Laws of the Griswold Reunion." History of the Griswolds given on Pioneer Day, Sept. 6, 1920, a text containing the history of the family of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden and their arrival in Clinton township from Massachusetts, and history of Pioneer Day, September 4, 1922, at which time the conglomerate stone monument with its bronze tablet, in memory of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden was dedicated.

[The above text about the Griswold Reunion 1980 was written by Margaret Rude and published in The Wayne Independent on Tuesday, September 9, 1980, p. 7.]

Notes on the Text

1. The following information about the Griswold coat of arms is from Ruth Lee Griswold (p. 12):

The Arms of Griswold are described as:

Arg. a Fess, Gu. between two grey hounds courant sa; within bordure or as a difference.

These heraldic terms are defined as follows:

Argent - silver, in color white Abbreviation Arg.

Fess. A figure formed by 2 horizontal lines drawn across the shield. It is 1/3 of the field in width and it is always placed in the center.

Gules - Red - abbreviated Gu.

The crest is a Greyhound, passant proper. The motto - "Fortiter et celeriter" (Strongly and quickly).

Note: The Griswold coat of arms is illustrated (as the Frontispiece) in Ruth Lee Griswold's history of the Griswold family and in Mrs. Charles Delmar Townsend's history of the Griswold family, Volume V, (as the Frontispiece).

In addition to giving the above information about the Griswold coat of arms, Ruth Lee Griswold (p. 12) reports the following information about the members of the Griswold family:

The Griswold family is described as "Men tall of stature, strong of limb and stout of heart, men of affairs who brought to the new land a capacity for government and statesmanship."

"And the rest of the acts which they did and their might and how they warred and overcame, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of Ancient Windsor?" In his Ancient Wethersfield, he speaks of them as "A family that has furnished many mariners but more soldiers."

2. Throughout the present history of John and Elizabeth (Crittenden) Griswold and their ancestors and descendants, we repeat the numbers that have been assigned to the members of the Griswold family by Glenn E. Griswold in his history of the Griswold family. Michael Griswold is the beginning of a family line, the members of which are enumerated by Glenn E. Griswold; he has, therefore, been assigned the number "1" by Glenn E. Griswold. The children of Michael and Ann Griswold are numbered "2" through "10"; the children of "2" (Thomas Griswold) are numbered "11" through "16," and so on. Throughout the present history, the numbers assigned by Glenn E. Griswold to the members of the Michael Griswold line are given in parentheses immediately following the names of the family members.

John Griswold (who married Elizabeth Crittenden) is numbered, by Glenn E. Griswold, "375A."

3. The following information about Francis Griswold (son of George Griswold) is from Volume II (p. 13) of Glenn E. Griswold's history of the Griswold family in England and America:

His family connection is also unknown, but it has been thought he had some connection with Edward, Matthew, or Michael of Connecticut, but we have no proof of this.

4. Given below the list of children of Michael and Ann Griswold are the source works used by Glenn E. Griswold in arriving at the information he presents on Michael and Ann Griswold and their children. A similar listing of source works is given below following the listing of the children of Thomas Griswold (2) and John Griswold (375A); also following the last will and testament of Samuel Griswold (16).

5. The November 1981 issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume III, Number 2) will contain a complete history of the Pioneer Days that were held in Clinton Township from 1915 on. In the meantime, we present here the following preliminary information about the Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township from 1915 to 1942.

At the ceremonies at which the "Early Settlers and Ministers" Monument in Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery was dedicated, August 27, 1915, it was decided to hold a "Pioneer or Old Home Day" each year in Clinton Township. This we learn from the article, "PIONEER DAY AT CLINTON CENTER AS RECORDED IN THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1916," about the Pioneer Day celebration that was held in 1916. The first paragraph of that article reads as follows:

At the dedication of the monument, unveiled on August 27, 1915, at Clinton to the memory of the early settlers of that township and the early ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church, it was resolved to meet each year to honor the memory of the "pioneers of Clinton Township." In accordance with that decision such a gathering was held at the Clinton Centre Church on Sept. 1st [1916]. The ladies of the Congregation served dinner at 12 o'clock which seemed to occupy the undivided attention of a large number for an hour or more.

The originator of the idea of Pioneer Day was Sheldon Norton. This we learn (1) from the newspaper article, "CLINTON CENTER'S PIONEER DAY," that was published in The Wayne Independent on September 9, 1922, about the celebration that took place on September 4, 1922. The fifth paragraph of that newspaper account reads as follows:

Resolutions were passed that expressions of regret be sent to Rev. James Rainey, a former loved are respected pastor, Sheldon Norton, the originator of "Old Home Day" and to Mrs. Laura Loomis, expressing our sorrow that they were unable to be present, and tendering our good wishes for the future; also to Rev. George S. Wendell, with our sympathy in the trials they are enduring in the severe illness of their daughter.

and (2) from the newspaper article, "Pioneer Day At Clinton Center," that was published in The Wayne Independent in September 1935 about the Pioneer Day celebration held that year. The first three paragraphs of that newspaper account read as follows:

Twenty years ago [1915] through the instrumentality of Sheldon Norton and E. M. Peck of Carbondale, a conglomerate rock weighing about six tons was placed in the cemetery at Clinton Center and on that huge stone is a bronze tablet listing the names of the early settlers as well as the early members and pastors of the Clinton Center church.

And on that memorable day, about 400 people from the immediate vicinity and near-by towns, gathered to witness the unveiling and dedication of this monument. At the cemetery a brief history of the first settlers and the early ministers was given by the chairman, E. M. Peck. [This text by E. M. Peck has not come down to us.] After repairing [to] the church auditorium Sheldon Norton gave an interesting and instructive address on his boyhood recollections of these pioneer settlers. [This address by Sheldon Norton has come down to us. In the document archive of Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis of Waymart, PA, is a text entitled, "CLINTON PIONEERS THEIR MEMORY VENERATED" by E. M. Peck Pioneer Day Sept. 7, 1915." This text was not written by E. M. Peck; the first paragraph is in the third person--most probably written by the person who typed this text--and the remainder of the text is written from the first-person perspective of Sheldon Norton. The date on this text, in addition, is in error: Pioneer Day in 1915 was on August 27. The date, September 7, 1915, is probably the date that an account of the 1915 Pioneer Day celebration was published in The Wayne Independent.]

At his [Sheldon Norton's] suggestion, it was voted to set apart a day each year for meeting to commemorate the early settlers. It has been subsequently celebrated, on Labor Day [at Clinton Center Baptist Church] for the last two decades. [Beginning in 1920, Pioneer Day celebrations were held on Labor Day. Before 1920, a fixed date for the annual celebration was not established: in 1916 Pioneer Day was celebrated on Friday, September 1, for example.]

The first president of Pioneer Day was Earl Melville Peck, the first vice president was W. E. Rude. Following the death of Earl Melville Peck, on November 19, 1923, W. E. Rude was elected President, and Earl Melville Peck's son, Emmons L. Peck, was elected vice-president. This information about the presidents and vice presidents of Pioneer Day was learned from the minutes of the 1941 Pioneer Day celebration. Contained in those minutes is a text entitled, "In Appreciation," written by Lois Norton Curtis. The first paragraph of that text reads as follows: "Twenty-six years ago 'Pioneer Day' was first established with E. M. Peck as President and W. E. Rude as Vice Pres. After the passing of E. M. Peck to his eternal Home in 1923, W. E. Rude was elected Pres. and Mr. Peck's son, Emmons L. Peck, was elected Vice Pres." The first secretary-treasurer of Pioneer Day was Lois Norton Curtis, who, be it known, was secretary-treasurer for all of the Pioneer Day celebrations held in Clinton Township. We are all very much indebted to Lois Norton Curtis, not only for having recorded virtually all of the information that is known about Clinton Township's Pioneer Days, but also for having recorded, gathered and preserved a vast quantity of information about the history of Wayne County.

At each Pioneer Day it was the custom to have a descendant of one of the pioneer families of Clinton Township give a family history. Here follows a partial listing of the family histories, as well as other programs, that were presented at various Clinton Township Pioneer Days over the years (a complete listing of all of the programs of all the Pioneer Day celebrations held in Clinton Township will be presented in Volume III, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA):

August 27, 1915: the first Pioneer Day

The following text, from the document archive of Lois Norton Curtis, is a typewritten copy of what was--or what was perhaps intended to be--a newspaper article about the Pioneer Day celebration held in 1915:

1915

BRIEF HISTORY OF EARLY SETTLERS AND MINISTERS.

(Flint Memorial Dedicated)

Nearly four hundred (400) men, women and children attended the dedication exercises of the monument erected in honor of the early settlers of Clinton township and the founders and ministers of Clinton Baptist Church, on August 27, at the Clinton Church.

A bountiful dinner was served by the ladies of the society, at noon.

The monument is a natural flint conglomerate from the mountain west of the Church, weighing about six (6) tons, standing on a concrete foundation, all costing nearly ($150.00) One Hundred and Fifty dollars.

The following are the names inscribed on the bronze tablet:

IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH

NORTON	REV. ELIJAH PECK
GRENNELL	REV. JOHN SMITZER
NORTH	REV. HORACE JONES
WEST	REV. CHAS. H. HUBBARD
GAYLORD	REV. ALEX. SMITH
GRISWOLD	REV. CHARLES A. FOX
PECK	REV. HENRY CURTIS
Mc MULLEN	REV. GEO. V. WALLING
LOOMIS	REV. JOSEPH CURREN
LEDYARD	REV. JAMES SPENCER
BUNTING	REV. D. P. PURDON
SAUNDERS	REV. B. B. BUNTING
DAVENPORT	REV. J. R. REMSEN
ARNOLD	REV. JAMES RAINY

ERECTED 1915

The Chairman of the monument committee, E. M. Peck, after speaking of the consummation of the plans for the memorial called on Mrs. Laura Loomis, a daughter of Francis Griswold, and the oldest living descendant present (About eighty nine) to remove the flag of the United States with which the monument was veiled.

The Prayer was offered by Rev. Geo. S. Wendell, pastor of the Baptist Church of Honesdale which was followed by an offering of laurel wreaths by young girls and boys, fourteen (14) in number, representing the fifth and sixth generations of the families named on the tablet. Laurel well becomes a victor, and the early families were victorious in more senses than one, over the wilderness, their own lives and in the influence they exerted over the lives of the oncoming generations.

A brief history of the first settlers of our township, and the families and ministers was given by the chairman which follows:

Coming together as we do in memory of the early settlers of our township, and the families and ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church, causes us to try to recall the conditions of those days when this country was nearly a wilderness.

We do well to honor their names by erecting this lasting and natural monument which represents their rugged and stable characters.

[The remainder of E. M. Peck's brief history of the early settlers of Clinton Township and the founders and ministers of the Clinton Baptist Church has not come down to us.]

On the first Pioneer Day, Sheldon Norton (son of Deacon E. K. Norton) gave his boyhood recollections. (The text of these recollections by Sheldon Norton has come down to us. In the document archive of Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis of Waymart, PA, is a text entitled "CLINTON PIONEERS THEIR MEMORY VENERATED" by E. M. Peck Pioneer Day Sept. 7, 1915." This text was not written by E. M. Peck; the first paragraph is in the third person--most probably written by the person who typed this text--and the remainder of the text is written from the first-person perspective of Sheldon Norton. The date of this text, in addition, is in error: Pioneer Day in 1915 was on August 27. The date, September 7, 1915, is probably the date that an account of the 1915 Pioneer Day celebration was published in The Wayne Independent.) In his recollections, Sheldon Norton speaks of the following Clinton Township pioneer families: Peck, Stanton, Stearns, McMullen, Norton, Grennell, Gaylord, Sanders, Griswold. In addition, he refers to the following persons by name: Asa Stanton, Deacon Davenport, Squire West, Alva Norton, Sylvester North, Deacon Rufus Grennell, Reuben Peck, Elder Curtis, Ensign McMullen, Brother Randall, Horace Griswold, David Sanders, Sidney Norton, Milo Gaylord, Samuel Lee, Deacon E. K. Norton, Francis Griswold, Mrs. Francis Griswold, Mrs. Horace Griswold, Mrs. Davenport, Mrs. North, Mrs. Alva Norton, Mrs. Reuben Peck, and Mrs. Sheldon Norton.

The following remarks about the 1915 Pioneer Day celebration are from an article entitled, "Pioneer Day At Clinton Center," that was published in The Wayne Independent in 1935:

And on that memorable day [August 27, 1915], about 400 people from the immediate vicinity and near-by towns, gathered to witness the unveiling and dedication of this monument [the "Early Settlers and Ministers" Monument]. At the cemetery a brief history of the first settlers and the early ministers was given by the chairman, E. M. Peck. [This text has not come down to us.] After repairing [to] the church auditorium Sheldon Norton gave an interesting and instructive address on his boyhood recollections of these pioneer settlers. [This is the Sheldon Norton text referred to in the preceding paragraph.]

September 1, 1916: the second Pioneer Day

The following are excerpts from an article, entitled "PIONEER DAY AT CLINTON CENTER AS RECORDED IN THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1916," about the Pioneer Day celebration that took place on September 1, 1916:

Sheldon Norton of Carbondale read some epistles, purported to have been written by a cat to a little girl. The genius of the author was so apparent that one could easily decide who was the cat. [This text has not come down to us.]

Attorney W. H. Lee of Honesdale, born in Clinton, and a resident of the place during his early years, gave some very interesting bits of History of many of those who have passed away but, who are not forgotten, paying a fine tribute to their useful lives. [The text of much of W. H. Lee's address has come down to us. In that text, which is part of the article "PIONEER DAY AT CLINTON CENTER AS RECORDED IN THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1916," W. H. Lee makes reference to, among others, the following persons: William N. Rude, Ensign McMullen, Edmund Randall, E. K. Norton, Samuel Lee, Michael Grinnell, Rev. B. B. Bunting, Presbyterian Minister Rev. Charles S. Dunning of Honesdale, Stephen D. Ward] . . .

The chairman, E. M. Peck, had the honor of reading 'The Old Tin Lantern' written by Sheldon Norton which follows: . . . [This text has come down to us in entirety. It is part of the newspaper article in question.] . . .

Reminiscences of the old families, male and female, were given by Wilford M. Peck of Los Angeles, Calif., son of the late Albert R. Peck of Aldenville. [This text has come down to us. It is entitled "CHARACTERISTICS of CLINTONIANS Tribute to their memory By E. M. Peck 1916." In the typescript of this text in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive, the author is erroneously given as E. M. Peck. Internal evidence in this text, however, makes it clear that it was written by Wilford M. Peck. Note: Wilford M. Peck is the son of Albert R. Peck of Aldenville. Albert R. Peck is the brother of Earl Melville Peck (06-24-1838--11-19-1923), who married Emeline Ledyard, the daughter of Hiram and Lucinda (Rude) Ledyard. Emmons L. Peck is the son of Earl Melville Peck and Emeline Ledyard. Reuben and Sally Ann (King) Peck are the parents of Earl Melville Peck and Albert R. Peck. In his reminiscences of the pioneer families of Clinton Township, Wilford M. Peck specifically mentions the following families: Gaylord, Peck, Norton, Grennell, North, Griswold, West, McMullen, Ledyard. He refers, in addition, to the following individuals: Virgil Gaylord, Milo Gaylord, Sidney Norton, Hiram Norton, Squire West, Horace Griswold, Francis Griswold, Francis June, Sheldon Norton, E. M. Peck, Deacon Rufus Grennell, Uncle Giles and Joanna Gaylord, Reuben and Sally Ann Peck, E. K. and Clarissa Norton, Sylvester E. North.

Pioneer Day, 1918

A history of the West family was given by George stone.

September 6, 1920

A history of the Griswold family was read. A copy of this history, entitled "HISTORY OF GRISWOLD'S PIONEER DAY," is in the document archive of Lois Norton Curtis, and is given above in entirety in that portion of the text that is about John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden.

September 5, 1921

What follows is an excerpt from a newspaper article (a copy of which is in the document archive of Lois Norton Curtis) entitled "CLINTON PIONEER DAY OBSERVANCE [sic]," about the Pioneer Day celebration that was held in Clinton Township in 1921:

President E. M. Peck of Carbondale, a son of a pioneer, called the assemblage to order and after the Prayer by Rev. Mr. Winkleman, pastor of the Waymart Baptist church, and several songs led by Mr. Curtis, Homer Greene, Esq., of Honesdale was introduced as the orator of the day. Mr. Greene was at his best and delivered a fine address. He spoke of the principles which actuated the pioneers and commended their loyalty to the church, their devotion to what they believed to be right and their Americanism. . . . Pastor W. A. McKenzie delivered a pointed and appreciative address, referring to the splendid oration by Mr. Greene and the principles which actuated the settlers of this country in the preservation of the fundamentals which go to make up our great republic. Chairman Peck read an interesting reminiscence of the pioneers as he remembered them, mentioning them by name. [This text has not come down to us.]

From this 1921 newspaper article, we learn that it was decided, in 1920, to hold Pioneer Day every year on Labor Day:

The fourth annual "Pioneer Day" at Clinton Center was observed on Monday and in 1920 a motion was made and carried to hold it each year on Labor Day.

Among the addresses delivered at the 1921 Pioneer Day celebration was a biography of Rev. Henry Curtis that was given by Rev. Curtis' grandson, George H. Kanpp of Aldenville.

September 4, 1922

A biography of John Griswold was given by George Curtis. Rev. James Pope, in addition, delivered some remarks about the pioneers of Clinton Township. This we know from the newspaper article, "CLINTON CENTER'S PIONEER DAY" (original copy in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive), that was published on September 9, 1922, wherein is the following statement:

Rev. James Pope, pastor of the South Clinton Baptist church, spoke of the sterling qualities possessed by the early settlers, and the loving memory in which they should and are held.

September 3, 1923

A history of the Gaylord family was presented. In the minutes for 1923, the secretary, Lois Norton Curtis, stated:

Mr. Peck spoke of the great loss sustained by the passing away of Mr. Sheldon Norton since our last meeting. Suitable remarks were given in his memory. He [Sheldon Norton] had some fine enlarged pictures of Deacon Rufus Grennell and his wife, Aunt Harriette, who was his grandmother, and his father, E. K. Norton and wife, which were as per his request presented to the Clinton church by E. M. Peck. [Lois Norton Curtis has subsequently written "basement" at this point in the text, meaning that the pictures in question are to be found in the basement of the Clinton Center Baptist Church.] Suitable tributes were given in their memory. Rev. W. K. Newton, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Honesdale was the speaker of the day. His subject was of our forefathers and the causes that led to America becoming a free nation.

September 1, 1924

Mrs. Rena Remsen read a biography of Earl Melville Peck that was written by Mr. Knapp. See minutes of the 1924 Pioneer Day celebration, entitled "Pioneers hear tribute to Peck."

September 6, 1926

Emeline Ledyard Peck gave a history of the Ledyard family. This text, entitled "History of The Ledyard Family" (copy in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive), was "Written and read by Mrs. Emeline Ledyard Peck, at Pleasant Mount, Pa. Pioneer Day at Clinton, Pa. Sept. 6, 1926." Included in the Ledyard family history is information on the Charles Chalker family and information of the Kingsbury family.

September 5, 1927

Grandison Loomis gave a history of the Loomis family; Flora Loomis Brown gave a history of the Reuben Loomis family; Mrs. Augusta Monroe Westgate gave a history of the Aaron Loomis family.

September 3, 1928

Claude Arnold gave a history of the Arnold family. This we know from the article that was published in The Wayne Independent entitled "Pioneer Day Calls Good Crowd" (copy in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive).

September 2, 1929

Ruth Merwin, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bunting, gave a history of the Bunting family.

From the newspaper article, "Pioneer Day At Clinton Centre," published in The Wayne Independent on a Saturday (probably published on September 7, 1929; copy of this article in the document archive of Lois Norton Curtis), we learn that Willie Bartholomay, Norvella Curtis, and Prof. Dunseith were active participants in the program of activities in 1929:

Master Willie Bartholomay recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis and is only 5 years old, but every word was distinctly spoken, and emphasis given to the out-standing words and sentences. It could not have been better recited by a senior, of high school. Miss Norvell Curtis then sang The Bells of St. Mary's in a very acceptable manner. . . . The principal speaker of the day was Prof. Dunseith of the Technical high school of Scranton. He gave a vision of the early settlers on their way from their homes to the place in the wilderness that they chose for their homes, and of the hardships they endured.

September 1, 1930

Ralph Randall gave a history of the Randall family.

September 7, 1931

George Perham gave a history of the Perham family.

September 4, 1933

Moses Underwood Squire spoke of his boyhood days in Clinton Township.

Mrs. Verna Varcoe gave a mental picture "A Century Ago."

Superintendent A. H. Howell gave an address entitled "A Century of Progress"

September 3, 1934

Dorothy Curtis gave an oration entitled "The Value of Character."

Mr. Pennell gave a tribute to "The Pioneers' Honesty in all things."

September 2, 1935

The following information about the program that was presented at Pioneer Day 1935 is from the newspaper article entitled "Pioneer Day At Clinton Center" (copy in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive):

The Life of Roger Williams, written by Rev. Dr. Roger Williams of Greensburg, Pa. Rev. Mr. Williams supplied our pulpit during his summer vacation, while attending school at Bucknell about 35 years ago. The paper was read by Mrs. Hobart Curtis. . . . discussion, What Has the Life of Roger Williams Contributed to Our Nation, Politically, Socially and Religiously?
a. Politically, by Rev. Dr. Pugh, Waymart
b. Socially, by Rev. M. D. Singer, Aldenville
c. Religiously, by Rev. Dr. Fulton, Carbondale.

September 7, 1936

From a newspaper article entitled "Clinton Center Held Annual Pioneer Day" (copy of article in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive), we learn that Rev. A. D. Merrill was the speaker of the day at Pioneer Day 1936:

Rev. A. D. Merrill of the Hawley Baptist Church was the speaker of the day and the address was appropriate along the lines of lessons from the lives of the pioneers with present day application of each ones duty to his home, to his church and to his nation.

September 5, 1938

In the minutes of the 1938 Pioneer Day celebration, Lois Norton Curtis noted:

Rev. Straw of the Honesdale Presbyterian church gave the address giving the Life of P. P. Bliss.

September 2, 1940

Augusta Gertrude Curtis gave a tribute, entitled "In the Nineties" (copy in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive), to four present or former Clintonians in their nineties: Mr. George Perkins, Mrs. Emma Goodrich, Mr. Grandison Loomis, and Mrs. Amanda Cramer.

Lois Norton Curtis read "A Reminiscence" (copy included in minutes of Pioneer Day 1940) that she wrote, the subject being the different types of programs and tributes that have been given to the pioneer families and others at Pioneer Days in Clinton Township.

September 1, 1941

A tribute to W. E. Rude (d. 06-02-1941) was given by Lois Norton Curtis (see text entitled "In Appreciation" in Lois Norton Curtis' document archive).

Note:

Pioneer Day celebrations are known to have taken place in the following years: 1915, 1916, 1918, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, and 1942.

We know that celebrations took place in those years because of the existence of either newspaper articles or of minutes taken by the Pioneer Day secretary, Lois Norton Curtis. All of these newspaper articles and minutes are in the document archive of Lois Norton Curtis.

The first Pioneer Day celebration took place in 1915. The last Pioneer Day celebration of which there is any record took place in 1942. No information has come down to us that indicates that celebrations were held in 1917, 1919 and 1925.

An interesting document about the Pioneer Day celebrations that were held in Clinton Township prior to 1942 is the letter that Arthur Curtis wrote to Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis on September 4, 1942. That letter is as follows:

Moses Taylor Hospital
Scranton, Pennsylvania
September 4, 1942

Mrs. Lois Curtis, Secretary
Clinton Center Pioneer Day Association
Wayne County, Pennsylvania

Dear Lois:

As you know, the recent operation from which I am now recovering will prevent me from attending the "Pioneer Day" celebration to be held Monday, September 7, 1942. This is a matter of considerable regret because it will be the first meeting I have missed in the past twenty-four years.

Please convey my best wishes to everyone present and thank those who have so kindly sent letters while I have been at the Hospital.

Yours,

[signed] Sincerely Yours,
Arthur Curtis

What does Arthur Curtis mean when he states: "This is a matter of considerable regret because it [the 1942 Pioneer Day celebration] will be the first meeting I have missed in the past twenty-four years." Does he mean that "every year for the past 24 years there has been a Pioneer Day celebration and I have attended all those celebrations" -- in which case Pioneer Day celebrations took place in 1919 and 1925. Does he mean that "every year during the past twenty-four years in which there has been a Pioneer Day celebration I have been in attendance" -- in which case we can not deduce from Arthur Curtis' statement whether or not Pioneer Day celebrations were held in 1917, 1919 and 1925.

PLEASE NOTE:

The November 1981 issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume III, Number 2) will be about the pioneer settlers and ministers of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA. Readers who have texts about, or photographs of, those settlers and ministers or other pioneer families of Clinton Township who would like to have those texts and/or photographs included in the November 1981 issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA are requested to write (or otherwise get in touch with) the Editor or either Donald or Robert Powell.

6. A photograph of Francis Griswold and a photograph of Jane Loomis appear in Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA on page 6.

In Phineas G. Goodrich's History of Wayne County (p. 328) is the following information about Francis Griswold:

John Griswold, Sen. [375A], was the father of Francis Griswold, who for many years kept what was called the Cold Water tavern; so called because it was near a stream of cold water that came rushing down from the mountain. Sumner was another son, and was a farmer. Horace was a son or grandson of John Griswold, Sen."

In Edna Loomis' 1955 book, Ancestry of Ora Loomis Russell [and] Edna Loomis Loomis [and] Descendants of Ora Loomis Russell (p. 40) is the following information about Francis Griswold:

Francis Griswold for many years kept what was called the Cold Water Tavern; so called because it was near a stream of cold water that came rushing down the mountain. He was a pioneer of Clinton Twp., from Massachusetts, a sturdy business man. In addition to his hundreds of acres of land, he purchased one thousand acres from the government. He was noted for his benevolence and interest in public advancement.

Note: The Cold Water Tavern became, on 05-01-1871, the property of Henry Banning Curtis and Louisa Griswold. The former Cold Water Tavern is presently the residence of Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis.

In Alfred Matthews' history of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania (p. 581) is the following information about Francis Griswold and family:

Among the hardiest of the pioneers [of Clinton Township] may be mentioned Francis and Horace Griswold. There were other members of the family; among them Sedata [sic] and Orrin. Francis cleared up the land which now includes the farms of [1] Mrs. H. B. Curtis [the former Cold Water Tavern]; [2] the old homestead, now occupied by Mr. Fred Bucklisch, who married the widow of Mr. Griswold's son, Homer, who is the estimable daughter of Mr. Charles Van Meter, now of Susquehanna County. [3] [the Hiram Loomis farm] [4] [the Nathan Griswold farm]. All these farms were cleared and made to increase an 'hundredfold,' through the indomitable will and faithful, steady and persistent labors of Mr. Griswold, whose memory is very gratefully cherished by the community in which he lived and by the people of the Baptist Church, of which he was a deacon for many years. He died September 8, 1869.

Note: The "old homestead" referred to in the above paragraph is the homestead established by John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden at the foot of the Moosic Mountain, south east of the Moosic Grange Hall.

At the Griswold Reunion 1978, Alice Mae (Curtis) Williams made the following statement to the author: "The foundation stones of the house that John Griswold built are up in back here [AMCL pointed to the area to the east and slightly to the south of the Moosic Grange Hall]."

For more information on the residences of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden in Wayne County, see the fifth and sixth paragraphs of the text entitled, "HISTORY OF GRISWOLD'S PIONEER DAY," in the main text under the heading "VI. JOHN GRISWOLD (375A)."

On August 27, 1915, at the dedication of the "Early Settlers and Ministers" Monument in Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery, Sheldon Norton gave an address in which are contained his recollections of his boyhood days in Clinton Township. That address, erroneously entitled "CLINTON PIONEERS THEIR MEMORY VENERATED" by E. M. Peck Pioneer Day Sept. 7, 1915" [see footnote number 5 (above) for a discussion of this text and its erroneous title in the copy in the document archive of Mrs. Lois Norton Curtis], is a valuable source of information about the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township. The second paragraph of that address contains the following information about Francis Griswold:

Time will only allow me to mention a few of the men who impressed me most, and Francis Griswold stands out as a character that for his time is typical of the men of today who in common language are called captains of industry. He was always up and doing and his energy and push made others work also. What Clinton owes to Francis Griswold we can not tell. He was a power for good in the community not only for its material well being but of its moral and spiritual growth.

From Matthews' history of Wayne, Pike and Monroe Counties (p. 587), we also learn that Francis Griswold was appointed by Governor Porter as a commissioner to examine the Lackawaxen Turnpike:

Governor David R. Porter, November 28, 1839, appointed Austin Davenport, Francis Griswold and David S. West commissioners to examine said turnpike road [the Lackawaxen Turnpike]; and on the recommendation of the commissioners licensed the president, managers, etc., to erect gates for the collection of tolls from all persons traveling on the turnpike with horses, cattle, carts and carriages.

From Phineas G. Goodrich (pp. 328-329), we learn that Luther Ledyard and Francis Griswold were neighbors:

There were many families [in Clinton Township] that have not been mentioned which from time to time added materially to the wealth and importance of the town, among whom were... Luther Ledyard, a farmer, who lived adjoining Francis Griswold.

In Volume III (p. 271) of Glenn E. Griswold's history of the Griswold family in England and America is the following information about Francis Griswold:

b. Mar. 11, 1792, d. of Aaron and Anne (Annis) Armira Loomis, of Torrington, Conn., who died Sept. 8, 1869.

They settled at Clinton, Wayne county, Pa. Census there 1840 shows self and wife, four sons and four daughters. Census 1860 shows him æ. 66; Jane, æ. 68; Nathan, æ. 28.

Their children: 1686 LOUISA, b. Jan. 31, 1822; d. Jan. 6, 1832. 1687 ALVIN, b. Apr. 22, 1824; d. Sept. 1849. 1688 LAURA, b. July 7, 1826. 1689 LOUISA, b. Nov. 2, 1828. 1690 NATHAN, b. Mar. 31, 1832. 1691 HOMER, b. Mar. 14, 1835.

7. Photographs of Laura Griswold and Hiram Pease Loomis are given in Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (p. 4). A great deal of additional information about Laura Griswold and Hiram Pease Loomis is also given in Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, which is a portrait of Theron Orsemus Loomis (son of Laura Griswold and Hiram Pease Loomis) and his wife, Mary Emma Squire.

In Volume V of the history of the Griswold family in England and America (compiled and edited by Mrs. Charles Delmar Townsend from the notes of the late Glenn E. Griswold), is the following information about Laura Griswold (p. 86):

#1688 LAURA (Francis 839-Michael 1) b. 7 July 1820? 1826? Wayne co., Penna. m. 20 March 1846 Aldenville, Pa. Hiram P. Loomis, b. 9 Dec. 1819 Mt. Pleasant, Penna. d. August 1900

8. For photographs of, and a great deal of information about, Theron Orsemus Loomis and Mary Emma Squire, see Volume I, Number 1 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA: "A Portrait of Theron Orsemus Loomis 1848-1911 and Mary Emma Squire 1854-1948 of Clinton Township, Wayne County, and Carbondale, Lackawanna County, PA."

9. A photograph of Ora Esmarilda Loomis is given in Volume I, Number 1 (p. 5) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

32. The stone that marks the grave of Angeline Griswold bears an inscription that is, at present, very difficult to read. As far as the author and Donald W. Powell were able to determine in August, 1980, the year of the death of Angeline Griswold--as reported in the inscription on the stone that marks her grave--is 1861.

This same tombstone marks the graves of Oliver Griswold and Lewis Griswold, two of the brothers of Angeline Griswold. Like the inscription about Angeline Griswold, those about Oliver Griswold and Lewis Griswold are very difficult to read at present. A first reading suggests that Lewis Griswold died May 13, 1861 and that Oliver Griswold died in December, 1856.

33. Glenn E. Griswold (Volume III, p. 272) reports the following information about Horace Griswold and family:

CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER

Volume I, Number 1

August 25, 1985

FROM THE EDITORS:

This is Volume I, Number 1 of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. The Editors of this NEWSLETTER are Donald W. Powell and S. Robert Powell, the Secretary/Treasurer and the Corresponding Secretary/Historian, respectively, of the Griswold Reunion. All of the information in this NEWSLETTER was gathered, written, and synthesized by the Editors. This NEWSLETTER was produced by S. Robert Powell.

The information herein is divided into four primary sections:

I. The Brudos Tea Party, August 20, 1984, at Ridge Farm, Waymart;

II. The 10:30 A.M. combined service of the Aldenville-Clinton Center Baptist Churches in the Clinton Center Baptist Church on August 26, 1984;

III. The Historical Program, in the Clinton Center Baptist Church, at 1:30 P.M. on August 26, 1984, marking the 153rd Anniversary of the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church;

IV. The 78th Annual Business Meeting of the Griswold Reunion, held after the Historical Program (mentioned immediately above) in the Clinton Center Baptist Church, on August 26, 1984.

I.

THE BRUDOS TEA PARTY August 20, 1984

Pearl and Ernest Brudos, from Lake City, South Dakota, visited Clinton Township on the weekend before the 1984 Clinton Center Pioneer Day/Griswold Reunion celebrations. Pearl is the fourth of the seven daughters of William Van Tassel Curtis and Marie Peterson.

On Monday, August 20, 1984, eleven Griswolds gathered at Ridge Farm, the home of Margaret Rude, to visit with Pearl and Ernest Brudos while they were stopping at Ridge Farm: Margaret Rude, Myrtle Curtis, Beatrice Bartholomay, Alice and Norman Lund, Verna Varcoe, Amy Rude, Doris Howell, Edith Gardner, Donald W. Powell and S. Robert Powell.

Recollections of early days in Clinton Township, of pheasant shooting expeditions taken by the Rudes to South Dakota during visits to the Brudos family there, and the upcoming Clinton Center Pioneer Day/Griswold Reunion were among the many topics of conversation at the afternoon tea served by Margaret Rude. A photograph of the entire group, standing on the front porch of Ridge Farm, was taken by Donald W. Powell.

COMBINED SERVICE, ALDENVILLE-CLINTON CENTER BAPTIST CHURCHES August 26, 1984, 10:30 A.M.

The many activities that took place in Clinton Township on August 26, 1984, began with a combined service of worship of the Aldenville-Clinton Center Baptist Churches in the Clinton Center Baptist Church, Reverend Dwight E. Anderson, pastor, at 10:30 A.M.

The program of the worship service is as follows:

Prelude

Call to Worship--

"Open for me the gates of righteousness;
I will enter and give thanks to the Lord.
This is the gate of the Lord through which the righteous may enter. I will give you thanks, for you answered me;
you have become my salvation."

Hymn No. 291: "Revive Us Again"

Invocation and Lord's Prayer

Responsive Reading: Selection 482

Hymn No. 172: "The Light of the World"

Saxophone Solo by Mildred Anderson

Scripture Reading: Luke VIII: 22-25

Mission Highlights

Offertory

Doxology and Prayer

Hymn No. 119: "Tell Me the Story of Jesus"

Sermon: "A Chosen Vessel"

"He is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear
my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." Acts IX:15

Hymn No. 227: "We Have an Anchor"

Benediction

Postlude

Many in the congregation were identified as being descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden.

Following the church service, a bountiful covered-dish dinner was served in the Church basement. Baked ham (courtesy of Alice and Norman Lund), rolls, beverages, and table service were furnished by the Church. The row of tables along the north wall of the Church was covered from end to end with a very large number of family specialities, which were enjoyed by a capacity crowd. The fine food and the good dinner-table fellowship were enjoyed by one and all for over an hour.

CANAL DAYS-HO

From Honesdale town to the Hudson down,

Get up mule, haul that coal;
Clomp, clomp, clomp the long, long haul;
Get up mule, haul those hides,
Clomp, clomp, clomp the hard, hard drag.
Get up mule, haul that freight,
Clomp, clomp, clomp, the towpath walk.

Down along the Lackawaxen go,
Get up mule, haul those goods,
Clomp, clomp, clomp, the Delaware cross;
Get up mule, haul that barge,
Clomp, clomp, clomp, it's hard to drag.
Get up mule, haul those folks,
Clomp, clomp, clomp, and earn your keep.

IV. GRISWOLD REUNION 78th Annual Business Meeting August 26, 1984

Following the Historical Program, the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden convened in the Church sanctuary for the 78th Annual Business Meeting of the Griswold Reunion. The program of the Reunion was as follows:

- A. Remarks. . . . . S. Robert Powell (Robert pointed out that over 2/3 of the congregation during the 10:30 A.M. church service are Griswolds; he also emphasized that the Griswold Reunion and the Clinton Center Pioneer Day must continue to be celebrated annually and that by combining both celebrations we can strengthen both groups.)
- B. Remarks. . . . . Donald W. Powell (Donald presented and described to the group the historical objects that were brought to the Reunion and which were on display on the window sills in the Church basement throughout the day:
  - 1. Fern Box, made by Alice Lund, August 1984;
  - 2. Edith Gardner's painted wooden bowl,
"Winter Scene." Edith Gardner: "This bowl was painted by Harriet Curtis Gardner in approximately 1885";
  - 3. Portrait photograph of George and Augusta Curtis, born June 1, 1852; from the collection of Alice Lund;
  - 4. Two photographs from the collection of Edith Gardner: "Lois Norton Curtis," and "Steamship Portland, bound for Alaska, March 13, 1904."
  - 5. An engraved invitation to the 1905
Peck Reunion (the descendants of Rev. Elijah Peck), from the collection of Donald W.
Powell; a lively and lengthy discussion of the Peck Reunion followed the presentation of this engraved invitation.
- C. Report of the Corresponding Secretary/Historian.....S. Robert Powell

"Dear Mr. Powell:

Thank you for your letter of April 10, 1985 and for the list of descendants of John and Elizabeth Crittenden (No. 375A--Michael line). It is the product of much hard work and will be a great help to the Griswold Family Association.

Part of the answer to your question of why there was not more of your material in Volume VII lies in the fact that neither Glenn Griswold nor the Townsends went further than the children of women named Griswold. There are many members of the Association with other surnames but, with very few exceptions, none appears in the six volumes unless their mother's name was Griswold. The Association adopted that policy because of the near impossibility of following all female lines.

As genealogists for the Association we do have a wide correspondence with people seeking to trace their Griswold ancestry, so we can make good use of your material in that way. If the GFA should find it possible to follow female lines in future publications your work will have made a great difference..."

COMMENT BY SRP: The Griswold Family Association should, it is my belief, make every effort to include in the published volumes of GRISWOLD FAMILY OF ENGLAND AND AMERICA all known information about all descendants of Michael Griswold of Wethersfield, CT, regardless of whether they descend from a male line or a female line. Granted, it can be extremely difficult to trace a female line (neither Glenn Griswold nor the Townsends went further than the women of children named Griswold), but given the fact that some female lines are well documented and clear, e.g., the Clinton Township Griswold line, the known information about those female lines is as much an integral part of the Griswold family history as the information about the male lines. Just because known information about known female lines was not included in the published volumes of Griswold family history in the past is no reason for not including that information in presently-under-way or upcoming publications of the GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.)

SRP also reported, at the 78th Annual Griswold Reunion, that he chaired a committee of the descendants of Laura Griswold, and arranged to have the name of LAURA GRISWOLD (born, 07-07-1826, died, 03-25-1924) included on a special "In Memoriam" page in Volume VII of GRISWOLD FAMILY OF ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

SRP also reported that on 06-19-1984, he received a letter from John V. Buberniak (a guest of SRP's at the Reunion in 1983) who was visiting his maternal grandparents in Peru, IN. In his letter, John reported that he had located in the Mount Hope Cemetery, Peru, IN, the tombstones of the following Griswolds:

1. Willard Griswold 1831-1904
2. Charles Griswold PVT. 28 BTRY. IND. LT. ARTY.
April 30, 1928
3. Alice Gertrude Griswold 1872-1954
4. Harriet Griswold 1846-1926
5. Thomas F. Griswold April 27-28, 1900
6. Marjorie B. Griswold April 24--May 2, 1894
7. Dorothea B. Griswold April 24-25, 1894

At the Reunion, the Corresponding Secretary/Historian read the poem, "Reunion Day," by Grace Gray Sample, of Albia, IA. A copy of this poem, which is reproduced below, was handed to SRP by a member of the Reunion who prefers to remain anonymous:

REUNION DAY

Laden with food And bearing good cheer, The relatives gather On this one day each year. Greeting each other With words, amazed, At the years that are passing Since long-ago days.	They have passed on now Who were roots of our day, The years have been many Since they went away. But memories hold laughter, And memories hold love, And the hope the Hereafter Holds reunions above.
---	---

Newborns and newlyweds Might not understand The reason behind The desire to attend, The need to keep close, The need to stay "one"-- To remember the roots From which we have come.	Grace Gray Sample Albia, Iowa
--	----------------------------------

Every effort was made by SRP to get as much publicity as possible about the 78th Griswold Reunion (1984) and, therefore, guarantee a good attendance at the Reunion. To that end, SRP wrote and produced a two-page mailing piece (page 1: the announcement of the 78th Griswold Reunion and the 153rd anniversary of the founding of the Clinton Center Baptist Church; page 2: the 1984 Griswold Reunion Information Sheet), which was mailed, on July 31, 1984, to the 162 individuals and families on the mailing list.

In addition, SRP wrote, and arranged for the publication of, six press releases, which were published in the period July 19, 1984--August 23, 1984:

FOREST CITY NEWS, 07-19-1984, p. 5 (photograph by Donald W. Powell--hereinafter "DWP"--of the 77th Griswold Reunion--hereinafter "GR"--announcement of the 78th GR/153rd Clinton Center Baptist Church--hereinafter "CCBC"--Anniversary);

THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT, 07-21/22-1984, p. 10A (announcement of the 78th GR/153rd CCBC Anniversary; this paper was sent, but did not publish with the announcement, the group photograph by DWP of the 152nd CCBC Anniversary that was sent to them to accompany the announcement);

CARBONDALE NEWS, 08-08-1984, p. 3, p. 9 (DWP photograph of 77th GR + announcement of the 78th GR/153rd CCBC Anniversary);

FOREST CITY NEWS, 08-16-1984, p. 5 (DWP photograph of 152nd CCBC Anniversary + announcement of the 78th GR/153rd CCBC Anniversary);

CARBONDALE NEWS, 08-22-1984, p. 3 (brief announcement in Community Calendar of 78th GR/153rd CCBC Anniversary; no photograph);

THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT, 08-23-1984, p. 5A (brief reminder of the 78th GR/153rd CCBC Anniversary in the reunion announcement section).

SRP incurred the following expenses during 1984 on behalf of the GR: $15.60 (printing of two-page mailer that was mailed on 07-31-84), $117 (printing of gummed labels to send out two-page mailer), $32.40 (postage to mail out 162 announcements of the Reunion). Total expenses incurred by the Corresponding Secretary/Historian in 1984: $50.18. SRP reimbursed, in cash, on 08-27-1984 by Treasurer of Griswold Reunion.

SRP reported that he had sent to Charles D. and Edna W. Townsend a complete copy of the entire list of descendants of John Griswold (No. 375A) and Elizabeth Crittenden. This list was originally published in Volume II, Number 2 (November 19, 1980) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Following the publication of the descendant list in NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, SRP carefully updated and corrected the list and sent it to the Townsends, on 03-26-1982, so that the complete list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden might be included in Volume VII of the Griswold family history, entitled, GRISWOLD FAMILY OF ENGLAND AND AMERICA, Volume VII. When SRP received his personal copy (Copy No. 20) of said volume, he was greatly dismayed to learn that the fruits of his research were not all included in said volume. Rather than publish the complete list of descendants in Volume VII, the Townsends merely referred the reader to the list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden that was published in Volume II, No. 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. Very disappointing treatment by the Townsends. The Townsends had the complete list and it should have been published in Volume VII of GRISWOLD FAMILY OF ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

NOTE: At the Reunion in 1984, DWP reported that he had learned from Stan Pratt of Honesdale that the Townsends have been replaced as the national family historians and that Robert and Esther French (R. D., Box 139, Chatham, NY 12037) have been named the national Griswold genealogists and family historians and that they are very interested in receiving a copy of SRP's complete list of the descendants of John Griswold (No. 375A) and Elizabeth Crittenden for inclusion in the next hard cover volume of GRISWOLD FAMILY OF ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

(A copy of that list was mailed to Robert and Esther French on April 10, 1985.

On April 18, 1985, Robert and Esther French replied to SRP's letter of April 10, 1985, as follows:

SRP also read the poem "Yesterday * Today * Tomorrow" by the Rev. G. Fay Crossman (given on page 57 of Rev. Crossman's recently published volume of poetry entitled, "Words of Love"). This poem, which was written by Rev. Crossman on January 8, 1983, is as follows:

YESTERDAY * TODAY * TOMORROW

Yesterday was the day before today
And to bring it back, there is no way
What we were going to do yesterday
We may be able to get it done today

Today is our opportunity to do
It is ours to use all day through
To use it for good or ill
Mostly according to our will.

Today we can be happy along the way
And a kind word to some one may say
A helping hand to some one in need
A kind word, a helping hand can be a good deed.

Today is the only day we have to live
So let us live it that we may be able to give
And be a witness each day for God above
Whom is the greatest Giver of love.

Tomorrow is a day we never will see
As it is always a day ahead of you and me
We plan to do things tomorrow when it is today
All too soon tomorrow will be today, then yesterday

When tomorrow comes it is no longer tomorrow
As it has changed from tomorrow to today
Just let us live today and tomorrow's today
Continue to praise God and always to Him pray.

SRP then called for all revisions and/or additions to the Griswold Reunion Mailing List and to the official list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden, and announced that an updated and corrected list of descendants would be available to family members in the Fall of 1984.

The following individuals (names not listed in any particular order) furnished information to SRP to update and correct the official list of descendants and also the Griswold Reunion Mailing List:

Pearl and Ernest Brudos, Niles F. and Nancy M. Curtis, Verna C. Varcoe, the Blair Family (Douglas S., and Helen E. Blair) of Niceville, FL, Virginia Rude Hungerford, Leland and Betty Loomis, Leeta Geuther, Margaret Remsen Rude, Mildred E. LaBarre, Alice Curtis Lund, Marge Treat, Edith A. Gardner, Verla C. Arnold, Mrs. Reginald Blair, Mrs. Willard Gibson, Harold T. Loomis, Myrtle Curtis, Mrs. Marjorie Norton Walker, Patricia C. Lawrence, Mary Zollbrecht, Esther Griswold, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Henry Curtis III, Dorothy and Fred Olver, and Donald Walter Powell.

In addition, SRP showed thirty color slides that he took at the 77th Griswold Reunion at Ridge Farm in 1983; also included were some slides that were taken at the 152nd CCBC Anniversary in 1983.

D. Report of the Treasurer....Donald W. Powell

The Treasurer reported that there was a balance of $15.85 in the bank account when all expenses from last year's reunion were paid.

Bills presented this year for payment: printing of announcements of the Reunion: $15.60; printing of labels, $1.17; postage for mailing out announcements, $32.40; miscellaneous, $1.01

The following persons were unable to attend the Griswold Reunion in Clinton Township in 1984, but sent in donations for the annual collection:

Niles F. and Nancy M. Curtis
Douglas S. and Helen E. Blair
Virginia R. and Philip C. Hungerford, Jr.
Helen Loomis Russell Powell
Mrs. Reginald Blair
Esther Griswold
Mrs. Patricia Lawrence
Mrs. Marjorie N. Walker

The donations of these thoughtful and generous Griswolds is very much appreciated. Thank you from the entire Griswold family.

THE GRISWOLDS OF GUILFORD, CT

The following announcement was discovered by Donald W. Powell in the January-February 1985 issue (Volume XXXIX, No. 1, pages 118-119) of The Genealogical Helper:

FAMILIES OF EARLY GUILFORD, CONNECTICUT, 1984. Compiled by Alvan TALCOTT, edited and prepared for publication by Jacquelyn L. RICKER, available from Genealogical Publishing Company, 1001 N. Calvert St., Baltimore, MD 21202. Hardback, 6 X 9 inches, 1379 pages, indexed, $75.00.

Genealogical records of many families of early Guilford, Connecticut are contained in this book. The records are arranged alphabetically by family name, under which may also be found the names and records of allied families. To facilitate the search for an allied family, the reader is advised to consult the index. As far as possible, each family line is traced from the settlement of the town in 1639 downward, and the descendants who removed from Guilford to other localities are followed as near the cut-off date of 1890 as possible. The record of each family is complete in itself giving the residence and the date of birth, marriage, and death of each member, with numerical references, in certain cases, to ancestors and descendants. Nearly 90 families are presented along with thousands of allied names. Some of the families included are: BALDWIN, BURGIS, CAMP, CRUTTENDEN, DAVIS, DUDLEY, ELLIOT, EVARTS, FAIRCHILD, FRENCH, GOLDSMITH, GRISWOLD, HALL, HUBBARD, ISBELL, JOHNSON, JONES, KELSEY, KIRKHAM, LANDON, LOPER, MEIGS, MURRAY, NORTON, PAGE, PIERSON, ROBINSON, RUSSELL, SCRANTON, STONE, TALLMAN, TODD, VAILL, WALKLEY, WOODWARD, plus many more.

DESCENDANT LIST

To obtain a copy of the updated and corrected list of the descendants of John Griswold (No. 375A) and Elizabeth Crittenden, of Clinton Township, Wayne County, PA, contact the Recording Secretary/Historian of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion, S. Robert Powell (Post Office Box 161, Carbondale, PA 18407).

Given the fact that this descendant list is 98 pages in length, we will have to ask that you contribute to the cost of xeroxing the list. Please enclose $5.00 for each copy of the list that you order.

CLAUDE WRIGHT MANATON MAKES DISCOVERY

It is from Michael Griswold of Wethersfield, CT, that the Griswolds of Clinton Township are descended. Michael Griswold is one of the sons of George Griswold and Dorothy James of Kenilworth, Warwickshire, England. The name and number of the siblings of Michael Griswold is a matter of some discussion among Griswold historians (see page 2 of Volume II, Number 2, November 19, 1980, of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA for a discussion of this question).

One of "our" Griswolds, Claude Wright Manaton (2965 N. W. 154th Avenue, Beaverton, OR 97006), has conducted research in this area, and, in a November 1984 letter to S. Robert Powell, reported the following information: "... I have been able to verify beyond a doubt that Michael Griswold was a brother of Thomas and Francis Griswold, born in Kenilworth, Warwick, England, to George Griswold and Dorothy James. The record is contained in the Parish Register and I have seen it on microfilms belonging to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and kept in their genealogy library in Salt Lake City, Utah."

Claude Wright Manaton is the son of Evelyn Marie Wright and Claude Emerson Manaton, and grandson of Leah Matilda Stiles and Ira Charles Wright.

MISSING TEXT UN-EARTHED

Until August 1984, the complete newspaper account of the unveiling, on August 27, 1915, of the six-ton natural flint conglomerate stone, "IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH," in Clinton Center Baptist Church Cemetery, was lost. Just before the Griswold Reunion, last year, however, Wyman Terrel came across a copy of the complete newspaper account and presented it to Alice Curtis Lund, who brought it to the Reunion with her and shared it with the members present. Donald Powell borrowed the newspaper clipping from Alice and had multiple copies made. If you would like to see a copy, contact Alice or Donald.

A fragment of the account of the unveiling is presented on page 3 of the November 19, 1980 issue (Volume II, Number 2) of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA. The part of the clipping that was formerly missing is the body of E. M. Peck's history of the first settlers of Clinton Township and of the ministers of the Clinton Center Baptist Church.

Thank you, Wyman Terrel, for thinking of the Griswolds when you came across this important newspaper clipping.

THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC.

The national organization of Griswolds is called The Griswold Family Association of America, Inc. The descendants of Edward Griswold of Windsor, CT, Matthew Griswold of Lyme, CT, Michael Griswold of Wethersfield, CT, and Francis Griswold of Cambridge, MA, including collateral lineage once having the surname Griswold, are eligible for membership, upon proof of descent, together with their spouses and children. As descendants of John Griswold (No. 375A, married Elizabeth Crittenden), we are all descendants of Michael Griswold of Wethersfield, CT, and are, therefore, all potential members of THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC.

To become a member of THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC., you must prove that you descend from Edward, Matthew, Michael or Francis Griswold (see preceding paragraph). To do so, you must indicate your line of descent. As descendants of John Griswold (No. 375A) and Elizabeth Crittenden, our line of descent is as follows:

Michael Griswold (1)
Thomas Griswold (2)
Samuel Griswold (16)
John Griswold (88)
John Griswold (375A)

The numbers in parentheses have been assigned to the members of the Griswold family by Glenn E. Griswold in his books entitled THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ENGLAND - AMERICA, Volumes II, III. These numbers are important identifying labels and must be used when applying for membership in THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC. in proving your descent from Michael Griswold. All of this information about our line of descent is very clearly spelled out in the Griswold issue of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA (Volume II, Number 2, November 19, 1980), copies of which are available from the Corresponding Secretary/Historian of the Griswold Reunion, S. Robert Powell.

To become a member of THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC. contact any of the officers of the Association (names and addresses given below). Dues: students and retirees, $8.00; single, $10.00; family, $15.00; patron, $25.00; donor, $50.00; life, $100.00; benefactor, $1,000.00.

In the Spring of 1985, the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion became a member of The Griswold Family Association of America, Inc. A copy of the June, 1985, issue of the national newsletter (Richard Griswold, Jr., Editor) was received this Summer and is kept with the official records of the Secretary of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion, Donald W. Powell. If you would like to read this issue of the national newsletter, speak to Donald.

In addition, when membership in the national organization was taken out, the Secretary of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion purchased ($2.75) for the Reunion a copy of THE GRISWOLD FAMILY IN ENGLAND BEFORE 1639, A Report of the Findings of Bonnie Boone Day, Griswold and James Wells Griswold, 1984. This report is also kept with the official records of the Reunion, and if you would like to read it, speak to Donald.

The officers of THE GRISWOLD FAMILY ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA, INC. for 1983-1985 are:

RICHARD M. GRISWOLD, JR., President, 1984-1985
116 Garden Street, Wethersfield, CT 06109

JOAN GRISWOLD, First Vice President, 1984-1985
Box 16, Granby, CT 06035

ANDREW C. PIKOSKY, Second Vice President, 1983-1984, 17 East Street, New Milford, CT 06776

EVELYN G. GRISWOLD, Secretary, 1983-1984
116 Garden Street, Wethersfield, CT 06109

ELIZABETH A. YOUNG, West Coast Chapter Secretary, 1983-1984, 1430 North Sycamore Avenue, Fullerton, CA 92631

DR. WILBER GRISWOLD, Treasurer, 1984-1985, 26 Holly Lane, Wethersfield, CT 06109

BARBARA M. GRISWOLD, Registrar, 1983-1984
56 Chapin Avenue, Rocky Hill, CT 06109

ROBERT AND ESTHER FRENCH, Genealogists, R. D., Box 139, Chatham, NY 12037

CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY HISTORICAL PROGRAM GRISWOLD REUNION

The Clinton Center Pioneer Day Historical Program and the Griswold Reunion will take place on August 23, 1986. Welcome and Registration will begin at 11:30 A.M. At noon, a covered-dish cookout picnic will take place on the lawn of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. The Griswold Reunion Committee will provide hot dogs, hamburger and sausage for cooking over the open fire, and also freshly squeezed lemonade. The cost of these items will be shared. Everyone is asked to bring a covered dish. If, instead of a covered dish, you would like to bring something specific to go with this cookout picnic (rolls, potato chips, mustard, tomatoes, lettuce, mayonnaise, marshmallows, pickles), contact Donald W. Powell (282-5197).

At 1:00 P.M. an Historical Program will take place in the basement of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. At 1:30 P.M. the Griswold Reunion Annual Business Meeting will be held. Adjournment will be at 2:30 P.M.

WHAT PIONEER DAY MEANS TO THE CLINTON CENTER BAPTIST CHURCH NOW

By Alice Curtis Lund

In years past, the Pioneer Day celebration meant a chance of a pleasant get together, a breaking-bread together sort of a day. It was held in the sanctuary of the Church, with prayer and singing hymns, then an historical account of one or another of the Pioneer families of Clinton. In those days, the Church had a much larger membership than we have today. Dinner was a sumptuous affair, each member given a slip of food to furnish. It was all good. As the congregation dwindled, some thought the undertaking of continuing the day was too much of a burden. To be sure, it was a lot of work.

So, it ceased to exist. Then when we celebrated our 150th Anniversary, we saw it was a good day, enjoyed by many. Robert Powell suggested that we bring the Pioneer Day yearly celebration back. Once the seed was planted, it needed to be nurtured, so with the help of the Powell boys, we did get it going. Frankly, the Church finances were in bad shape. We had lost so many members, one way or another, that there were no funds to keep the building in repair. Why not, we reasoned, make it some sort of a day of gifts of love for the maintenance of the building. We had no diagram of a course to follow, we did not have sufficient help to prepare and serve a dinner, for which we could set a donation price. So, the covered-dish meal with certain donations was adopted. It has worked well. The free-will offerings at the Historical Program have increased from year to year. As more folks are being made aware of the need for help, more are wanting to become a part of the crusade for the Church. The building was badly in need of repairs. There is no one to blame, we're only trying to get the job done. Our programs have gone from local families to the history of the county. The Griswold family is quite well covered in the Reunion. We tried to get the first repairs made where the need was the greatest. First to be done was the roof--one year's receipts were used for that. Then came the painting--work of another year. The windows were so badly in need of repair and paint, some had to be re-inforced with metal supports. Varnish on the floor inside was worn so thin as to endanger the wood itself, so it came next. A long needed turn-off of the water from the north basement wall came this year. None of these tasks was begun until we had the funds in hand to do them. None of the funds collected for repairs were used for any other purpose. There are still needs, eave troughs to turn the water away from the north wall yet to get done. Painting the basement still to be done. Many said it couldn't be done. We have something to show for our labors. Mistakes were made, of course, programs too long perhaps, etc., but we have tried. It is not easy to please everyone. We take pride in our part of what has been accomplished to date, and look forward to what is yet to do. I know many look forward to the Pioneer Day and the programs. The Clinton Center Baptist Church is kept up, and kept open to proclaim God's word. All of us working together made it happen.

WELCOME

By Donald W. Powell

Good morning and welcome to the ceremonies commemorating the 154th anniversary of the founding of the Clinton Center Baptist Church and the 79th annual meeting of the Griswold Reunion.

In 1831, this Church was founded. That was 154 years ago. In 1915, 70 years ago, nearly 400 descendants of those pioneers met and established the first Pioneer Day, on August 27, 1915. At that time they erected a monument in the cemetery across the road and on that monument affixed a plaque bearing the names of the pioneer settlers and the pioneer ministers of this Church and this community. As we convene this historical program this morning, I think it appropriate that we read the names of those pioneer settlers and pioneer ministers.

Before we do that, I think it interesting to call our attention to the patterns into which the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations have fallen.

THE PIONEER SETTLERS AND THEIR DESCENDANTS

The pattern in our history.

Six distinct periods can be identified in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations, and these periods can be characterized by whether or not celebrations were held.

1. The first period of no annual celebrations: Establishment of the church and community, 1831-1915

The first period in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations we may call the period of establishment of the Church and the community. In this period, which extends from 1831, when the original settlers decided to establish a Church, until 1915, when the descendants of the original settlers decided to establish a Pioneer Day, there were no annual celebrations in the Church.

In those first 84 years--from the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church (1831) until the institution of the celebration of Pioneer Day (1915)--the settlers were putting down their roots and establishing their individual lives, and simultaneously, a collective life for their community. We can easily understand why they in those first years after settlement did not hold annual celebrations: on the one hand it might have been felt that it would be premature to commemorate something which was still becoming fact, something which was still coming into being; on the other hand it may have been felt that no conscious celebration needed to be held because the fact that they were living and prospering was testimony enough to the fact that they existed. Perhaps we may say, in short, that they were too involved in living to take time out to commemorate that living.

2. The first period of annual celebrations, 1915-1942

The second period in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations we may call 'the first period of annual celebrations.' In this period, which extends from 1915, when the annual Pioneer Day celebration was held for the first time, until 1942, when the annual Pioneer Day celebrations were suspended because of the approaching War, World War II, there was an annual Pioneer Day celebration in Clinton Township.

We know from newspaper accounts and from the minutes of the Pioneer Day celebrations that there was a Pioneer Day celebration each year in this period, with the possible exception of three years, 1917, 1919, and 1925. For those three years--1917, 1919, 1925--we do not have any primary sources, no direct evidence that a Pioneer Day celebration was held.

In this 27-year period--from the institution of the annual celebration, until its suspension because of the approaching War--the Church witnessed its 100th Anniversary, and the annual Pioneer Day celebration was characterized by great vitality, energy and pride. Large numbers of people attended the annual event and the historical programs were carefully planned and exhaustively researched.

3. The lapse after the War: 1942-1956

The third period in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations we may call 'the lapse after the War.' In this period, which extends from 1942, when annual celebrations were suspended because of the on-coming War, until 1965, when the Church celebrated its 125th anniversary, no annual celebrations were held.

We may readily understand how in that period of time right after the War the great physical and mental wound inflicted on life by the war required time to heal. Everyday life and particularly community life, community celebrations, could not take place again until everyday life had once again begun to prosper. And too, we may readily understand how in the landmark year, the 125th anniversary of the establishment of the Church, the Church and community decided to commemorate the anniversary with the holding of a community-wide 'pioneer day' celebration.

4. The 125th anniversary of the founding of the Church: 1956

The fourth period in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations we may call the 125th anniversary of the founding of the Church, in 1956. The arrival at the landmark year of the 125th anniversary was felt to be sufficiently important to reactivate the old celebrations.

5. The third period of no annual celebrations: the 25 years between the celebration of the 125th anniversary and the celebration of the 150th anniversary: 1956-1981

The fifth period in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations we may call the 25-year period between the anniversary celebration in 1956--the 125th anniversary--and the 150th anniversary celebration, in 1981. In this 25-year period, no annual celebrations were held.

We may speculate on the reasons why no celebrations were held. Perhaps the majority of the Clintonians felt that an annual celebration of the community's roots was unnecessary, and that celebrations of only the big years, the landmark years--the 125th, 150th, and so forth--were sufficient. Perhaps during these years there were no leaders, no organizers, with the time and energy to devote in order to organize and carry out such celebrations. Perhaps during these years it was felt by the members of the Clinton Center Baptist Church that there was nothing to celebrate. A perpetually diminishing congregation in a community and a world wherein religion began to loose ground, and a perpetually diminishing sense of community vitality in Clinton Township may have left the Church and the community unable to muster the strength, energy and courage to hold an annual celebration.

6. The sixth period of annual celebrations: 1981-1985

The sixth period in the history of the Pioneer Day celebrations we may call the second period of annual celebrations. In this period, which extends from 1981, when the 150th anniversary of the Church resulted in a Pioneer Day celebration, until the present day, August 25, 1985, a Pioneer Day celebration has been held annually.

For the last five years, from 1981 until today, we have met annually. For the first three years of this period--1981, 1982, 1983--the Clinton Center Pioneer Day celebration was celebrated just as it had always been celebrated--as a celebration in its own right. For the last two years, 1984 and this year, the Pioneer Day celebration has been held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Griswold Reunion. Although both the Pioneer Day program and the Griswold Reunion business meeting and program have been held separately, as they always have been, they have been linked together as part of the same day-long celebration. Both organizations have benefited from the combined resources and energy.

In closing, then, we may summarize the six periods in the history of the celebration of Pioneer Day in this way:

After an initial period of 84 years during which the Church and the community were putting down their roots and held no annual celebration, we have a second period, of 27 years in length, in which celebrations were held annually. This was followed by a third period of no celebrations, the 14 years during and after World War II. The 125th anniversary celebration in 1956 constitutes the fourth period. The fifth period is the third period of no annual celebrations, the 25 years between the 125th anniversary in 1956 and the 150th anniversary in 1981. The sixth and final period brings us to the present time, the second period of annual celebrations, from 1981 to 1985.

It is my hope that as we convene the fifth consecutive meeting of the Pioneer Day in this present period, the second period of annual celebrations, that we can with our interest and energy sustain the life of this celebration so that we can continue it for many years, and perhaps surpass the time record of the first period of annual celebrations, from 1915 until 1942, a period of 27 years. I know that I and many of us here today will crawl in here on our hands and knees or with canes and wheelchairs and keep this Church going as long as we are physically and mentally able, and I'm sure that many of you feel that way also, and will take an active part in keeping the Pioneer Day celebration alive.

The names of the settlers and ministers mentioned on the bronze plaque on the conglomerate stone across the road at the entrance of the Cemetery are known to many of us. Many of these settlers and ministers are our direct ancestors. To conclude my opening remarks I would like to read the inscription on the 6-ton conglomerate stone that was dug out of the mountain West of the Cemetery and erected on a concrete base in 1915 when approximately 400 Clintonians and friends gathered here on August 27th, and convened the first Pioneer Day. The inscription on the bronze plaque on the conglomerate stone across the road at the entrance to the Cemetery reads:

CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER

S. Robert Powell presented to the persons gathered in the Clinton Center Baptist Church for the Historical Program at 11:05 A.M. the first issue, Volume I, Number 1, August 25, 1985, of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. SRP reported that 250 copies of this six-page NEWSLETTER were printed and that 204 were mailed to all persons on the mailing list in August 1985. Additional copies were distributed by SRP during the Historical Program.

The 1985 NEWSLETTER is printed on six 11" X 17" pages and is divided into four sections:

- I. The Brudos Tea Party, August 20, 1984
- II. Combined Service, Aldenville-Clinton Center Baptist Church, August 26, 1984, 10:30 A.M.
- III. Historical Program, Clinton Center Baptist Church, August 26, 1984, 1:30 P.M.
- IV. Griswold Reunion, 78th Annual Business Meeting, August 26, 1984

THE TANNING OF LEATHER

By Alice Curtis Lund

Tanning leather was one of the first needs of a new colonial community. In 1840, in the United States, at this time there were only 26 states in the Union, there were over 8,000 tanneries. The first tannery in Wayne County was at Cherry Ridge, owned by Daniel Davis. The year was 1800, the business consisted of one vat. Due to a large supply of tanning woods, black and rock oak and hemlock were used mostly. Wayne County was well blessed with virgin forests of the trees needed, so we had many tanneries. The great trees were cut, stripped of bark and left to rot, with no thought where a later supply would be found. In 1869, there were 19 tanneries in the county, grossing over $2,000,000. To name a few, at Pleasant Mount where the Fish Hatchery now stands, Starrucca, Honesdale on Tryon Street, run by Sam Saunders, Bunnell's Pond, Seelyville, this one is said to be the largest in Pennsylvania. The Clemo tannery, the largest in the world. The one at Aldenville, built in 1849-1850 and closed in 1882, was the largest sole leather tannery in Pennsylvania. Others were located at Tanners Falls, Ledgedale, Carley Brook, Milanville. Dozens of leather items were in demand--shoes, aprons, harness, saddles, bridles, buggy tops, gloves, belting, leather breeches, bellows, book bindings, etc. Tanneries were slow to use power-driven machinery, though flour mills, up and down sawmills, iron foundries, and others were using water power. Hides were in plentiful supply, both domestic and shipped in from South America. Pittsburgh originated "patent leather," the first of this type in 1826, varnish being used for the shine.

Hides had to be washed first, taking about thirty hours, then the longer task of soaking, scraping and removing the hair, in some instances this part took up to a year. Hides were soaked in lime in wooden or masonry vats to loosen the hair, then drawn from the vats, washed and placed over a round beaming horse to be scrapped and the hair to be rubbed off, and any fleshy parts taken off that were not part of the hide. A special stone like a whetstone was now used to give the hair side of the hide a vigorous rubbing, care had to be used to keep the hide a uniform thickness. Several washings were done as the work went along. As lime was mildly harmful to the hide, it had to be completely removed. To aid in keeping the hides pliable, they were soaked in a mixture of chicken manure, salt and water. Needless to say, a tannery was not a choice neighbor, it was a smelly business, but this mixture made the leather softer and receptive to oils and dyes. After more washings in soft water the hides were ready to be put in the tanning vats. Before the tan bark is ready for the vats, it was put through a horse powered shredder. Hides were placed in the vats with twice their weight of tanbark and at least 12 gallons of water. Hides had to be shifted to expose them to equal amounts of tannin. A top grade of leather required twelve to eighteen months of curing. One hundred pounds of hides would yield 52 to 56 pounds of durable leather. After the tanning process, the hides were cleaned again with water, then squared and rubbed with a mixture of codfish oil and tallow for flexibility and water resistance.

A tannery finishing two or three thousand hides in a year was a booming business. Three thousand hides required 350 cords of tanbark. It was thought the supply was inexhaustible, but it was the scarcity of tanbark that put many tanneries out of business.

I can remember a few loads of hemlock bark being shipped by freight, I believe to a tannery in central Pennsylvania.

Life was not easy for these pioneer ancestors of ours, but they did what had to be done, they didn't have too much time to complain, as we are wont to do.

THE LEGACY OF THE PIONEERS

By S. Robert Powell

When the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township came here, over 175 years ago, they brought with them objects that were fundamentally utilitarian in nature--cooking utensils, farm implements, household furnishings, and so on. Some of those physical objects that they brought with them have survived and have come down to us today, and those artifacts have become the treasured heirlooms of the descendants of the pioneers, and such tangible mementos connect us, in some measure, to the pioneer settlers and their world.

But such physical artifacts--a chest of drawers, a quilt, a cooking utensil, a farm implement, or what have you--which were brought with the pioneers when they came into this township from New England, and which have come down to us, were by no means the most important items that belonged to the pioneers. Granted such tangible and utilitarian objects made it possible for the pioneers to establish themselves in what was then the wilderness of Wayne County, granted such objects made possible life in a physical sense. No, such tangible and utilitarian objects were not the most important possessions of the pioneers when they arrived in Clinton Township; no, such tangible and utilitarian objects are not the most important remains of the pioneer world that have come down to us.

The most important components in the ox carts of the pioneers when they arrived here, the most important components in the houses and in the barns and in the workshops of the pioneer settlers in Clinton Township were the intangibles which they brought with them here from New England and which they bequeathed to their children and their children's children and which have come down to us. What are those intangibles? They are, among other things, their beliefs.

And what did the pioneer settlers of this township believe in? What were their beliefs?

They believed, first of all, in God, and the strength of their belief was such that they cleared the wilderness and erected houses of worship in which they might worship God. This very church where we are met this morning, the Clinton Center Baptist Church, established 154 years ago, on November 10, 1831, on land given to the Church by Erastus and Mehitabel Loomis, was one of the earliest manifestations in this township of the belief in God of the pioneer settlers and their belief that God held an important position in the community. To give you an idea of just how old the Clinton Center Baptist Church is, know that in 1831, the year in which this Church was established, Andrew Jackson was the president of the United States. Two former presidents of the United States, James Madison and John Quincy Adams were still alive. Only five years before the establishment of this Church, the Erie Canal was opened between Buffalo and Albany. Only three years before the establishment of the Clinton Center Baptist Church did Noah Webster first publish the American Dictionary of the English Language. In the year in which this Church was established, 1831, Nathaniel Hawthorne was 27, Abraham Lincoln was 22, Victoria Alexandrina (later Queen Victoria) was 12. Not until 30 years after the Clinton Center Baptist Church was established did the American Civil War break out. This "Little Church in the Wildwood" is indeed a grand and venerable institution, and the records of the Church indicate clearly just how important this Church was in the pioneer community, not just on Sunday morning, but throughout the week. The community regularly and faithfully attended church services twice on Sunday as well as prayer meetings and other such divine services in the course of the week. Only rarely was there an empty pew on the main floor, the Sunday Schools were filled to capacity. Yes, the pioneer settlers of this township believed in God and believed that religion occupied a prominent place in the life of the community.

Secondly, the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township believed in themselves and in their future, and the strength of their belief was such that they, in the face of awesome obstacles and difficulties, cleared the land, built houses and barns, and established farms and orchards. John and Elizabeth Griswold, for example, came here in the Fall of 1813 and established themselves on a farm at the foot of the Moosic Mountain, up behind the present Grange Hall on the North and South. These farms and orchards, as well as the lumber mills and grist mills and other industries that the pioneers established--such as the tanneries that Alice has described for us today--were the life-sustaining units of the pioneer world. And the pride of the pioneers in what they had created was such that their farms and orchards and mills and tanneries were the envy of their contemporaries far and near. And the pride of the pioneers in what they had created was such that they and their children and their children's children were blessed many fold in the bounty of the earth that was returned unto them for their efforts.

The pioneer settlers of this township believed, thirdly, in the human mind and its strengths and capabilities, and the strength of their belief was such that they established schools, such as the one in Curtis Valley, for example, and the Farno School that was established just out here across the stream from the Church, in which their children might learn not only to discipline their minds but also to open their minds to the beauty of the creations of the human mind. And this education was carried out under the direction of some of the finest teachers--educators, in the true sense of the term--who, by their thoughts, actions and deeds, transmitted to their students not only book learning but also living examples of education. Such teachers provided their students with the tools necessary to those students so that they, the students, might independently explore and know, both in a literal and in a figurative sense, the world. Such teachers of the first order knew, and made every effort to make known to their students, that to be perfectly educated is to be, above all else, tolerant. The children of such schools were, therefore, equipped with the tools and ethical machinery necessary to become the responsible adults of the community. The children of such schools were, therefore, equipped to make learning a life-long process, having learned, from their teachers, that when learning stops, that life itself is no longer possible.

Fourthly, the pioneer settlers of this township believed in the earth and the possibilities and potentialities of the earth, and the strength of their belief was such that they were sustained, emotionally and physically, in good times and bad, by the earth. They respected and loved the earth, just as they respected and loved each other, and because they believed in this land and because they loved this land, many of the secrets of the earth were known to them, and knowing those secrets, they were gentle, and knowing those secrets, life for them was joyful. The pioneer settlers knew well, as some people in the late twentieth century do not, that if the earth is not abused and maligned, that the earth will not betray man, that the earth will annually pour forth its bounty, that the earth will be generous.

Such are four of the intangibles, among others, that were with the pioneer settlers in their ox carts and wagons when they arrived here in Clinton Township--a belief in God, a belief in themselves and in their future, a belief in the human mind and its strengths and potentialities, and a belief in the earth. Those four intangibles, those four beliefs, among others, are what kept the pioneers alive in the frequently rough times of 175 years ago; those four beliefs are the substance of pioneer America, those four beliefs are the precious legacy that the pioneer settlers of Clinton Township bequeathed to their children and their children's children. Those beliefs were passed, untarnished and undiminished, from one generation to the next, and because they were, the lives of the pioneers and of their children and of their children's children made sense, and the lives of the pioneers and of their children and of their children's children made sense, and the lives of the pioneers and of their children and of their children's children had meaning, and the lives of the pioneers and of their children and of their children's children had beauty. The very fact that we are here gathered today tells a great deal about our relationship to and understanding of not only the pioneers themselves but also of those four primary beliefs of the pioneers. The very fact that we are here met today is testimony to the fact that we, like the pioneers, believe in God, that we, like the pioneers, believe in ourselves and in our future, that we, like the pioneers, believe in the human mind and its strengths and potentialities, that we, like the pioneers, believe in the earth. Without such beliefs, the pioneers could not have made it. Without such beliefs, we can not make it. With such beliefs, our ancestors who came here in ox carts and on foot and on horseback were able to here, in Clinton Township, create for themselves lives that were rich in beauty and meaning and which made sense. With such beliefs we, their descendants, can guarantee that our lives, wherever we may go, whatever we do, are rich in beauty and meaning and make sense, and that the lives of those who come after us are rich in beauty and meaning and make sense.

Such is the precious legacy of the pioneers to us. It is that legacy that has brought us here together today and which will bring us together again next year at this time to commemorate the anniversary of the establishment of this church, and which will bring us together here at this season annually again and again. Such is a legacy that can not be taken away from us against our will. That legacy, however, can be diminished if we are lazy and if we allow it to be diminished. But we, like the pioneers themselves, are fighters. But we, like the pioneers themselves, are not willing to allow what is precious to us to be diminished in any way, by any one. But we, like the pioneer settlers of this township, are committed to a belief in God, a belief in ourselves and in our future, a belief in the human mind, a belief in the earth. We know that those beliefs worked for the pioneers and we know that they work for ourselves and we know that they can work for those who come after us. As such, we shall not allow them to be diminished, as such we shall not allow them to die. Like the pioneers, we shall here, upon this soil, take a stand, and because we shall, we shall come to be known as those pioneers who, in the late twentieth century, here took a stand for God, for ourselves and our future, for the human mind, for the earth.

Thank you.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

By Alice Curtis Lund

Our character is but the stamp on our souls of the free choices of good and evil we have made through life.

What the heart has once owned and had, it shall never lose.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest of all, "It might have been."

It is easy to pick out the best people. They will help you do it.

We like a man that comes out and says what he thinks--when he agrees with us.

There is only one man living that can make a man of you--that's you.

All the Constitution guarantees is the pursuit of happiness. You have to catch up with it yourself.

When you see a married couple coming down the street, the one that is two or three steps ahead is the one that's mad.

Certain thoughts are prayers. There are moments when, whatever the attitude of the body, the soul is on its knees.

A friend forgives your defects, and if he is fond of you, he doesn't see any.

We used to marry for better or worse. Now it's for more or less.

CURTIS VALLEY SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT

On August 12, 1985, Verna Curtis Varcoe wrote the following letter to Alice Curtis Lund:

Dear Alice:

You know the Curtis Valley Sunday School have sold their building built in 1955-57, as there were too few left to carry it on successfully. The Trustees are giving the money received from the building (less expenses) for missionary and other Christian work.

Enclosed find check for One Hundred Dollars, ($100.00) from the Trustees of the Curtis Valley Sunday School to the Clinton Center Baptist Church to help fix the foundation of the church building.

I am sending this to you to add to the fund for Pioneer Day this year, which I understand is to be for fixing the foundation.

Hope your efforts are successful in this project. I will try to attend, if I can; but wanted to make sure the money was there.

Sincerely your cousin,

Verna C. Varcoe

P.S. You might like to know that the C.V.S.S. sent a nice sum to Kodiak, Alaska, in memory of Aunt Augusta G. Curtis, who went there as a teacher in 1904.

NARCISSUS BULBS PLANTED IN CLINTON CENTER CEMETERY

On October 5, 1985, 40 narcissus bulbs were planted in Clinton Center Cemetery, by S. Robert Powell, Donald Walter Powell and Holly Ann Brown. These bulbs were planted at the three conglomerate monuments and around selected Loomis and Squire graves. Specifically:

1. Settlers and Ministers conglomerate-- 21 bulbs
2. John Griswold - Elizabeth Crittenden conglomerate--2 bulbs
3. Michael Grennell - Susannah Balcom conglomerate--2 bulbs
4. Theron Orsemus Loomis - Mary Emma Squire stone--2 bulbs
5. Grennell - Squire stones: two bulbs were planted between each of the stones in this line of stones: Rufus Grenell, Anna Grenell, Beulah Grenell, Horace Squire, Willis Squire, Ruth

The specific name of these narcissi is OLD PHEASANT'S EYE. They are one of two species of narcissi in the narcissus family called POETICUS NARCISSI.

POETICUS NARCISSI is a family of narcissi which have snow-white, very large petals, with small shallow cups of contrasting colors, and which are very fragrant. The POETICUS NARCISSI is described in the catalogue of John T. Scheepers, Inc. Flower Bulb Specialists as "one of the oldest narcissi in cultivation. It was already grown during the Middle Ages and still thrives around old castles and monasteries throughout Europe. As a native of the Mediterranean countries and some parts of North Africa, it spread northwards most likely through human interference. It was the first Narcissus to be described by Linnaeus and its graceful appearance, unusual coloring and fragrance have enchanted men throughout history." The Fall 1984 catalogue of White Flower Farm, Litchfield, Conn., says of the POETICUS NARCISSUS: "Reminds one of childhood and fresh spring rains."

OLD PHEASANT'S EYE grows to a height of 16" and is the latest of the Poeticus Narcissi to come into flower. It has a pure white perianth, framing a small flattened yellow eye, edged fiery red-orange, centered green. It is extremely hardy and is therefore one of the best Narcissi for naturalizing.

79th ANNUAL GRISWOLD REUNION, Sunday, August 25, 1985

Program

The program of the Griswold Reunion was the last of a series of events on Sunday, August 25, 1985. The day began with a good many Griswolds attending the regular 10:00 A.M. Sunday morning worship service in the sanctuary of the Clinton Center Baptist Church. Following that service, at 11:05 A.M., the historical program of Pioneer Day was held in the same sanctuary. Following the Pioneer Day program a great many of those who had attended the two programs adjourned to the Church basement for a splendid covered dish dinner. Following that dinner, the Griswold Reunion was convened in the Church basement at 2:00 P.M.

- I. Call to order.....John R. Rude, President
- II. Opening prayer.....Margaret Rude
- III. Introductions

Everyone present stood and gave their name. This went quickly and smoothly and pleasantly, and it gave everyone a chance to get acquainted with some unfamiliar faces.

The following persons signed the register at the 79th Griswold Reunion on August 25, 1985:

IV. Superlatives.....John Rude

Youngest. . . . . Stephen Quigley (3 years old) Oldest. . . . . Norman S. Lund (89 years old) Farthest dsitance travelled. . Jeffrey Curtis
R. D. 2, Box 1
Bridgeton, NJ 08302

Jeff travelled 200 miles and he described Bridgeton in this way: "down where the mosquitoes are the state bird."

Most from a single household. . George Quigley family
(George, Elaine, Stephen, Susan, Georgette, Richard)

2. Black and white snapshot of 6 teen-aged girls, one of whom is Gertrude Gardner Snyder (all six are identified on the snapshot).

VI. Presentation of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. . . . . S. Robert Powell

Two hundred and four copies of the 1985 NEWSLETTER were mailed out by the Corresponding Secretary to those persons on the mailing list on July 30, 1985. The geographical distribution of the mailing is as follows: 21 Carbondale, 60 out of Pennsylvania, 21 Waymart, 7 Forest City, 38 Honesdale, 57 mixed Pennsylvania. In addition, one copy was mailed via surface mail (boat) to Audrey Schaffer and her family in Norway.

Every effort is made to keep all members of the Reunion up to date on the Reunions. If you know of someone who is not on the mailing list who should be, speak with the Corresponding Secretary and he will add the name in question to the list. If you are not sure if someone is on the mailing list, ask the Corresponding Secretary and he will tell you.

VII. Presentation of the Minutes of the 78th Annual Griswold Reunion. . . . . Donald W. Powell

Donald reported that the Minutes of the 78th Annual Griswold Reunion are published in Volume I, Number 1 of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER.

Corresponding Secretary/
Historian..... S. Robert Powell
Program Chairman..... Bernice Dolan
Table Committee..... Elizabeth Jones
Eleanor Rude
Ann Tyler

X. Report of the Secretary..... Donald W. Powell

1. The Clinton Griswolds have joined the national association, The Griswold Family Association of America, Inc. The annual membership dues are $10.00

2. "Our Griswold Family in England Before 1639," a publication available through the GFA, was purchased by DWP for the Clinton GR (cost $2.75) and passed along the tables for inspection by the membership.

3. A copy of a 'genealogy' by Beatrice Bayley was passed by DWP. Recently, Beatrice Bayley advertized in many local and regional papers that she would prepare and sell the genealogy of virtually every family in the region. DWP bought her PR and ordered a copy concerning the Powell family. Since many of the Griswolds had heard of such ready-made genealogies, DWP thought it would be informative to pass the one he had received.

4. Olvers on bus trip. Dorothy and Fred Olver were unable to attend the Reunion in 1985 because, as they explained in their letter to DWP of August 20, 1985, of their bus trip to California. Dorothy and Fred sent their greetings to all and hope to see everyone at the 1986 Reunion. Thanks to Dorothy and Fred for their donation to the collection in 1985. Perhaps the Olvers will tell the Reunion all about their bus trip at the 1986 Reunion?

5. Gerry and Marjorie Cook. On August 14, 1985, Marjorie and Gerry Cook wrote DWP and expressed their regrets at not being able to attend the 1985 Reunion. In their letter to DWP they state, in part: "We will be thinking about all of you on 25 August. Enclosed please find a check to help defray expenses and for keeping people informed, etc. We appreciate all that you have done and are doing. Thank you."

6. Claude W. Manaton reports on the English Griswolds.

Together with his completed 1985 Griswold questionnaire, Claude W. Manaton enclosed a letter to Donald W. Powell, in which he reported:

"I recently returned from Salt Lake City, Utah, where I spend additional time pursuing records and have obtained a copy of the extractions from the parish records for Warwick County, England, containing the Griswold information since the year 1465. Pedigree Charts and Family Group Sheets can be reconstructed from this information and if you are interested I'd be more than willing to send you a copy of the information.

At the same time, I am persuing my Wayne County ancestors and have run into a problem tracing the collateral lines of my paternal grandmother who was Alice Eade, married to Edward J. Manaton, and my paternal great grandmother, Catherine Bunting, who was married to William Pascoe Manaton...

As an amateur genealogist, I have been thrilled with the information I received on the Griswold line and want to thank you for your continued efforts.

Incidentally, your appeal for funds on page 6 of the Newsletter has not gone unnoticed. I am enclosing a check as a donation to the Griswold Reunion.

Thanks again for your devotion to and continued support of the Griswold Reunion. I am hoping that my wife and I can attend in the future.

Sincerely yours,

Claude W. Manaton"

On August 29, 1985, S. Robert Powell wrote to Claude W. Manaton and thanked him for his generous donation to the Griswold Reunion and for returning the 1985 Reunion Questionnaire. In his letter, SRP stated, in part: "Yes, we would very much like to have a copy of the extractions from the parish records for Warwick County, England, containing the Griswold information since 1465."

On September 20, 1985, Claude W. Manaton sent to DWP the parish records for Warwick County, England, containing the Griswold information since the year 1465. Thank you, Claude Manaton, for contributing this important European information to the archive of information that we have on the Griswolds.

These important records are in the holdings of the Secretary of the Reunion, and are available to anyone who would like to consult them.

7. Louise McKnight.

On November 2, 1985, Esther Griswold wrote to the Secretary of the Griswold Reunion and requested information on Louise McKnight. Esther Griswold wrote:

"I have been trying for years to find some information about my ancestor, Louise/a McKnight, wife of Horace Griswold. So far, I have been unable to find out anything about her. I have been able to get considerable information about the Crittendens--wife of our ancestor, John Griswold--but I still want to find something about Louise McKnight.

Louise McKnight Griswold died in 1866 and is buried in the Clinton Church Baptist Cemetery. Do you know how I might find some information about her? I had hoped that there might be an obituary in the Honesdale paper; but, if there is, I have not been able to get it...

If you know how I might get some information about Louise McKnight Griswold, I will appreciate the information. I have visited her grave but would like to find out something about her--parents, brothers and sisters, etc. From the Federal Census, I find that she was born in MA."

On January 27, 1986, on behalf of the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion, DWP wrote to Esther Griswold and thanked her for her donation to the 1985 collection, and stated: "We do not have any information on Louise McKnight, nor can we suggest where you might get some. If something should turn up, you can be sure that we will get that information to you."

On February 16, 1986, S. Robert Powell wrote to Esther Griswold and suggested that she fill out a "Research Coordination Registration" form from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, and file it with their Family Registry, Genealogy Department. SRP enclosed a partially-filled out form on Louise/a A. McKnight. In his letter, SRP stated, in part: "Perhaps if you file this form, you will be put in contact with someone else who is working on the McKnight family? I have filed some of these 'Research Coordination Registration' forms on various of my ancestors. Shortly after filing the forms, I received letters from researchers across the country who are working on the same ancestral lines. Very encouraging. It may work for you. I hope so."

8. Esther Forsberg's letter.

Together with her completed 1985 Griswold Reunion questionnaire and a generous donation to the 1985 collection, Esther Forsberg sent the following letter to DWP on August 14, 1985:

"Although I have never been able to attend one of the Griswold reunions, I do appreciate receiving the reports.

Harry and I attended our daughter Geraldine's graduation at New York University in June, which was enjoyable for all of us. She is now looking into Ph.D. programs on the East Coast and West Coast.

I would sure love to meet my relatives and hope to attend the reunion some time. Mother, Amanda Curtis Patey, and I visited her home place in 1938 and stayed with Aunt Harriet and Uncle Milo, and Edith. I never knew I had so many cousins.

If any one comes out West, we live about 100 miles North of Spokane on Lake Roosevelt. All are welcome.

Yours,

Esther Forsberg"

9. Gertrude Loomis Schaffer's letter.

Together with her completed 1985 Griswold Reunion questionnaire and a generous donation to the 1985 collection, Gertrude Loomis Schaffer sent the following letter to DWP on August 14, 1985:

"Cousin Donald:

It is doubtful if Henry and I and our daughter's family will be attending the Reunion because of the serious illness of my husband, Henry Schaffer. Since December, he has spent much time at Robert Packer Hospital at Sayre, Pa. It started as a slight stroke--carotid surgery, blood clot (embolism), renal (kidney) failure, amputation of six toes, bypass surgery--both legs--a total of eight trips to surgery, which included a chute for hemodialysis in case of emergency and one for continuous ambulatory peritoneal dialysis. An exchange of dextrose solution and medication in the belly. This all seems to overshadow the diabetes he has had for some time. Right now he is having much pain between his hip and knee. He is being cared for by daughter Carol, and I am going and coming between our farm and Tunkhannock and assisting her.

There is also a sad spot in our heart over the death of my brother. He had a kind heart.

I ordered picture of 1983 Reunion--one of the Reunion--2 of the Curtis family and 2 of the Curtis Cousins, which I paid for & Carol ordered and I think paid for one of the Reunion. Last year we weren't feeling that well and did not come.

I have pleasant memories of the Griswold Reunion of my youth. For many years it was almost all the Curtis Cousins who kept it going. I remember Mark Griswold--everyone was so excited when we heard: "Here comes Mark!" I named one of my sons James Mark, it was his sister Gertrude for whom my Dad named me. She died before I remember. Aunt Augusta Curtis had Gertrude for a middle name. Unfortunately the Clinton Griswolds had four generations of just one son: Fred, Vance, John, and his son Charles, who lives out West. It's a nice crowd. With you, I'm proud to look back.

I enclose postage, best wishes and many thanks for expressions of sympathy and get well cards and prayers.

Cousin,

Gertrude Loomis Schaffer"

XI. Report of the Corresponding Secretary/Historian..... S. Robert Powell

SRP reported that he had arranged for the publication of announcements of the Griswold Reunion in three area newspapers in August 1985:

--"Pioneer Day at Clinton Church," + photo by DWP of Alice Lund's painting of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, THE FOREST CITY NEWS, 08-08-1985, p. 8;

--"Clinton Center to mark anniversary," + photo by DWP of Alice Lund's painting of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, THE CARBONDALE NEWS, 08-14-1985, p. 10;

--"Clinton Twp. celebrations to be held," + photo by DWP of Alice Lund's painting of the Clinton Center Baptist Church, THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT, Saturday/Sunday, 08-17/18-85, p. 9A.

In addition to arranging for the publication of these notices of the 1985 Griswold Reunion, SRP sent announcements of the Reunion to all persons on the mailing list, and enclosed for each Griswold a "1985 Griswold Questionnaire."

In 1985, the following persons returned the questionnaires (with news about births, marriages and deaths) or wrote letters to the Secretary or Corresponding Secretary, and thereby helped to update and correct the official list of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden for 1985 (names are listed in no particular order): Mary Zollbrecht, Gertrude Snyder, Edith Gardner, S. Robert Powell, Donald W. Powell, Crystel Gummoe, Jane Kille, Elaine Quigley, Carroll and Virginia Curtis, Verla C. Arnold, Laura Rude, Leeta Geuther, Samuel M. Curtis, Margaret Rude, Douglas S. Blair, Claude W. Manaton, Fred Olver, Gerald and Marjorie Cook, Marjorie Norton Walker, Minna Blair, Louise C. McCue, Henry and Althea Neutts, Gertrude Schaffer, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stiles, Marge Treat, Clarissa Sheehan, Esther Forsberg, and Jeffrey Curtis.

Special thanks to Clarissa Sheehan and Verla C. Arnold for their extensive reports on births, deaths and marriages in the Griswold family: Clarissa Sheehan on the Electa and Henry Arnold line; Verla C. Arnold on the Cyril Arnold and C. Rexford Arnold lines.

Without the excellent reports from all these members of the Griswold family, it would not be possible for the Historian to compile the annual updated and corrected list of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden. Thank you, everyone.

Following the Reunion, the Historian (SRP) collated all of the information that had been received about births, deaths and marriages, &c., and prepared, on 02-08-1986, an "Official List of Descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden" for 1985. At the 1985 Reunion, ten persons requested copies of this 100+ page list and gave the Historian $5.00 for copying costs for the list, when compiled. On February 8, 1986, SRP produced ten copies of the list, and presented one copy to Edith A. Gardner and Gertrude G. Snyder, one copy to Donald W. Powell, one copy to SRP for his records. On February 12, 1986, copies of the complete list were mailed to the following seven persons, all of whom requested and paid for the list at the 1985 Reunion: Marjorie A. Nims, Verla C. Arnold, Gloria Johnston, Mrs. Francis Curtis III, Crystel Cook Gummoe, Carroll A. Curtis, Stephen J. Gravellec.

If you would like a copy of the "Official List of Descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden" for 1986, give the Historian $5.00 (for copying expenses) at the 1986 Reunion, and he will mail you a copy when it is available.

Research Coordination Registration. SRP reported that he had completed a "Research Coordination Registration" form, on April 2, 1984, on Theron Orsemus Loomis (1848-1911), and filed same with the Family Registry, Genealogical Department, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 50 East North Temple Street, Salt Lake City, UT 84150. In filing this form, the researcher (SRP in this instance) indicates a willingness to share research with other persons nationwide who are working on the same individual or family line. This is a good way to get help from others and to be helpful to others.

Microfiche. SRP reported that all of the Clinton Township information that is associated with the Griswold Reunion and the Pioneer Days is now on microfilm. This information is an integral component of the "Maternal Ancestors of Helen Loomis Russell" section of PREPARATORY NOTES FOR A WORK TO BE ENTITLED WALTER SILAS POWELL AND HELEN LOOMIS RUSSELL: THEIR ANCESTORS, THEIR DESCENDANTS, which was published on microfilm in 1985. At the Reunion, SRP showed a copy of the complete microfiche edition of this history: twelve 5" X 7" microfiche cards, with 270 microfiche images per card.

Gelatt Reunion. At the 1985 Reunion, SRP read the following newspaper account of the Gelatt Family Reunion that took place on August 27, 1892:

ANOTHER REUNION

The Members of the Gelatt Family Meet in Thompson

The third annual reunion of the Gelatt family was held in Keystone hall, Thompson, on Saturday, August 27. The relatives of the family began to assemble at an early hour, and at 12 m. about 200 Gelatts were anxiously awaiting to hear the dinner bell ring. The tables were loaded down with the substantials and delicacies of the season, to which all did ample justice. After dinner, Presiding Elder Sumner sang one of his grand songs, which was highly appreciated, followed by a prayer by the Rev. T. A. Stevens. Minutes of the last meeting were read, also greetings from Capt. Charles Gelatt, of Nordhoff, Cal., and also from Mrs. E. E. Gillis, of Sacramento, Cal. Next followed election of officers for the ensuing year; President E. R. Gelatt; Treasurer, Richard Gelatt; Secretary, C. R. Casterline. It was decided to hold the next reunion at the Bills place, in Gibson.

With music, songs and visiting, the day was pleasantly passed until 4 o'clock, when with a good warm handshake and good wishes they took their departure for their several homes feeling that it was the best reunion they ever attended. Among those present were Leon Lewis and sister Rena, from Great Barrington, Mass.; George Merrill and wife, from Carbondale; Dr. Frank Corson and family, from Waymart, Pa.; Leroy Tobey, wife and daughter, from Caton, N.Y.; Mr. Hathay and wife, Mr. Phillips and wife, and Mrs. Hulbert, from Otego, N.Y.; Y. D. Richmond and wife, from Carbondle, Pa.; the Rev. T. A. Stevens and family, from Kenka, N.Y.; George Gelatt and family, from Odessa, N.Y.

(The Carbondale Leader, 09-01-1892, p. 4)

At the Reunion, Crystel Cook Gummoe, Beulah Pazel and Leeta Geuther recalled the visits of some Gelatt cousins to the Griswold Reunions years ago. At the request of SRP (08-29-1985), Crystel Gummoe wrote down the following information about those visits:

Honesdale, Pa. R. 1
Sept. 2 - 1985

Dear Robert;

In reply to your letter about some cousins who years ago attended the reunion--I have talked to Beulah and Leeta and we spoke of the Mr. and Mrs. Phillips and others who we remembered when we were much younger. This surely dates us.

They apparently were relatives of Gelatts and Griswolds, so we searched the Northeastern Pennsylvania of Nov. 19 to see if we were correct--On page 14 it gives the name of Mrs. Phillips and her family members--also on several occasions it states that they were at the Griswold reunion--1908-10. I believe also a Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beaham--They were sisters of the Hulbert family--Margaret Griswold--Harry Hulbert--so I believe we were correct when we said how we remembered them coming from Owego or Oneonta. We were so impressed as they arrived via a car, a novelty then--no doors and lots of chrome. I remember how very proud & fussy they were of it.

Enjoyed the day at Clinton Center so much and think much of the success was due to the untiring work and interest of the Powells.

Sincerely,

Crystel C. Gummoe
(Mrs. Friend)

How are the Gelatts related to the Griswolds?

Sumner Griswold (08-20-1798--09-20-1864) married Clarissa Gelatte (10-30-1809--08-16-1881), and they were the parents of eight children:

1. Daniel (m., 1, Delia Sanders; m., 2, Euphemia)
2. Lewis (m. Susan Bennett)
3. Jennett (m. Willard Hathaway)
4. Electa Marie (m. Henry William Arnold)
5. Jesse
6. Oliver
7. Harriet (m. Harry Hulbert)
8. Angeline

Newspaper clipping found by Wyman Terrel. At the 1985 Griswold Reunion, SRP publicly thanked Wyman Terrel for presenting, in August 1984, to Alice Lund a newspaper account, dated 09-02-1915, of the unveiling, on August 27, 1915, of the 6-ton conglomerate monument "IN MEMORY OF THE EARLY SETTLERS OF THIS TOWNSHIP AND THE FOUNDERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CLINTON BAPTIST CHURCH." Until August 1984, only a fragment of this important article, entitled "Clintonians Monumented," was known to exist. See Volume II, Number 2 of NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, November 19, 1980, page 3, column 2, top. Thanks again, Wyman, for thinking of the Griswolds when you came across this important newspaper clipping.

David Watkins. One of the highlights of the 1985 Clinton Center Pioneer Day and Griswold Reunion was the special music that was provided for the morning church service and historical program by David R. Watkins. On 08-29-1985, SRP wrote the following thank you note, on behalf of the Griswolds, to David R. Watkins:

"Dear David,

Your wonderful gift of music and your enthusiastic witnessing for Jesus Christ will long be remembered by those of us who were privileged to be with you in the Clinton Center Baptist Church on August 25th. Thank you.

Sincerely,

S. Robert Powell"

In addition to this thank you note to David Watkins, the Corresponding Secretary sent out 15 thank you letters and 12 post cards of thanks, on 08-30-1985, to various Griswolds and friends of the Griswolds, all of whom helped to make the 1985 Griswold Reunion a great success.

Belva Utegg's promotion. Did you see Belva Utegg's photograph, and the story about her recent promotion, on page one of the January 25/26, 1986 issue of THE WAYNE INDEPENDENT? Belva has been promoted to the position of Assistant Cashier of the Wayne County Bank and Trust Company. Congratulations to Belva on her promotion. She and her husband and three children reside in Waymart.

Lace from the Loomis store. In the fall of 1982, SRP sent to Laura Loomis Rude a copy of Edna Loomis Loomis' monumental study of the Theron Orsemus Loomis family. On November 17, 1982, Laura Rude wrote the following letter of thanks to SRP:

"Dear Robert:

I want to thank you for the lovely book of the history of the Theron Loomis family. Edna had a smaller book on the Francis Earl Loomis family made up for me. I don't know if I showed it to you. While doing a little cleaning in the attic I came across some lace that was in the Hiram Loomis store. I am going to enclose a small piece of it. I am sorry I didn't get this letter to you before. Thank you again for the book.

Sincerely,

Laura Rude"

SRP will take this lovely family memento (the piece of lace from the Hiram Loomis store) to the 1986 Griswold Reunion, and anyone who would like to see it at that time may do so.

XIII. Date, place and format of the 1986 Clinton Center Pioneer Day and Griswold Reunion

Much discussion concerning the precise details of the celebrations next year ensued. The outcome was this:

Date: Fourth Saturday of August (the 23rd), 1986

Place: Clinton Center Baptist Church

XIV. Reports from the floor:

1. Mrs. Jane Shaffer Kille (330 12th Street, Honesdale, PA 18431) spoke of her son's (James Theodore Kille) sports record at Western Wayne High School. James excelled in track, field and wrestling. On 08-29-1985, SRP wrote and asked Mrs. Kille to write down the specifics of her son's record so that the details could be reported here. SRP's letter was returned, marked "Addressee Unknown," by the Post Office.

2. Margaret Rude gave an impromptu dramatic presentation, impersonating an historical figure, "Miss Brown."

PRODUCTION NOTES

The material presented in this issue (Volume I, Number 2, August 23, 1986) of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER was gathered and synthesized by Donald W. Powell and S. Robert Powell during the Fall and Winter of 1985-1986. Production (on an IBM Selectric typewriter) and lay out were performed by S. Robert Powell. Two hundred and fifty copies of this 10-page CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER were printed in March 1986 by PDQ Printing, Scranton, PA, and mailed from the Carbondale (PA) Post Office on March 21, 1986 to all persons on the mailing list of the Clinton Center Pioneer Day and Griswold Reunion.

INTRODUCTION

This is the third published issue of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER. It contains the following information:

Minutes of the 1986 Griswold Reunion (the 80th, 08-23-1986), pp. 1-7. By Donald W. Powell.

Minutes of the 1986 Clinton Center Pioneer Day (the 155th, 08-31-1986), p. 7.

Minutes of the 1987 Clinton Center Pioneer Day (the 156th, 08-16-1987), pp. 7-8.

Minutes of the 1987 Griswold Reunion (the 81st, 08-22-1987), pp. 8-12. By S. Robert Powell.

The CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER was not published in 1987. Rather, it was decided to report on the 1986 and 1987 Clinton Center Pioneer Days and the Griswold Reunions in the 1988 issue (this issue, Volume I, Number 3) of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER.

GRISWOLD REUNION 1986

The 80th Annual Reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden took place on Saturday, August 23, 1986, from 11:30 A.M. to 4:00 P.M., at the Clinton Center Baptist Church, Waymart, PA. It is generally agreed upon that the Clinton Center Baptist Church is an ideal place to hold the Griswold Reunion, and we, as Griswolds, are grateful to the Clinton Center Baptist Church for allowing us to meet there annually (formal permission to hold the 1986 Griswold Reunion at the CCBC was granted by the administration of the church on 07-13-1986). Immediately following the 1986 Reunion, the Treasurer, Donald W. Powell, sent a check for $50 to the Clinton Center Baptist Church as an expression of our appreciation for the use of the building for the Reunion.

The 1986 Griswold Reunion began with a welcome and registration period from 11:30 A.M. to noon, and descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden converged on the Clinton Center Baptist Church at that time. As everyone arrived, they signed the registration book and, in order to make it easier and quicker for everyone to know just who everyone else was, this year, for the first time, we all wore name tags identifying ourselves. Forty-seven persons signed the registration book. They are: Marvin D. Curtis, Donald W. Powell, Verla C. Arnold, Crystel C. Gummoe, Becky Geuther, Janet Geuther, Gloria Johnston, Mary Zollbrecht, Jane Shaffer, Ann Louise Curtis, Francis H. Curtis III, Dorothy Olver, Fred Olver, Minna Blair, Donna Hosterman, Edith Gardner, Gertrude Snyder, Dorothy W. Gardner, John R. Gardner, Betty Pratt, Dorrie Johnson, Michael Pratt, Mildred Wright LaBarre, Beatrice Bartholomay, Marjorie Gravalec, Steve Gravalec, Eunice Hauenstein, Verna C. Varcoe, Margaret R. Rude, Doris Mead, Mabel Patey Haven, John R. Rude, Amy Rude, Ken Pratt, David A. Curtis, Donna Curtis, ?Don Ryan, Sue Curtis, Henry Curtis, Jr., Jim K????, Alice O. Cox, Wendy M. Kille, Alfred Shaffer, Dianne Stiles, ?Delia ?Cornelia ?Cheverrico (Venezuela), S. Robert Powell, and Judith Ann Blair.

Donald W. Powell and John R. Rude took charge of grilling hot and sweet sausage, hamburgers and chicken hot dogs on barbecue grills (one gas fired and one conventional charcoal grill) provided by John and Amy Rude and by Margaret Rude.

At noon, the Griswolds took places at three of the long tables in the church basement, which was beautifully adorned with bouquets of garden and wild flowers on the tables and in the window wells. Among the flowers were cosmos (from Donald Powell's garden), dahlias (from Florence Robinson's garden), marigolds (from Robert Powell's garden), white hydrangeas, Queen Anne's lace, goldenrod, black-eyed Susans, clover, mint, bread and butter.

Two weeks before the Reunion, the "committee" (Elizabeth Jones, Florence Robinson, Donald W. Powell and S. Robert Powell) thoroughly cleaned the tables and chairs in the church basement and, on the day before the Reunion, washed plates, silverware, glassware, and laid out place settings for 50 people. On the day before the Reunion, thanks to the Clinton Center Baptist Church, the lawn surrounding the church was cut.

The fourth long table in the church basement was laden with a wide array of first class food, and after a blessing of the food was asked by Francis Curtis, the members of the family passed around the food table and served themselves. Iced tea and lemonade were served after everyone was re-seated. Freshly-brewed coffee was served at the conclusion of the meal.

At 2:00 P.M., after the dishes had all been washed and put away, under the direction of the table committee (Elizabeth Jones, Eleanor Rude, Ann Tyler), the annual business meeting was convened in the main sanctuary of the church. The meeting was under the direction of the President of the Griswold Reunion for 1986-1987, Francis Curtis III.

Francis Curtis III welcomed everyone and, quoting Edith Gardner, said: "I guess you know my face by now." A special welcome was extended to the delegation from Oregon of descendants of Amanda Irene Curtis (1871-1966) and the Reverend James Charles Patey: Mildred Patey Haven; her daughter, Betty L. Pratt; Betty's daughter, Dorrie; Betty's husband, Ken Pratt; and Ken Pratt's son, Michael. Everyone then introduced himself to the group, and in so doing mentioned the name of his parents or grandparents.

Donna Lee (Dolan) Hosterman, daughter of Bernice Curtis and James Dolan, and granddaughter of Francis H. Curtis and Letha Crossman, then sang some songs from the musical Quilters (by Molly Newman and Robert Danchak). Before she sang the first song, she told us about the musical so that we would have the background for the particular song that she was about to sing. The musical is made up of 16 scenes, called blocks, and each block has to do with a story that a mother is remembering as she is making a legacy quilt for her daughter. A legacy quilt is made up of 16 blocks, and Donna had two of them from the play with her and she showed them to the group. The particular scene that she sang the song from is a schoolhouse block and it was her memory of growing up and of a small schoolhouse and some of the things that happened in the mid-West. The musical is about the pioneers, their courage, the hardships they faced, and about how well they, because of their courage, dealt with those hardships. This particular one tells the story of a group of children who go down into the basement during a tornado and take their writing materials to write a story about where they were born. The character of the particular scene whose song and dialogue Donna presented is named Lilly.

Donna Hosterman is an accomplished actress/narrator and has a wonderfully clear, fresh voice, and everyone thoroughly enjoyed her presentation from Quilters.

Donna then led the group in singing. First she sang "Side by Side" and then the group joined in and sang it again. Then, without a run through by Donna, we all sang "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

Donald W. Powell, the Secretary/Treasurer of the Griswold Reunion for 1986-1987, then presented for approval the minutes of the 1985 Griswold Reunion. The minutes are presented in Volume I, Number 2 (August 23, 1986) of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY and GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER, pp. 6-10. The 1985 minutes were approved as presented.

The Corresponding Secretary/Historian, S. Robert Powell, then presented his annual report, as follows:

Annual Report
Corresponding Secretary/Historian
S. Robert Powell

1. LIST OF DESCENDANTS. Following the 1985 Reunion, SRP collated all of the information that had been received about births, deaths, marriages, &c., and prepared, on 02-08-1986, an "Official List of Descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden for 1985." At the 1985 Reunion, ten copies of this 100+ page list were requested by members of the family. The cost of each copy (to cover the cost of xeroxing) is $5.00. On February 8, 1986, SRP produced 10 copies of the list and presented one copy to Edith A. Gardner and Gertrude G. Snyder, one copy to Donald W. Powell, and one copy for the Reunion's records. On February 12, 1986, copies of the complete list were mailed to the following persons, all of whom requested and paid for the list at the 1985 Reunion: Marjorie A. Nims, Verla C. Arnold, Gloria Johnston, Mrs. Francis Curtis III, Crystel Cook Gummoe, Carroll A. Curtis, and Stephen J. Gravalet.

The Corresponding Secretary/Historian then asked all persons who would like a copy of the 1986 list, when completed, to give SRP $5.00 for copying expenses, and announced that copies would be mailed as soon as they were produced.

SRP then called for any additions/corrections to the Griswold Reunion's mailing list from the floor.

2. MINUTES OF THE 1985 REUNION AND PUBLICITY FOR 1986 REUNION. SRP reported that 216 copies of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER (Volume I, Number 2, August 23, 1986) were mailed from the Carbondale Post Office to all persons on the mailing list on April 2, 1986. The breakdown of the mailing is as follows: Carbondale, 20; mixed Pennsylvania, 130; out of state, 65; foreign, 1 (Norway).

Enclosed with the Newsletter was an invoice, dated March 21, 1986, requesting that each recipient contribute $2.00 to the treasury to cover the cost of production and mailing of the Newsletter. SRP pointed out that if the Treasurer did not receive payment from each recipient that it would not be possible to maintain the names on non-payers on the mailing list of the Clinton Center Pioneer Day and Griswold Reunion. On the same invoice, SRP also asked for suggestions as to material to be included in the Newsletter, as well as contributions of material for publication.

In addition, 181 copies of the flyer announcing the 1986 Griswold Reunion, as well as 181 copies of the "1986 Griswold Information Sheet" were mailed to family members. The breakdown on this mailing is as follows: Carbondale, 18; mixed Pennsylvania, 104; out of state, 59. These flyers and information sheets were mailed on July 22-23, 1986, from the Carbondale Post Office.

Announcements of the Reunion were, in addition, mailed, on 08-16-1986, by SRP to three area newspapers and published as follows: Carbondale News, 08-20-1986; Forest City News, 08-21-1986; The Wayne Independent, 08-21-1986. SRP pointed out that write-ups of two family reunions of interest to the Griswolds were published in the Reunion section of The Wayne Independent on the very day that the announcement of the 1986 Griswold Reunion was published in that newspaper: the Peck Reunion (descendants of Sylvanus Peck and Charlotte Hacker); and the Perham Reunion.

3. BIRTHS/DEATHS/MARRIAGES & C. The Corresponding Secretary/Historian reported that 24 members of the Reunion or families had filled out and returned the 1986 Griswold Reunion Information Sheet or otherwise furnished vital statistics for the official records of the Reunion. Those 24 persons or households (not listed here in any particular order) are as follows: Leeta Geuther, Beatrice Bartholomay, Nancy and Robert Bostwick, P. Clark Hungerford, Jr., Marjorie Norton Walker, Claude W. Manaton, Crystel Cook Gummoe, Henry G. Curtis, Jr., Richard and Belva Utegg, Clarissa Treat Sheehan, Shirley Forsberg Bammerlin, Mary Zollbrecht, Jane Shaffer, Chrystal A. Olver-Young, John Gardner, Betty Lou Pratt, Gloria Johnston, John and Amy Rude, Verla C. Arnold, Noreen A. Farrow, Clyde and Doris Mead, Gertrude Schaffer, and S. Robert Powell. Letters of thanks were sent by the Corresponding Secretary/Historian to all those persons for having taken the time to furnish the Reunion with the information that they did. SRP expressed his special thanks to Clarissa Treat Sheehan for her outstanding work in gathering and synthesizing the annual vital statistics from the Arnold branch of the Griswold family.

Using the information provided by those 24 persons or families, SRP then updated the Official List of the Descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden and produced, on December 5, 1986, seven copies of the 1986 descendant list for the six persons who requested and paid for the list at the 1986 Reunion: Ann Louise Curtis, Betty Pratt, John Rude (2 copies), Mabel Haven, Noreen A. Farrow, Terje Steinso. These copies, with the exception of the copy to Terje Steinso, were all mailed on December 6, 1986. The copy of the 1986 list for Terje Steinso (Friggsvei 6, 3100 Tonsberg, Norway) was (SRP discovered in typing up this report for this Newsletter) not mailed. The wrapped copy, ready for mailing, was discovered in a large box of Griswold papers following the 1987 Reunion. A copy of the 1987 list, therefore, will be mailed to Terje Steinso as soon as it is ready, and this regrettable mailing delay will be corrected.

4. CORRESPONDENCE/COMMUNICATIONS.

a. Esther Griswold. On November 2, 1985, Esther Griswold (229 East Sixth Street, Hutchinson, KS 67501) wrote to Donald W. Powell and requested information on Louise (or Louisa) McKnight, the wife of Horace Griswold. She was born in Massachusetts and died in 1866 and is buried in the Clinton Cemetery. On 01-27-1986, Donald Powell wrote to Esther Griswold and explained that we do not have any information on Louise/a McKnight, wife of Horace Griswold. In his letter, DWP asked Esther Griswold if she had any information on Rhoda Griswold (b. 1834, Wayne County, PA; m. Benjamin F. Smith) and Cornelia Griswold (b. 1838, Wayne County, PA, m. Virgil Gaylord). On 02-16-1986, SRP wrote to Esther Griswold and suggested that she file a "Research Coordination Registration" form with the Family Registry, Genealogical Department of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. In so doing, SRP suggested, Esther Griswold may be put in contact with someone else who is doing research on the McKnight family. On 02-28-1986, Esther Griswold wrote SRP and told him that she had checked with the Mormon Library in Hutchinson, KS, and found that a Mrs. Julia McKeown (Washington, DC, and Kuala Lumpur, USBR Department of State) is also working on the McKnight line. On 02-28-1986, Esther Griswold wrote to DWP and said that she had no information on Rhoda Griswold and Cornelia Griswold and suggested that Margaret Rude and Fred Olver might be able to provide some information on those two Griswolds. In that same letter, Esther Griswold enclosed (1) an obituary of Horace Milton Tingley (a native of Susquehanna County, PA, died at the age of 82 on May 20, 1939, Spokane, Washington) from the May 25, 1939 issue of The Spokane Spokesman, and (2) the following information about Emily Griswold: "Emily Griswold married Franklin Tingley, who died age 77; left widow, 2 sons (Homer M. Tingley and Eugene L. Tingley, both of Spokane) and two daughters (Eva Smith, Spokane, Washington; Mrs. S. B. Hayford, Lyons, Washington).

b. Esther Patey Forsberg. On 04-07-1986, Esther Patey Forsberg (Route 3, Box 451, Kettle Falls, WA 99141) wrote to SRP and asked if anyone knew the names of Reverend Henry Curtis' eleven brothers and sisters. In addition, she enclosed a letter, dated March 4, 1986, from Reverend Lyle E. Curtis (1404 Berlin Street, Waupaca, WI 54981), author of a book entitled "When Dreams Come True." Esther Forsberg wonders if Rev. Lyle E. Curtis is a relative of the Clinton Township Curtis family. Also enclosed in Esther Forsberg's letter was information on Mary Emma Oliver, Fannie Curtis Oliver, and Frank Oliver; a 4-page letter, dated August 26, 1904, from Amanda Patey's Aunt Julia to Amanda Patey; and a ten typewritten page "History in Brief of the Banning Family" by Julia A. C. Knapp, dated February 22, 1904. Copies of all of the above named genealogical materials from Esther Patey Forsberg were made by SRP and the originals were returned to Esther Patey Forsberg on 04-22-1986.

c. Griswold Family Association of America, Inc. The Clinton Township Griswold Reunion is a member of the Griswold Family Association of America, Inc., which publishes a quarterly Newsletter under the direction of Richard M. Griswold, Jr., Editor, 116 Garden Street, Wethersfield, CT 06109. The Clinton Township Griswold Reunion received, SRP reported, the Spring/Summer 1986 issue of the GFA Newsletter and the Summer 1986 issue, and all members of the family are invited to borrow and to read them. In the Summer 1986 issue, the national reunion of the Griswolds is announced for October 3-5, 1986, in the Buckland/Shelburne Falls/Griswoldville/Colrain area of Massachusetts. More information about this national reunion, as well as a reservation form, are enclosed in that newsletter.

d. Larry Downey. On April 27, 1986, Larry Downey mailed to the Corresponding Secretary/Historian a bit of paper which he found in going through some of his late wife's (née Josephine Corey) papers. On that paper the eight children of Horace Gilbert Squire and Amy Susan Woodmansee are listed: Adeline Loretta, Estella Leantine, Alicia Malvina, Willis Alvin, Moses Underwood, Mary Emma, Harriet Amanda, Hilon DeRoy.

e. Mabel Haven/Betty L. Pratt. On May 27, 1986, Mabel Haven (Box 215, Wasco, OR 97065) wrote SRP and reported the good news that her family was planning on attending the 1986 Griswold Reunion. On June 14, 1986, Betty L. Pratt (5510 Angle Drive, N.E., Salem, OR 97301), granddaughter of Amanda Curtis Patey, wrote SRP and reconfirmed that her mother, Mabel Patey Haven, her daughter, Dorrie, her husband, Ken Pratt, and her stepson, Michael Pratt, would attend the 1986 Griswold Reunion. They are with us today, and we are delighted to have them here.

f. Norvelle Curtis Kern. On July 8, 1986, Norvelle Curtis Kern (74 Plymouth Drive, Scarsdale, NY 10583) wrote the Griswold Reunion and congratulated the officers "for the splendid Newsletter" (Volume I, Number 2 of the Clinton Center Pioneer Day and Griswold Reunion Newsletter), and said that she hoped to be able to attend the 1986 Reunion. In her letter she stated: "I attended Pioneer Day celebrations quite regularly during the period you call the first period of annual celebrations. My father was very active then. I have fond memories of him standing up by the choir, cornet in hand, leading the music. He led the music and singing for church, reunion, special meetings, gatherings of all kinds. He also conducted a small orchestra at many of these meetings. Vance Griswold, with violin, was one of its members."

g. Together with a completed 1986 Griswold Reunion Information Sheet, P. Clark Hungerford, Jr. enclosed a copy of the obituary of his wife, Virginia Rude Hungerford, who died on June 1, 1986 (obituary published in the June 3, 1986 issue of the Cleveland Plain Dealer). This obituary is available for all to read. Following the Reunion, it will be placed on file in the official records of the Griswold Reunion.

h. Verna (Curtis) Varcoe presented the Historian with a copy of a newspaper article entitled, "Hay leaves Nfld for Maryland farmers" (The Wayne Independent, August 12, 1986, p. 3A). From this article we learn of the generosity of family member Francis Curtis III who donated 2,800 bales of hay for use by farmers in drought-stricken Maryland. Fourteen Maryland National Guardsmen and 20 neighbors assisted Francis Curtis in loading the six tractor trailers of hay for shipment to Salisbury, MD. We applaud the public spirit and generosity of Francis Curtis III.

i. Mrs. Marjorie Norton Walker (219 Lindale, Senatobia, MS 38668) enclosed with her completed 1986 Griswold Reunion Information Sheet the following letter, dated August 17, 1986:

Dear Griswold Uncles, Aunts, Cousins:

As usual, the notice of the family reunion brings back memories of relatives I've known or known of through the years.

The suggestion that we write of reunions we've attended reminded me that I have indeed attended one Griswold Reunion in my lifetime. During the summer of 1925, my mother, brothers, sister, and I spent some time with my grandparents, George and Jennie Curtis. As I remember it, the Reunion was held that year at the old Griswold-Curtis home, in Curtis Valley (Aunt Augusta Curtis' home). Memories of that day are somewhat sketchy (I was seven at the time), but I do remember the picture-taking session and my attempt to hold a little girl cousin who protested at my efforts to keep her in the picture.

That year, Uncle Will Curtis (my grandfather's brother), his wife and children from South Dakota were also in attendance and won the distinction of having traveled farther than any of the rest of us to be there.

School opens in Senatobia and Tate County today. All five of our grandchildren will be in attendance this year, scattered from kindergarten through fourth and fifth grades to the two older ones who will be in the ninth and tenth grades.

The two older boys are both making a valiant attempt to make the football squad at the local high school. Alan, the third boy, enjoys football, too, but is still too young to play at school. He played summer baseball this summer and was selected for the All-Star team. Suzie, a fourth grader this year, has spent the last two summers perfecting her tennis game and swimming to cool off between bouts of tennis. Kathy, our baby grandchild, has kept busy attending nursery school and "Kiddie Kollege" from which she was graduated last spring. Some weeks ago, her mother took her (Kathy) shopping for typical school equipment—backpack, pencils, colors, tablet, thermos, lunch box, etc.

It will probably come as no shock to any of you that our section of the country has had a hot, dry summer. We in Mississippi have been luckier than people in South Carolina, Georgia, and parts of North Carolina. Yesterday was a beautiful day here—it rained until almost noon, a rare happening in recent months.

My best wishes to all of you and may you have a great time at the Reunion. Wish I were there.

Sincerely yours,
Marjorie N. Walker

j. At the 1985 Griswold Reunion, SRP reported (1) that in the fall of 1982 he presented Laura A. (Loomis) Rude with a xerographic copy of Edna Pearl (Loomis) Loomis's genealogy of the Theron Orsemus Loomis family, and (2) that in her letter, dated November 17, 1982, of thanks to SRP for the book, Laura Rude enclosed a piece of lace from a roll of lace that was in the Hiram Pease Loomis store in Clinton Township. SRP did not have the piece of lace with him at the Reunion in 1985 but said that he would bring it with him in 1986. At the 1986 Reunion, SRP showed the lovely piece of lace to the family members.

k. During the Summer of 1986 visit of Pearl (the fourth of the seven daughters of William Van Tassel Curtis and Marie Peterson) and Ernest Brudos (Lake City, SD) to Clinton Township, a gathering of cousins was held at the Ridge Farm home of Margaret Rude. At that time, Verna Curtis Varcoe had Ernest Brudos take a photograph of the six cousins who were assembled. In that photograph are Pearl Brudos, Gertrude Snyder, Beatrice Bartholomay, Verna Varcoe, Margaret Rude and Edith Gardner. Verna Varcoe allowed SRP to borrow the negative of that photograph and have a 5" X 7" enlargement made. That photograph was passed around for all to see.

l. The name "Griswold" is frequently mis-spelled in the United States these days. In announcing the 56th annual reunion of the Henry and Electa (Griswold) Arnold family, July 27, 1986, The Wayne Independent (July 12-13, 1986, p. 5A, "REUNIONS. Griswald.") not only erroneously spelled the family name but also neglected to give Henry Arnold's last name in announcing the Arnold Reunion. The errors may have been made in reporting the information to the paper or they may have been made by the paper. Whatever the case, The Wayne Independent announced: "The 56th annual reunion of the Henry and Electa Griswald family will be held Sunday, July 27..."

m. This morning, August 23, 1986, Mrs. Gerald Stiles telephoned the Corresponding Secretary from Canton, PA, to say that her husband, Gerald, would not be able to attend the Reunion, but that she might be in attendance.

*****

Following the report of the Corresponding Secretary/Historian, Francis Curtis then polled the Reunion to draw up the annual list of family superlatives.

Youngest: Michael Pratt, age 14

Oldest: Edith A. Gardner. "I am 89. Verna will be 89 in September."

Farthest Distance Traveled: Oregon and Venezuela.

Most from a Single Household: the Alfred Shaffer family.

Most Reunions Attended, and When: Verna Varcoe: "I attended the first one, and I haven't missed too many since."

THE FLOOR IS YOURS; Speak Up!

At the recommendation of Donald W. Powell, this moment in the program has become an annual feature of the Griswold Reunion's Annual Business Meeting. At the 1986 Griswold Reunion, four persons "spoke up."

1. Betty Pratt presented to the Reunion a xerox copy of pages 365-366 of the NORWICH VITAL RECORDS. On these two pages, detailed information is given about Samuel Griswold and Mary Abell, both of Norwich, who were married together on the 15th day of February 1759. Their issue: Elizabeth (b. 11-02-1759), Samuel (b. 08-05-1761), Elijah (b. 09-05-1763), Anna (b. 04-13-1766), Tryphena (b. 05-04-1768), Mary (b. 08-28-1770), John (b. 02-10-1773), Caleb (b. 07-02-1775), and James (b. 04-14-1778).

In addition, Betty Pratt gave the Reunion a sheet of information about a member of the Minkler family (a son of Barnabas and Rexalena Minkler) who married Lucinda Samson (b. 06-21-1787), the daughter of Anna Griswold (b. 04-13-1766 in Norwich, CT; d. 06-10-1838 in Grand Isle, VT), and Daniel Samson (b. 09-13-1765 in Norwich, CT).

The precise connection between these Griswolds reported on by Betty Pratt and the Clinton Township Griswolds has not yet been determined, but it is believed that a careful examination of family records will reveal the link.

2. Jane Shaffer showed the Griswold Reunion a copy of THE VISION GLORIOUS, a centennial report of the New York Conference of the Free Methodist Church, September 2-6, 1874, Brooklyn, NY, September 26-28, 1974, Beach Lake, PA. Therein, Loren Stiles, Jr. is mentioned several times:

a. "By that time (1861) B. T. Roberts and his close friend, Loren Stiles Jr., had become outstanding young evangelical preachers, both figuring very strongly in the organizing of the Free Methodist Church...At about the same time Loren Stiles was invited to visit White Haven, at which time he organized a society." (p. 7).

b. NEW YORK CONFERENCE HISTORICAL TIME LINE.... 1861 White Haven Society organized by Loren Stiles, Jr. (p. 8).

c. "It was a group of concerned laymen in White Haven, Pa., who invited Loren Stiles, Jr. to come for special meetings and then to organize a society there." (p. 11).

3. S. Robert Powell read, at the request of Verna Curtis Varcoe, a poem that was written by VCV in 1951 entitled "Glancing into the Past." A copy of this poem was included in VCV's letter of 04-24-1986 to SRP. The text of that letter is as follows:

"Dear Cousin:

Enclosed is the poem, "Glancing into the Past," which I wrote for the 120th anniversary of the C.C. B. Church. Edenvale is pronounced as the E in the Garden of Eden. This place was located below Aldenville, where the Prompton Dam is now.

There was a one room school house there; a short distance below Eugene Curtis', where my mother taught school. She also taught at Curtis Valley and got Seven Dollars a month and boarded around. The Dollar was worth something then!

The reunion being on Sat., I wonder if Alice, or whoever is planning the 155th anniversary of the church, will have it on the following day, or some other Sun.

Hope I am able to attend as I am looking forward to both occasions.

The forsythia looks pretty with white snow on the ground. Quite a snow storm yesterday.

One of your cousins,
Verna C. Varcoe."

Here is the text of VCV's poem, which was given at the Clinton Center Baptist Church on November 23, 1951 by VCV, and by SRP on 08-23-1986:

GLANCING INTO THE PAST
written by Verna Curtis Varcoe

Let's gaze into the past and ponder over many a year,

To think of the time when our forefathers settled here.

Before 1800 this section was a vast wilderness;
Wild animals roamed the forest and knew of no progress.

The years went by and from Connecticut the settlers came;

Blazing a trail thru the forest and living on game.

With unwavering faith, they traveled a better land to seek.

The journey, by ox-cart with worldly goods, took many a week.

Arriving here it was no easy task to clear the land.

Strong men were they, with a mind to work and a willing hand;

With a purpose of a home to make, and children to rear,

And a strong desire for a church to worship here.

There was food to get, and the ground made ready to farm,

So they met in homes to pray, with Sunday School in a barn.

Altho this was a lowly place, the worship was sincere;

For was not the Saviour born in such a place as here?

These pioneers had hard times, but a hope secure,

With determination for a church that would endure.

Building it would take quite a time, so before it was done;

'Twas organized the Central Baptist in 1831.

In time they had a church building and a place to meet

For worship and prayer meetings, with a covenant to keep.

The membership was not large, but the country would grow!

This was a great place to live in, with good neighbors to know.

It was not always smooth going; for a cyclone one day

Came in 1851, and blew the building away.

The foundation only remained, when the wind was still.

Parts were found all around, while some reached Edenvale.

Did they give up? Not the men and women of that day!

In a few years it was rebuilt, and stands here to-day.

Ministers filled with Spiritual Life answered the call,

Who helped to enrich the church and the lives of all.

There were deacons, trustees, officers and members too,

Who have helped to make it stronger, steadfast and true.

Evangelistic meetings were held to bring in a few,

At such a meeting, P. P. Bliss was touched anew.

He was so inspired, that he wrote a song that night,

"Almost Persuaded," that has turned many to the right.

The results of this song can not be counted by man,

For its influence has spread over many a land.

Clinton Center Baptist church is very well known,

For from its influence other churches have grown.

Missionaries and Ministers have gone from here;

While others remained and helped the church they hold dear.

If these old walls could talk, they would tell us many things;

Some sad; many serious; while others happiness brings.

They would tell of laughing children and babies so sweet!

Of young people growing up, and how they chanced to meet.

Several might recall the old hall, with door at each end,

With women going in the south one, and the north by men.

There were a number thought this separation should not be,

So then as couples went in the north one for a remedy.

Across from the church a cemetery can be seen

A monument erected to our pioneers in '15.

Outside were sheds for horses, when families came to meeting.

Driving up to the large stone step, there was the usual greeting.

There were buggies, buck-boards and also three seaters too.

In winter - cutters, bob-sleighs and some others quite new.

Now the sheds are gone, and spruce trees make a lovely view;

For the invention of the auto is now nothing new.

In '31 the church was remodeled, as you see.

This modern look was due to the L. A. Society.

Generations have come and generations have gone.

There have been revivals, with many a glorious song.

As we look back over the years, we realize

What our forefathers handed down thru out their lives,

And think of this church standing firm these many years;

That it still has the same message for our listening ears.

Time moves on, and many changes here have taken place,

But the church does not change in its Saving Grace;

For as long as the world stands, there will always be

A need for a church with workers in the community.

Written by Verna (Curtis) Varcoe."

4. S. Robert Powell read three poems that were written by the Reverend G. Fay Crossman of Pleasant Mount, PA. The first poem, "That Old Kitchen Stove," was written by Rev. Crossman on 10-20-1982, and published in Volume I of WORDS OF LOVE (p. 19). That poem was followed by a reading of "Those Days of Old," and "No More Days of Old," both of which were written on 11-02-1984 and published in Volume II of Rev. Crossman's WORDS OF LOVE (pp. 67, 68).

Rev. G. Fay and Mildred (Blewett) Crossman are long-time friends of the Griswold family and have attended many reunions of the Griswold family but were not able to be at the 1986 Reunion.

5. Gertrude Gardner Snyder spoke up and said: "I remember coming over to visit Grandma Curtis and coming here to Church in a two-seated horse-drawn vehicle. I thought that that was grand.

Uncle Frank's. I used to come over here and pick berries at Uncle Frank's and make some money. I'd also come over when he was boiling maple sap, and when it was thick enough, we'd pour it over the snow and eat that, and that was good.

Years ago, sleigh riding. We'd go up to Terrell's and ride down on a bobsled, clear down to Curtis Corners, and that was fun.

And the watering trough. We used to go up there to get water."

Verla Arnold then asked: "Is there really a spring there? I went up there last year when our water was not good in Honesdale and got water, but I found no spring. The water runs on top of the ground that runs in there."

John Rude: "There's a spring up there."

6. Edith Gardner spoke up and said: "Well, since I have the reputation of having a tongue that runs for 24 hours, I want to tell a little story of why Mabel and her family are here. When Gertrude was born, the Summer after she was born, my mother and her sister Lizzie, of course her name was Eliza, and Eliza's daughter, Bernice, who was a couple of years older than I, my mother and her three youngsters went to Pike County because they wanted to visit Mabel's mother and father, and when we were there they wouldn't let us out doors because they were afraid that some of the wild animals would come and catch us, so we stuck pretty close to the house and we enjoyed the Summer there, and I was old enough to enjoy something good to eat--as I did today--and Uncle James said: 'Well, today we have chicken,' and, of course, at that time our minister was supposed to have a very special dish, chicken, so we had chicken. And I like chicken. I like it today and Uncle James wanted to know if I should want something more to eat. 'Yes, more shicken.' Well, in nineteen, let's say, forty, I guess it was, we went West on a train, and when we got off the train, Mable's father, Uncle James, met us, and he said: 'Oh, we're going to have something for dinner that you like.' 'What is it?' Thirty five years later, and I said 'What're we going to have?' 'We're going to have shicken,' and we had chicken. 'Remember.' So that's reminiscence."

7. Verna C. Varcoe spoke up and said: "Well, I think we ought to tell about Aunt Amanda starting the church down in Blooming Grove. She was the one that started the Baptist Church there. Of course, that was in Pike County. I don't know whether she was married then or not, but she was a minister and also her husband was a minister."

Mable Patey Haven then added: "She (Amanda) was married at Grandpa and Grandma's, and somebody stole the cake."

Francis Curtis III: "Did they ever find the cake?"

Mable Patey Haven: "No. They didn't have a cake."

Francis Curtis III: "It wasn't one of those wild animals that took the cake, was it?"

8. Minna Olver Blair spoke up and said: "When we were young, my three brothers and I, we used to come to the farm, grandfather's farm, and spend the summer, and the boys worked in the hay field and helped and my earliest job was picking potato bugs for 5 cents a hundred. It wasn't the very best job, but it was work."

Verla Arnold then added: "My mother-in-law started that with her grandchildren, but she thought it was going to break her, so she decided to have 'em sprayed."

9. Margaret R. Rude spoke up and said: "I was brought up in Brooklyn, NY, and in the summer time I spent the Summer at my Grandma's in Aldenville, at the Gaylord's, and in the Summer I did all sorts of things, and I loved to climb trees, and I'd get up in a tree and sometimes I couldn't get down, and I was there, I could get up all right but I couldn't get down again. And I remember one day when I climbed up this tree out in the front yard--no, it was in the orchard--and I just had a grand time, and I got up there and I couldn't get down and my uncle saw me and he walked around and he did all these crazy things and he wouldn't come and help me get down, and I didn't like it at all, and finally I got down myself. I did get down. I got up."

10. Mable Patey Haven spoke up and said: "I might say that I spent, I think, almost a year with Aunt Lizzie. Aunt Lizzie was the oldest in the Curtis family--of Henry Curtis and his wife--and they built a beautiful, lovely home. As a child, I don't remember too much but I remember Uncle Alex always lived there and he put out boxes around where I could play house and I picked off this small one and that was my hair."

11. Gertrude Gardner Snyder spoke up and said: "I'd like to say something for our President. One night I was listening to TV--Channel 16, I guess it was--and I heard Francis Curtis had given hay to go to South Carolina and I thought: 'Francis Curtis, well he must be related to me.' And he's the one who had this hay sent south and I think we should congratulate you." (See also, p. 3, number 4(h), herein).

Francis Curtis III then asked the question: When and where shall we hold the Griswold Reunion next year? After some discussion, it was moved (Alfred Shaffer) and seconded that the 1987 Griswold Reunion be held at the Clinton Center Baptist Church on Saturday, August 22, 1987, starting at 11:30 A.M. (Formal approval by the CCBC was granted on 08-02-1987.)

The 1986 Annual Business Meeting of the Griswold Reunion was then adjourned.

Following adjournment, the family gathered on the steps in front of the Church for a group photograph by Donald W. Powell.

1987 GRISWOLD REUNION

The 81st Annual Reunion of the descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden took place at the Clinton Center Baptist Church on Saturday, August 22, 1987. The following persons signed the register: Helen Powell, Walter Powell, Francis Curtis, Crystel C. Gummoe, Amy Rude, John Rude, Verla C. Arnold, Norman S. Lund, LaVange Arnold, Fay Sosenko, Edith Gardner, Ann Tyler, Dorothy L. Olver, S. Robert Powell, Mildred Wright LaBarre, Eleanor Rude, Alice Lund, Fred Olver, Gertrude Snyder, Clarence E. Loomis, Ruth Loomis, Doris Mead, Helen Giles, Beatrice Bartholomay, Norvelle Curtis Kern, Wendy Kille, Gloria Johnston, Jane Shaffer, Alfred Shaffer, Mary Zollbrecht, Faith Curtis, Mary Curtis, Myrtle Curtis, Doris Howell.

Francis Curtis III, the President of the Griswold Reunion, welcomed the group and asked everyone to sign the guest register. Everyone then introduced himself to the group.

The minutes of the 1986 Griswold Reunion were presented by S. Robert Powell for Donald W. Powell, who was not able to be present at the Reunion. Donald Powell's carefully taken minutes for 1986 were presented, in handwritten form, and approved as presented.

The Corresponding Secretary/Historian, S. Robert Powell, then presented his report as follows:

1. DESCENDANT LIST. Following the 1986 Reunion, SRP incorporated all births, deaths, marriages and other genealogical information into the official list of descendants of John and Elizabeth Griswold. On 12-05-1986, he produced six copies of the complete list and mailed them, on 12-06-1986, to the persons who ordered and paid for them at the 1986 Reunion: Ann Louise Curtis, Betty Pratt, John Rude (2 copies), Mabel Haven, Noreen A. Farrow. A copy of the list for Terje Steinsto was ordered and produced but not mailed. The completely revised and updated 1987 descendant list will be mailed in its stead following the 1987 Reunion.

The following persons ordered the 1987 list at the 1987 Reunion: Verla C. Arnold, Helen Giles, Clarence E. Loomis, LaVange Arnold. Three persons requested only the list of additions/subtractions/corrections for this year. Those three persons are: John Rude, Gloria Johnston, Jane Shaffer.

2. ANNOUNCEMENTS OF THE 1987 REUNION. SRP reported that he had mailed out 203 sets of the two-page announcement/information sheet to family members and friends. In addition to announcing the 1987 Griswold Reunion, the announcement sheet announced the Clinton Center Pioneer Day on August 16, 1987. As usual, the Griswold Reunion Information Sheet was included in the announcement. These 203 announcements were delivered to the Carbondale Post Office on August 4, 1987. The breakdown on the mailing is as follows: Carbondale, 16; mixed Pennsylvania, 118; out of state, 68; foreign (Norway), 1 (mailed air mail, first class, on 08-05-1987, for $.44).

3. QUESTIONNAIRES RECEIVED, CORRESPONDENCE, ANNOUNCEMENTS, &C.

a. The following persons, listed in no particular order, completed the 1987 Griswold Reunion Information Sheet and/or furnished the Corresponding Secretary/Historian with genealogical information to be incorporated in the 1987 Official List of Descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden: Jane Shaffer Kille, Eleanor Rude, Clarissa T. Sheehan, LaVange Arnold, Leeta Geuther, Clarence E. Loomis, Minna Blair, Marjorie Norton Walker, Claude Manaton, Janice Winters, Crystel Gummoe, Donald W. Powell, Mary Zollbrecht, Dorothy Olver, Verla Arnold, Francis Curtis III, John Rude, Alice Lund, and S. Robert Powell. Special thanks were extended to Clarissa Treat Sheehan, the Historian of the Henry and Clarissa (Gelatt) Arnold Reunion, by S. Robert Powell for her list of genealogical data from the Arnold Reunion. All of the data reported by these individuals will be incorporated into the 1987 master list and placed on file. Copies of the complete list will be mailed to those persons who ordered and paid for it at the 1987 Reunion (see #1, paragraph 2, of SRP's report, above).

SRP brought to the attention of the Griswold Reunion that two couples, both of which were present, had celebrated their 50th wedding anniversaries in the course of the past year: Dorothy and Fred Olver (January 20) and Helen and Walter S. Powell (April 10). Both couples then stood and were given a warm round of applause by the Griswold Reunion.

b. SRP reported that he had received the following Newsletters and correspondence from The Griswold Family Association of America, Inc.: Winter 1986-1987; Spring 1987, Bulletin No. 83; letter, dated March 4, 1987, asking for a commitment to attend the 1987 Annual Meeting and Reunion on October 2-4, 1987; letter, dated June 15, 1987, in which the national Griswold Reunion is announced for October 2-4, 1987, in Litchfield, CT, and the surrounding area (several information and commitment letters were included in this communication and were made available to family members).

The Winter 1986-1987 GFA Newsletter contains the October 4, 1986 Genealogists' Report, in which an oblique reference is made to the Clinton Township Griswolds. That reference is as follows: "We also have the descendants of John Griswold who went to northeastern Pennsylvania. However, we found another of his sons in New York State whose line is not included in their records. Few descendants in this group now bear the Griswold name so we are unable to include them in the later volumes (of Griswold Family of England and America)."

SRP: "I strongly object to the Griswold Family Association's decision not to include in the published volumes of Griswold Family of England and America the descendants of women who were born Griswolds. All descendants of George Griswold of Kenilworth, England, regardless of whether they descend from a male or female Griswold line, should be included in the published volumes of the family history. Apparently we will have to wait until a more enlightened philosophy prevails at the GFA before the descendants of women who were born Griswolds will be included in the future published volumes of Griswold Family of England and America. For the time being, we will content ourselves, knowing that the GFA has received from me and has placed on file two copies of the official list of descendants of John Griswold and Elizabeth Crittenden of Clinton Township: one copy was sent on 03-26-1982 to Charles D. and Edna W. Townsend, and one copy was sent on 04-10-1985 to Robert and Esther French."

For additional discussion of this matter, see Volume I, Number 1 (August 25, 1985, p. 3) of the CLINTON CENTER PIONEER DAY AND GRISWOLD REUNION NEWSLETTER.

c. On April 16, 1987, Leona Curtis Vaughn wrote to SRP and reported that she had just read the Clinton Center Pioneer Day and Griswold Reunion Newsletter for 1985 and found it "very interesting." In her letter, Leona reported that she had had three nice trips abroad in recent years: 1984, Panama Canal Cruise; 1985, China and Hong Kong; 1986, New Zealand and Australia. On the New Zealand and Australia trip, Leona took her daughter, Vivian Milliken, with her. "I was glad to get the newsletter. It's great that you take time to do this for I know it's work. Greetings to all my friends. Best wishes to you all. (Signed) Leona Vaughn."

d. SRP reported that two long-time friends of the Griswold family, Mildred and Fay Crossman, celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary with a reception in the Aldenville Baptist Church on September 21, 1986. Mildred and Fay Crossman were married on November 9, 1921. The program of the reception contains the following text:

"We thank each friend and loved one
For your presence here.
You each hold precious memories
Of days of yesteryears.
We continue to praise the Lord and Thank Him for His daily blessings.
Now when this day has ended
And each has gone his way,
The memories you leave with us
Will forever with us stay.

Love, Mildred and Fay Crossman."

e. At the 1986 Griswold Reunion, SRP borrowed THE VISION GLORIOUS, a centennial report of the New York Conference of the Free Methodist Church, September 2-6, 1874, Brooklyn, NY, September 26-28, 1974, Beach Lake, PA (see p. 5, column 1, herein). SRP copied the references therein to Loren Stiles, Jr., and returned the book to Jane Shaffer on 10-07-1987.

Also, at the 1986 Griswold Reunion, Betty Pratt lent SRP pages 365-366 of the NORWICH VITAL RECORDS; also a sheet of information about a member of the Minkler family who married Lucinda Samson, the daughter of Anna Griswold (1766-1838) and Daniel Samson (see p. 5, herein). Betty Pratt's originals were returned to her on 10-06-1987 by SRP.

4. GRISWOLD PRIDE. "It is important that we, the Clinton Township Griswolds, know about and recognize other Griswolds and Griswold connections beyond the limits of Clinton Township. Virtually all Griswolds in America, after all, descend from the same group of English Griswolds who were established at Solihull, Warwickshire, England, prior to 1400." Saying which, SRP and other members of the Reunion made the following observations:

a. SRP noted that on October 10, 1886, Griswold Lorillard, at the Autumn Ball at Pierre Lorillard IV's hunting resort, Tuxedo Park, appeared in a "shocking" scarlet waistcoat and a dresscoat with no tails, and, therefore, was the first person to wear and to bring into the public eye the garment that we now know as the tuxedo. SRP showed the group a 22-page "Special Advertising Section" on the tuxedo ("The Tuxedo One Hundred Years of Elegance") that was published in The New Yorker in 1986, the centennial year of the tuxedo. SRP also showed the group a full page ad, entitled "Griswold did it," that was placed in The New York Times Magazine, Part 2, September 7, 1986 ("Men's Fashions of the Times") by After Six Formals. In that ad, a brief history of the tuxedo is given.

b. SRP showed the group an article, entitled "Florence Griswold, Old Lyme, and the Impressionists," that was published in the January 1982 issue (Volume 12, Number 10) of Smithsonian. In this article by John J. Tarrant, the author details the importance of Florence Griswold and her mansion in Old Lyme as a center for advanced American art during the early years of the twentieth century.

c. SRP also showed the group a 5" X 7" black and white photograph of a signboard near the entrance to the Mulberry Street bridge in Scranton that he took on July 31, 1987 at 3:00 P.M. The signboard reads: "We're Here Bee - gin your day with JACK GRISWOLD 6 - 10 a.m. WWAX AM 750 WAX-RADIO." The connection between Jack Griswold and the Clinton Township Griswolds has not yet been determined.

d. SRP showed the group two articles from Audubon magazine about George Bird Grinnell, the founding editor of Audubon magazine, sportsman, scientist, publisher, companion of Custer and Teddy Roosevelt, friend of the Cheyenne Indians and pioneer American conservationist. These two articles are: "Milestones" by Les Line; "A Man Called Bird" by John G. Mitchell. SRP then pointed out that Mary Emma Squire (1854-1948, m. Theron Orsemus Loomis, 1848-1911), an enthusiastic Griswold from Clinton Township, was a direct descendant of the Grinnells (and through the Grinnells, a direct descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins): Mary Emma (Squire) Loomis' paternal grandmother was Beulah Grinnell (1788-1861), who married Horace Gilbert Squire (1788/9-1857). Beulah Grinnell traced her line of descent to Daniel Grinnell (1668-1740), who married Lydia Pabodie (1667-1748). The maternal grandparents of Lydia Pabodie were John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, who came to this country aboard the Mayflower in 1621. The Grinnell family was one of the important early families of Clinton Township and the family name is listed on the conglomerate stone at the entrance to the Clinton Center Cemetery. The precise relationship between George Bird Grinnell and the Clinton Township Grinnells has not yet been determined, although it is very likely that there is a direct family link.

e. In the article "Clinton had a high school" that was published in The Wayne Independent Centennial Edition, February 4, 1978, p. C43, the name of "our" John Griswold (m. Elizabeth Crittenden) is mentioned. "The following year (1813), Capt. Wm. Bayley came and bought 117 acres of Levi Norton. In the fall, John Griswold, Sr., and some of his family put up a log cabin near Rufus Grinnell's, moving in in January." This article, which, in effect, is a history of Clinton Township, was read by Donald W. Powell and Gertrude Gardner Snyder at the 1987 Clinton Center Pioneer Day on Sunday, August 16, 1987, as part of the historical program that was presented in the Clinton Center Baptist Church, beginning at 1:15 P.M. on that day.

f. Amy Rude (Mrs. John Rude) pointed out that she is descended from one Griswold line and that she married into another when she married John Rude. Amy owns an extensive genealogy of her Griswold line and will allow the Clinton Township Griswold Reunion to borrow that genealogy and to make a copy of same for our Reunion's records. At this point, the exact connection between Amy's Griswold line and John Rude's Griswold line has not yet been determined.

g. SRP reported that there is a Griswold Law Library at Yale University, New Haven, CT.

h. Mary Zollbrecht (?) reported that there is a Hallmark card store, known as Griswold's Store, in the Oakdale Mall in Johnson City, NY. She also reported that there is a Griswold Street in Binghamton, NY.

i. Clarence Loomis reported that there is a Griswold, CT, and that there is a Fort Griswold in Grotton, CT. For information of Fort Griswold, see the Spring-Summer 1986 issue of the GFA Newsletter, pp. 9-12. Fort Griswold was built in 1775-1776 and was named after Deputy Governor Matthew G. Griswold of Lyme, later Governor of Connecticut (1784-1786). During the Revolutionary War, Benedict Arnold and the British fleet assaulted and captured Fort Griswold on September 6, 1781. The commander of Fort Griswold at the time was Colonel William Ledyard.

j. Eleanor Rude reported that her grandmother, Mary Paynter Loomis (Mrs. Francis Earl Loomis) was one member of the committee that selected the silver for the Clinton Center Church and had it engraved "CCC"—Clinton Center Church.

k. Norvelle Kern reported that there are Griswolds buried in Saint Paul's Cemetery, Westchester County, NY.

5. SRP read a poem, untitled, which begins with the following line: "A valley of quiet and peace." This poem was among a large collection of documents and papers about Clinton Township and its citizens that Lois Curtis allowed SRP and DWP to borrow and photocopy. That poem, which is signed "W.H.H.," is as follows:

A valley of quiet and peace
Smiles back at Moosic Range
Where Griswold's Gap its rough sides pierce
With lines that never change.

A road climbs to the mountain top
Past virgin woods, now rare,
And skirts the brink of a ravine
That ends abruptly there.

A rock by Nature hollowed out Serves as a watering place -
A gift that Kind Dame Curtis made
To cheer the equine race.

Once mighty forests clad these hills
Thick laurel hid the ground,
Where wild beasts lurked in ambush dark
Out on their prey to bound.

High on the peak a hunter lived
Who braved the fierce wolf's den.
His daring deeds are handed down
By true historic pen.

The cruel wolf prowled through the woods,
The bear and panther too,
And killed the settlers' precious sheep.
Sad loss to country new -

When wool meant clothes and mutton food
In those scant early days,
With grim starvation ever near,
Privation pinched all ways.

It happened that a lamb thus chased
Jumped in its frantic fright
Into the arms of my own aunt
One dark and stormy night.

The dreamy valley seems at rest,
And sounds are mellowed here,
The wind blows gently, skies are soft,
And sweet content draws near.

At mountain's base a stream pours forth
From rocky deeps below,
And wanders through the valley's length
With strong unfailing flow.

A limpid pool at one place formed
Oft for immersion used,
And zero weather mattered not
To converts so enthused.

A rake broke up the forming ice
While they were plunged beneath,
Unhurried rites and quivering song
Went on with chattering teeth.

They walked unto a distant house
To change their frozen clothes,
While earnest hymns of joy and praise
From lips of friends arose.

And here an old time hostelry,
The Water Tavern, stood.
My grandsire's cabin one mile north,
And all between thick wood.

I knew this place from early youth,
And played about the farm,
The brook, the penstock, and the house,
Each had a special charm.

My old school teacher here had made
A happy home through life -
Her mate, a nature's nobleman
Devoted to his wife.

These genial souls who made this home
Were friends and helpers too,
They lived, they loved, devoutly worked
And died as Christians true.

Long years of conflict, pain and loss
In other scenes forgot,
Have not effaced but stronger made
My love for this dear spot.

W.H.H."

At the conclusion of SRP's reading, members of the family offered hypotheses as to the identity of the author, "W.H.H." Alice Lund: "The Hauenstein family lived about a mile from the Curtis Homestead." John Rude: "One of the Hauenstein women was a teacher of my father's at the Curtis Valley School." It was then suggested that the author of the poem might be Will Hauenstein.

Alice Lund also added: "It was my father, George Curtis, who had the watering trough put in. Russell Wildenstein protected it."

6. SRP showed the Reunion a copy of the article "Evelyn Bennett feels her one room school helped students learn from each other" which was published in the February 25, 1987 issue of The Carbondale News. The one-room school in question is the one that used to stand near the Clinton Center Baptist Church, the Farno School, in which Mrs. Bennett taught from 1919 to 1924. Beatrice Barthomomay taught in the Farno School for 15 years.

SRP then showed the group a second article from The Carbondale News on schools, entitled "Schoolhouses combined fun, education," which was published in the April 1, 1987 issue (p. 14) of that paper. This second article is an interview by Matt Reavy of Freida Drobnicki of Waymart, who graduated from the 8th grade at the Farno School. Mrs. Drobnicki's teacher was Dorothy Curtis Hornbeck.

7. SRP next showed the Reunion the "Can you identify this MYSTERY FARM? Mystery Farm #17" from page 4 of The Carbondale News of March 4, 1987. The photograph in question is an aerial photograph of the Clinton Center Cemetery and the Clinton Center Baptist Church. Readers of the News able to identify the "Mystery Farm" were asked to phone or write the paper. The owner of the "farm" to receive a free color photograph of his farm by calling the newspaper. In the March 11, 1987 (p. 18) issue of the paper, the names of 13 persons who contacted the paper and correctly identified the Clinton Center Cemetery and the Clinton Center Baptist Church photograph were published. Those 13 persons are: Florence Robinson, William Ogden, Francis Hoefling, Vlad Koropchak, Victoria Booth, Georgianne Reed, Walter Powell, Timothy Boots, Freida Drobnicki, Clara Montone, Gail Fox, Sam Fox, and M. Williams.
